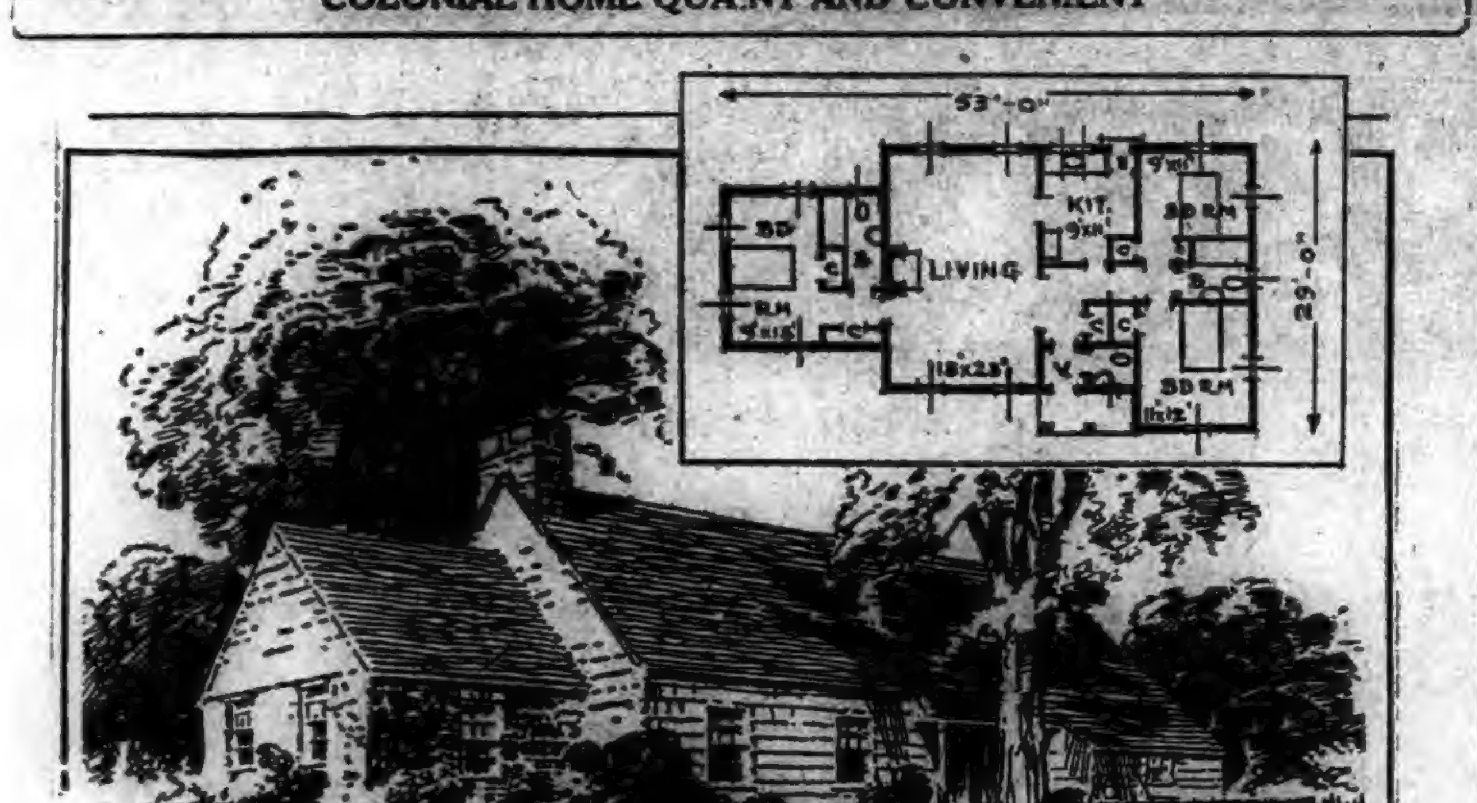
COLONIAL HOME QUAINT AND CONVENIENT



If this quaint Colonial home seems to fit its surroundings, the reason may be that local stone, clapboards and shingles are used in its construction.

One suspects that the dining table is to be placed in the end of the spacious living room.

Walls of the larger part of the house are of white shingles. On the wing rough, split-faced local stone is used, laid with white mortar and wide joints.

Above the stone work of the wing the gable is finished with horizontal white clapboarding. The roof is shingle in burnt siennas, grays and sepias, while the chimney is of local stone.

Exterior trim and other exposed woodwork are painted white.

Off the small entrance vestibule there is a lavatory, and in the hall a convenient coat closet. A large arch throws this hall into the living-dining room with its central fireplace.

In the wing is a guest room, with a bathroom and two closets. By reducing some of the closet and bathroom space a larger master's bedroom could be provided.

Two other bedrooms with a connecting bath complete the sleeping quarters. A lean-to entrance porch and the projecting front bedroom break up the roof line pleasingly.

The owner can decide whether to face the house broadside to the street on a lot 75 feet by 125 feet or the long way on one 50 by 125 to 150. While not demanded, the entrance should face north if possible.

Cost range for this house is estimated at from $7,000 to $9,000, according to local prices for material and labor.

DORMERS HELP MAKE OLD ATTIC LIVABLE

If you want to convert your attic into livable space but it seems too dark and not quite roomy enough, a couple of dormers may solve the problem for you. When properly built not only will they provide more light, air and space, but they will also give a fresh note to the roof line of your house. The expense of building a couple of dormers is not great and the extra space obtained by making the attic habitable will soon repay the cost. Lining the attic with insulation board will keep it cool in summer and warm in winter and reduce fuel bills. Your lumber dealer will refer you to a reliable contractor who can give you an estimate on the work. Sometimes it is wise to consult an architect, preferably the one who designed your home.

PROSPERITY IS HELPED BY BUILDING DEVELOPER

One small tax charge on an unimproved tract of land, or many contented residents paying taxes on individual holdings of improved property—which is the better for a town?

The building developer is the man who brings about the change and adds not only directly to the sightliness, comfort and prosperity of his city by his development work, but also indirectly by increasing the taxable value of the property in the community and thus furnishing more money for public improvements.

New Linen Closets.

Even styles in closets change. Always an item of first importance in the eyes of the thoughtful housewife, closets are now being designed for specific purposes. For example, there is today a variety of efficiently planned linen cabinets. These modern cabinets, with their neatly arranged drawers and shelves utilize every foot of space. Many of them are designed to be dustproof. If the design of your house permits, the bathroom is an ideal place to install a linen closet.

GARAGE SHOULD BE IN KEEPING WITH HOUSE

Is your garage attractively painted or has its appearance been neglected? Is the interior a pleasant, convenient place in which one can take the car part of a Sunday morning, or do you classify your garage with the attic and the cellar as an untidy storage space for adds and ends that should be thrown away? The garage does not need to be dirty and untidy. Once cleaned and repainted on orderly, harmonious lines the incentive to keep it that way will be worth the effort.

Since it must stand as much weathering as the house, the garage should be painted with as many coats of good paint. Choosing a body color and trim which is the same as that used on the house is the conventional way of treating the garage. This is, of course, an infallible rule when the garage is attached to the house. If the garage forms a wing of the house, or is built, in the case of a hillside site, in the cellar space available through the installationof an oil heater and the elimination of the coal bin, it is doubly essential that it be kept in well-painted order. For the detached garage, a treatment that is a little out of the ordinary borrows the roof color of the main house for the body of the garage and repeats the house trim.

While fussy ornamentation has no place on the garage exterior, decorated doors are in good taste and add interest to otherwise bare spaces. If stencilled decorations do not accord with the style of the house, you can relieve the blank area of a solidly painted garage door by outlining the edges or the panels in a second color.

The interior of the garage is just as important as the exterior from the standpoint of well-painted neatness. It should be kept free from rags, oil, scattered tools and all the old things which seem inevitably,trwni things from the house which seem inevitably to land there. Painting the interior walls and floor not only protects them but helps to introduce a spirit of ordliness. As the garage frequently has insuffcient natural light, painting the walls a sunny yellow provides an excellent substitute. A good quality of et concrete paint also will prevent a cement floor from cracking and powdering away and will keep the inevitable oil stains from discoloring the surface. A tool closet, built in one corner, will assist in keeping the garage neat. This cupboard may serve a double purpose, housing the garden implements as well as automobile equipment.

BASEMENT ROOM CAN BE MADE USEFUL

Modernization has brought basement rooms into more general use than they have ever before enjoyed. Living space is provided in this part of the home as well as housing for laundry equipment, heating apparatus, storage and workbench.

To be most useful these rooms must be properly wired for electricity for the purposes of illumination and the use of electrically operated appliances.

Descending to the ideally wired basement we find a tumbler switch near the top landing of the stairs which lights a little red warning lamp and at the same time throws on a light in the center of the main cellar room. There are lamps—in porcelain sockets—in the laundry, heater room, vegetable cellar and coal bin as well as in the basement recreation or game room.

In the laundry, waist high, is a twin convenience outlet for the washing and ironing machine and an electric iron. There is another outlet in the main cellar for the use of such appliances as electric soldering iron, glue pots and little motors. There is also an outlet in the heater rom for an extension trouble light or per aps an electric fan.

A bell-ringing transformer high up on the wall operates the door bell from the lighting current at almost no cost, and does away with the trouble and expense of door bell batteries.

Close by the meter box is a safety switch that shuts off the current when repairs or changes are being made in the electrical service. Nearby is a safety distribution panel which automatically discontinues the supply of electricity at any point where too great a demand is being made. These simple safeguards afford entire protection to the well wired home.

HOMES ARE ENDANGERED BY WINTER WEATHER

December, ushering in real winter weather, calls for definite precautions in the small home located in the colder parts of the country.

Outdoor fixtures exposed to the weather should be either insulated or the water shut off from them to prevent freezing and bursting pipes.

The detached garage, too, might stand more protection. In some cases pipes from the house heating boiler are connected with the garage to provide heat. If this is impossible, windows and doorway can be weatherproofed with perhaps a portable heater installed to be turned on occasionally, removing the extreme chill.

There is still time to equip the main house with weatherstripping to keep out the cold, prevent the escape of war mair indoors and, as a consequence, reduce the season's coal bill. The most satisfactory type of weatherstripping for the home, it is said, is of metal, designed to be left in place all year 'round. This type is constructed with grooves to fit perfectly the sides of the doors and windows and is held in place by small nails.

HEATING EQUIPMENT AT LOW PRICE LEVEL

Radiators and boilers are 15 per cent below 1929 prices. Steamfitters who install radiator heating equipment are 20 per cent more efficient than they have been at any time since the war. Many improvements in the construction and appearance of boilers and radiators have been made in recent years.

There are three reasons cited by the Plumbing and Heating Industries Bureau why this is an opportune time to build or to modernize a home, business building or apartment by the installation of radiator heating. Radiator heating prices are now at the level where the owner of the smallest cottage can afford the comforts and convenience of this method of heating, according to the bureau.

Thousands of houses now being heated with stoves could profitably be modernized by the installation of radiator heating. With the upward swing in commodity prices which is sure to come, owners would realize handsomely on their investment.

Money buys more in radiator heating today than ever before. The modern radiator with its graceful, slender tubes has the beauty of fine architecture. The steel and cast iron boiler which is being made today is not only more efficient than its predecessor, but with its colorful insulated jacket, is as handsome as a custom-made automobile.

FIREPLACE SHINGLES PROVE DEPENDABILITY

At one time it was generally agreed that no type of roofing quite so well suitel Colonial period houses as brown weathered wood shingles with thick butts. And yet, with this material the fire hazard increased with the age of the singles due to lichens which formed and in dry weather became a fenace from flying sparks from wood burning fireplaces.

I- an effort to supply the demand for thsi type of shingles, a fire-safe mixture was perfected for the manufacture of smooth surfaced tapered shingles. These singles made of an asbestos and Portland cement composition are one-eighth of an inch thick at the top and one-half of an inch at the butt and are available in width varying from 6 to 18 by 20 inches long. The home builder's selection can be made from the various tones of brown, red, black, buff, green and stone gray.

GLASS DRAWER KNOBS OBTAINABLE IN COLORS

Glass drawer pulls and knobs in any of nine colors—crystal, green, amber, turquoise, blue, black, old rose, opal and orchid—give a very charming appearance to any chest of drawers or cabinet, lending life and color to the room in which they are used.

Having glass knobs of matching hues on the door of the room completes the color ensemble. Their use on kitchen cupboard doors also sets off the modern kitchen exceptionally well. Being of glass they will neither tarnish nor show signs of wear. The colors are as permanent as the glass itself.

These handles are easily installed.

Insulated Houses.

That the general public now considers building insulation against heat and cold a standard requirement for the well-constructed home is shown by a recent nationwide survey. Nine out of every ten of the thousands of home owners questioned expressed a preference for insulated homes, and eight of every ten declared themselves willing to add $25 a room to construction costs in return for the benefits of insulation.

Comfort in winter, ease of heating because insulation retards the escape of furnace or steam heat through walls and roof, and large savings in fuel are the principal reasons why home owners w-nt insulation, but the fact that insulation also makes houses cooler and more comfortable in summer is also an important consideration in the minds of many householders.

Colored Driveways.

By coloring the cement of which the driveway is made, using reds, grays and perhaps other restful colors that harmonize with the green of grass and the color of the house, this utility is made more attractive. Coloring need not add greatly to the cost of the driveway for with permanent, mineral pigments a little coloring material goes a long way.

Accidents are the greatest of all fatal hazards to children of school age in Illinois.

NEW LONDON WOMAN PRESENT WHEN GOV-ELECT LUNCHES AT STATE FARM

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Dec. 21—Governor-elect Wilbur Cross came from New Haven Saturday for a visit of inspection to the Connecticut State Farm for Women, at Bride Lake, Niantic and was the guest at luncheon of Superintendent Elizabeth Munger. Members of the board of directors present included the treasurer, John H. Goss, of Waterbury, the secretary, Mrs. Ellen Condon Kelley, of New London, Messrs. Bennett and Hall. The governor-elect expressed himself as well satisfied with conditions as he found them at the farm, so admirably managed under the supervision of the board and the efficient direction of Miss Munger.

DR. AND MRS. GANEY IN AUTO ACCIDENT EARLY SUNDAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Dec. 21—A big Packard automobile, owned and driven by K. I. Howell, 50 Vanderbilt avenue, New York, and in which were Mrs. Howell and Eugene S. Karp, New York and Dr. and Mrs. Joseph M. Ganey, 205 Williams street, was wrecked and three of the five passengers were injured, when the car crashed against a tree, at the corner of Williams and Huntington streets early today. Howell sustained knee and back injuries. Dr. Ganey suffered a slight leg injury and Karp received a laceration of the leg and a fractured ankle. Karp is a patient at Lawrence-Memorial hospital. The occupants of the automobile were returning to New London from a social function and at 2:45 o'clock. When Howell endeavored to guide the car from Williams to Huntington street, he evidently misjudged the turn because of his unfamiliarity with the highway. As a result the auto, while traveling at a fast rate of speed, hit the tree, throwing some of the occupants violently against the side of the machine. Patrolman John Clifford was nearby and finding that Karp was seriously injured, the officer reported the crash at police headquarters. Automobile Patrol Officer Thomas Cavanaugh upon his arrival at the wrecked auto, found Karp stretched out on the rear seat. An ambulance was summoned and Karp, accompanied by Dr. Ganey, was taken to the hospital, where he will be a patient indefinitely. Dr. Ganey and Howell are receiving medical treatment at the residence of the physician.

ANDREW CHAFKOWSKY FISHED OUT OF HARBOR

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Dec. 21—Andrew Chafkowsky, a laborer, residing at 171 North Bank street, had a close call from drowning in the Thames river last midnight for he fell overboard while drunk He is now a prisoner at police headquarters charged with intoxication and will be in court Monday.

Chafkowsky wandered to the union station in his travels and then went across the tracks to the Fishers Island Navigation company's pier. He was observed staggering toward the pier by New Haven railroad employes, who kept an eye on the man. Chafkowsky no sooner reached the pier than he walked close to a stringer where he lurched and fell into the water. The railroad employes gave an alarm and there happened to be a number of rescuers at hand. William Wells, Walter Serach and Special Agent Harold Swanson were the first to reach the pier and a rope being thrown to Chafkowsky, the floundering man seized it. The whistle of a yard engine was blown long and continuously, attracting the attention of Patrolman Harold Goldberg, who was on duty at the corner of State and Bank streets. The officer hastened to the pier and arrived there about the time that Wells, Serach and Swanson pulled Chafkowsky to the dock. The last named was taken to police headquarters where his clothing was removed and the man was wrapped in blankets for the night. Today Chafkowsky suffered no ill effects from his experience.

TAFTVILLE DRIVER FREED IN FORD SUSPECT CASE

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Dec. 21.—The New Haven police tonight requested the police throughout the state, particularly New London, to maintain a close watch for the driver of an automobile wanted by the police of Branford on a charge of evasion of responsibility and who may be wanted within the next 24 hours on a charge of manslaughter. The hit-and-run driver's auto struck a pedestrian who is expected to die. The Branford police were unable to provide more than a meager description of the car, other than that it was a Ford, probably a coupe, and that the only part of the markers obtained were "N—37." Automobiles carrying the "L" and "N" markers are registered in New London county. On the state-wide request being made to keep a watch for the car, the police of Stratford held a Ford sedan, which carried markers N—3754. It was being driven by Alfred Linderson, of North street, Taftville. An investigation determined that the driver was not the man sought and he was released. It was said that the auto was painted black and as William Manice, 30 Chicago avenue, Groton, is the owner of a black Ford coupe, the registration of which is N—3780, the state police made a check-up of this car and ascertained that at that time the car was in the yard of the owner and had not been out of the town during the day. The pedestrian, believed to be fatally injured, was walking in the highway and when hit by the auto was hurled to the ground. The driver speeded away. Witnesses of the accident, other than determining that the auto was a Ford, obtained only the fact that the car was of the "N" series and that the numerals were "37."

Automobile Patrol Officer Thomas Cavanaugh last night discovered the entrance of the store of C. A. Smith, 403 Williams street, unlocked, and secured the business place for the balance of the night.

G. Laurens Atwill, 43 West street, principal of New London Business college, this evening made complaint to the police because of a practice, believed to be by youths which has caused the complainant much annoyance. Mr. Atwill said that while he was eating his dinner one of the windows of his home was broken by being hit, presumably by a shot from an air rifle, of a small stone. He also said that the same thing had happened twice before and recently. Automobile Patrol Officer George Cockell investigated the complaint.

At a meeting of St. Mary's Holy Name society plans for the annual celebration of its patronal feast in January were discussed. It was decided to observe the feast on the second Sunday of January as in previous years. The day will be commemorated by inviting the men of the parish to receive holy communion in a body at the 8 o'clock mass. This is always the principal exercise in the celebration and in past years as many as 1,400 men received holy communion on the feast. It was suggested that the communion breakfast be omitted from the program this year.

CAUGHT WITH WINE WHICH MIGHT BE FOR CHRISTMAS

Luigo Mergistie, P. O. Box 69, Groton, was arrested today by Patrolman Dennis Murphy, charged with violation of the liquor law, the specific charge levied being illegal possession. When arrested Mergistie was carrying five quarts of wine. He was locked up in default of a surety on his bond of $1000 and will be in the police court tomorrow. Officer Murphy was on John street about 7 o'clock this morning when he observed Margistie emerge from the rear of an automobile, apparently having alighted from it. Margistie carried a bag and suspecting that it contained liquor, more especially because the bag appeared weighty. Murphy followed Margistie to Potter street and overtaking the Grotonite, demanded to be informed as to the nature of the contents of the bag. Margistie claimed that the only contents was his overalls and that he was on his way to his work. Murphy doubted the ruth of Margistie's declaration and arrested the man. When the bag was searched at police headquarters it was revealed that its contents were bottles of wine. A test of one of the bottles showed that the alcoholic content was but 30 per cent. It is believed that Margistie had made the wine and was carrying it to the home of an acquaintance, that it might be used in the celebrating of Christmas.

The final preparations for the presentation of the Nativity play by the pupils of St. Mary's school have been made.

Mrs. Tyler Marshall of Abbington, Pa., arrived Saturday to spend the holidays with her mother, Mrs. A. C. Tyler.

The annual Forefathers' day luncheon of the Society of Mayflower Descendants was held yesterday at the Mohican hotel with 50 in attendance. Capt. Robert L. Smith of this city presided at the luncheon. The group was greeted by Gov. Edmund Humphrey of Hartford. Rev. T. M. Shipherd of Norwich gave an interesting address on Pilgrims of 1930. Mrs. E. P. Calvert of Groton sang a pleasing group of songs.

Charged With Theft

Albert J. Richard, 33, a carpenter, residing at 7 Connecticut avenue and with police court record, was arrested late Saturday night charged with theft and in default of a surety on his bond of $100, was locked up. He will be presented in the police court Monday. Richard had been drinking and about 11 o'clock went to the gasoline filling station conducted by Joseph Serigno on Bank street and created a disturbance. When Richard refused to leave the premises, Serigno went to Bank street, where he requested Patrolman Henry Sylvia to compel the former to depart, or to arrest him. Richard opened a cash register and stole $8. When Serigno and the officer entered the station and the money was discovered missing, Richard was arrested. The money was found on his person.

John J. Ryan, Lenox street, was arrested by Patrolman Braxton Hill Saturday night charged with parking on Pearl street, which street is restricted to parking at all times of the day and night. Ryan posted a bond of $2 for his appearance in the police court Monday.

John Maher, of Fishers Island, employed as a laborer, fell on Golden street Saturday night while intoxicated and sustained an ugly laceration of the cheek, which required three stitches to close the wound at Lawrence-Memorial hospital. He was released from custody this morning when he obtained a surety on his bond of $25. He will be in court Monday.

Purse Stolen

Mrs. Jennie Barclay, residing at the Hotel Mohican, reported to the police late Saturday night that she went to the Y. M. C. A. during the evening and had her purse with her. She left the pocketbook, which contained $3, where she believed it would be safe, but when she started to return to the hotel, she discovered that a thief had found and stolen the purse and money.

The league of Coast Guard Women sponsored a Christmas dinner for the officers and men in the service, together with their families, at the academy this afternoon.

SHERMAN HOME ROBBED OF ABOUT $40 IN BILLS

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Dec. 21—Saturday night the residence of Mrs. C. M. N. Sherman, 278 Williams street, was entered and $40 was stolen. Several articles of jewelry were on dressers in sleeping rooms and were not disturbed. It is the opinion of the police that the crook was forced to make his escape by the return of members of the household before he had opportunity to gather the trinkets and store them on his person.

The family left the house about 6:30 and between that hour and 9:30 the theft was committed. The thief went to the rear of the residence where he attempted to force two windows by means of a blunt instrument, probably a screw driver. Being unsuccessful the thief then smashed one of the windows close to the lock, so that his hand could be thrust through the opening, the window unlocked and entrance to the house was then easy. Going to the upper floor the thief quickly found the plunder and securing the money, which was of bills of the denomination of $5 and $10, a ring and flashlight, he undoubtedly was preparing to gather up the jewelry when Mrs. Sherman and her daughter returned. The thief had planned his escape in just such an emergency, for he had raised a window in the bathroom and had removed the screen. When the women were heard to enter the house, the crook climbed through the window and dropped about 12 feet to the ground and made his escape. A short time later when the women went to the second floor they discovered the robbery and at once communicated with police headquarters. Detective Sergeant John Cavanaugh went to the house and made an investigation.

Stole Girl's Purse

The little daughter of Mr. and Mrs James McKenna, 112 Riverview avenue, Saturday afternoon while shopping for Christmas, went to one of the State street stores and while inspecting merchandise on a counter, her purse which contained about $6, was stolen, a thief removing it from her coat pocket.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theatre

"Hell's Island," a fast-action, colorful drama of the famous French Foreign Legion, opened at the Broadway theatre yesterday for a four days' run with the popular Jack Holt and Ralph Graves in the leading roles. From the very first scene of the French Foreign Legion plodding its weary way across the sands of the Sahara to the breath-taking climax, the picture spells entertainment in capital letters. All the elements have been skillfully interwoven and what, at first, would seem to be a comedy almost verging on farce develops into one of the most powerful dramatic stories seen on the screen in a long time. Aided by a motley crew of daredevils of all nationalities, Holt and Graves pursue their merry course until they both run into trouble over the same girl—Marie, the hardboiled star of Dupont's Cafe in the military base at Bel Abbas. Matters then take a more serious turn, and the former "buddies" become deadly foes. During a marvelously well-staged battle between the French and Arabs, Mac, portrayed by Jack Holt, is shot in the back by a Riff sniper. He thinks that Griff, characterized by Ralph Graves, has double-crossed him because of their animosity over Marie. He does not know that Griff has actually saved his life. Because of his refusal to leave his unconscious pal on the battle field and go ahead in battle, Griff receives a ten year penalty on the prison colony of Hell's Island. Still unaware of Griff's sacrifice, Mac swears to kill Graves with the same bullet that had laid him low. How Marie shrewdly manipulates matters is developed in a series of absorbingly dramatic situations rising to a climax of powerful intensity.

Jack Holt and Ralph Graves in their roles of the American Legionnaires equal and perhaps excel their former successes, "Submarine" and "Flight." Their hilarious razzing of each other provides humor in abundance, and their more dramatic moments are gripping by their sincerity. Dorothy Sebastian has the feminine honors to herself and deserves well merited commendation for a remarkably intelligent performance. Others in the cast are Lionel Belmore and Richard Cramer.

Dorothy Sebastian, who plays the featured feminine role in "Hell's Island," the dramatic production now showing at the Broadway theatre, was born in Birmingham, Alabama.

Being of an artistic nature, Miss Sebastian's first connection with business was creating beautiful hand-painted parchment shades. She also possesses considerable musical ability and a good singing voice. These latter accomplishments later resulted in finding her a spot in the famous George White's "Scandals." After one year on Broadway, Miss Sebastian was brought to Hollywood by Henry King, famous director. Her first picture was "Sackcloth and Ashes." "Our Dancing Daughters" and "The Single Standard" are outstanding vehicles.

Palace Theatre

Greater than the silent version of the wonderful picture is all that is said of "Tol'able David" and more need not be said. This fine picture is playing today and tomorrow at the Palace. This film of Southern Mountaineers is most sensational, a superb story enacted by a cast of brilliant players.

"Tol'able David," the all-talking film adapted from Joseph Hergesheimer's celebrated novel is a vivid and unforgettable screen drama.

This is a story of West Virginia mountaineers. The eldest son of the Kinemon family is maimed for life by a group of worthless ruffians. The head of the family succumbs to heart failure just as he is about to avenge his son and there is left only "tol'able David," the adolescent son of the house of Kinemon, to pay the family's debt of honor.

The story is further involved by the fact that David is in love with Esther, a relative of the family that has caused so much tragedy in his family. Furthermore, his mother will not allow him to go "gunning" for his enemies because she is afraid they will kill him. But finally David triumphs — he comes into glorious manhood and wins the girl he loves. Richard Cromwell, the screen's latest sensation; Joan Peers, Noah Berry are among those who take part in this great feature. Starting Wednesday for three days another of those famous Palace double bills, The Storm, featuring Lupe Velez, and A Devil with Women with Victor MacLaglen.

WALL SAFE INSURES SAFETY OF VALUABLES

Protection against both theft and fire is afforded the family valuables by the installation of a wall safe. Such a safe may be fastened into position through the inside so that after the bolts have been secured to joists or other solid supports it cannot be removed from the outside.

More than 27,000,000 brooms were produced in the United States last year.

MARKED CONTRAST BETWEEN MRS. LONGWORTH–MRS. GARNER

(Special to The Bulletin)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21—No more marked contrast exists between any two women in the official set than between Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth, wife of the speaker of the house, republican, and Mrs. John Garner, wife of the democratic floor leader of the house, and who will automatically step right into Longworth's leadership shoes, if the 72nd congress has a democratic majority. And it hangs by a thread. Only one thing is certain, and that is that either Mrs. Longworth or Mrs. Garner will hold the highest official social rank of any woman in the house of congress, which numbers 435 members.

Mrs. Longworth, as befits the wife of a wealthy, much traveled city-bred man, and as the daughter of the late President Roosevelt, has mingled, yes, has actually led Washington social life from the time she was a young girl in her teens, living at the white house and cutting up capers that were retold in all parts of the world. For "the president's daughter" was, and is, a chip of the old block. She is a born leader, never a follower.

Mrs. Longworth has a charm all her own. She is witty, clever, and her political tactics run along other than routine lines. Her Sunday night suppers, up at the great mansion that is the Longworth winter home at the capital, are famous. There are small card parties, to which the political great are bidden, and for which they rush as do commuters for the 8 a. m. train to town. Political wayfarers, one or two at a time, are included, just to point out the carefully prepared path which they may travel, instead of drifting down the wrong stream. Mrs. Longworth doesn't stump or shout for political or social success. She can just keep going "as is" for she knows the game, holds the cards and comes from a family of winners.

When Mrs. Longworth smiles into your eyes, and says she is glad to see you, you are quite apt to think she is one of the most delightful women you ever met—and you may be pretty certain she "is glad to see you," for otherwise she wouldn't say so. Mrs. Longworth doesn't hedge, as those who have felt the keen but unsparing wit of her clever comments, far from flattering, could testify. But such sallies are never aimed at those whom she regards as friends. Mrs. Longworth rings true every time.

And now what about Mrs. Garner, her possible successor as wife of a speaker of the house. Well, she, too, is the wife of a political leader and a man of large means. But it comes from a Texas ranch not from bonds. The Garners are home folks in type; they live on a big sheep ranch, or near it, down in Texas; John Garner or Mrs. Garner do not dip deep to strike social circles. Mrs. Garner likes far better to be a sort of upper secretary in the office of her husband. So Mrs. Garner is up and about every morning by 7 o'clock, or earlier, and runs out to some nearby restaurant for a bit of breakfast. Long before the folks of the Longworth set have even blinked an eyelid towards the morning sun, Mrs. Garner is in her husband's office at the capitol, pegging away at her typewriter, looking over the morning mail, or digging into the files, so to answer letters from constituents. Of course she doesn't need to do it, but she likes it, and John Garner thinks no one else could ever fill the bill as she does. You see the Garners are quite as independent in following their own preference, as are the Longworths, only the lines take widely divergent paths.

Mr. and Mrs. Garner like cards, of an evening, but they are far different from the games up at the Longworths, and are played with a far different type of folk. With the Garners when the game ends along about 10:30, John Garner gets up from the table and says, "Well, good night, it's time to go to bed." The Longworth games don't begin much before that hour, and are followed by delightful suppers and the evening topped off with fun, frolic and wit.

Mrs. Garner likes to knit and sew, but it would take a pretty keen imagination to picture Mrs. Longworth quietly rocking back and forth knitting a quilt.

But they have this in common: Both are charming women in their distinctive way, both staunch to their friends. The Longworths and the Garners are fast friends, and it's a safe guess that no political defeat or victory for the speakership will change that friendliness one jot or one tittle.

Connecticut Social Notes

There has been scarcely any Connecticut society events the past week, only one or two of the women of the congressional delegation being in town.

Mrs. Walcott and Mrs. Bingham are here, Mrs. Bingham having just returned from a several weeks' visit to her mother in Florida. Mrs. Bingham got back in time to be a hostess at a large reception given at the Congressional club a few days ago. Mrs. Walcott has not taken much part in the social events of the season, thus far, except entertaining at dinner or accepting a few dinner invitations. In fact the social season here, except in administration circles will not be in full swing until after the holiday recess, when the families of senators and members will return to Washington for the remainder of the short session.

Guiding Your Child

By Mrs. Agnes Lyne

Forcing Friendship

During their early years most children are willing to play with any child who is near enough their own age to have similar play interests.

Individual qualities of personality apparently make little difference, and parents may rightly feel that so long as they see to it that their children are exposed to enough others of like age they have properly cared for their social needs.

The only difficulty likely to arise in a child's first friendships is that he may know too few children and hence miss the education which comes of rubbing shoulders with many different personalities.

As children grow older they show individual preferences in their selection of friends. It is at this time that parents begin to interfere and to pick as associates for their youngsters the "nice" children, the sons and daughters of their own friends or of otherwise socially "desirable" families.

It is not uncommon for mothers who have been lifelong friends to assume that the children will "inherit" their friendship.

The result is likely to be a very cordial antagonism between the two children who have been compelled to go through the motions of friendliness.

Friendship cannot be forced. There is nothing to be said against giving a child every opportunity to associate with those who are likely to prove desirable friends.

But when once this opportunity has been given the child he should be left to his own choices.

He should feel free to seek whatever contacts he pleases and to accept as his friends only those children who are really congenial.

For the first time in eighty-seven years Athens college, Athens, Ala., has opened its doors to male students. Twenty-five enrolled.

Cakes And Cookies As Christmas Gifts

Christmas would not be complete without its cakes and cookies. They make appropriate gifts, too, when prepared as those shown here.

There's an old-fashioned appeal in gifts of cakes and cookies at the Yuletide season.

Tied with the gay colors of Christmas they are popular presents for friends either in the sender's own neighborhood or in far-off cities.

Following are recipes for popular Christmas confections:

Fruit Cake

One cup fat, 2 cups dark brown sugar, 4 eggs, 1-2 cup molasses, 1-2 cup grape juice, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 2 teaspoons cinnamon, 1 teaspoon cloves, 1 teaspoon nutmeg, 1 teaspoon salt, 2 cups chopped raisins, 1 cup chopped dates, 1 cup chopped currants, 1 cup chopped walnuts, 1 cup chopped candied pineapple, 1-2 cup chopped orange rind (candied) 1-3 cup chopped citron, 4 cups flour, 1 teaspoon soda.

Cream the fat and sugar. Add the eggs, molasses and grapejuice. Beat 2 minutes. Add rest of ingredients and pour into 3 medium-sized pans which have been lined with waxed papers. Bake 1 1-2 hours in very slow oven. When cool, wrap the cakes in waxed papers and store in an airtight place.

Date Bars

Three eggs, 1 cup sugar, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 1-8 teaspoon salt, 1 cup chopped dates, 1-2 cup broken nuts, 1 cup flour, 1 teaspoon baking powder.

Beat the eggs and add the sugar. Beat 2 minutes. Add rest of ingredients and pour into shallow pan which has been lined with waxed paper. Bake 25 minutes in moderately slow oven. Cool. Cut in bars 2 by 2-3 inches. Roll in confectioner's sugar.

Chocolate Nut Brownies

Four tablespoons butter, 1 cup sugar, 2 eggs, 2 squares chocolate, melted, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 1-4 teaspoon salt, 4 tablespoons milk, 2-3 cup nuts, broken, 1 cup flour, 1-4 teaspoon baking powder.

Cream the butter and sugar. Add rest of ingredients and beat 2 minutes. Pour into shallow pan which has been lined with waxed paper. Bake 25 minutes in moderately slow oven. Cool and frost.

Frosting

Three tablespoons butter, 1 1-2 squares chocolate, melted, 3 tablespoons boiling coffee, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 1-8 teaspoon salt, 1 2-3 cups sifted confectioner's sugar.

Melt the butter and add the chocolate and coffee. Beat 2 minutes. Add rest of ingredients and mix well. Let stand several minutes. Beat 2 minutes and when creamy, frost top and sides of brownies. Cut in bars or squares.

Raisin Drops

One cup butter, 2 cups dark brown sugar, 2 eggs, 1-3 cup sour cream, 2 teaspoons cinnamon, 1 teaspoon cloves, 1 teaspoon nutmeg, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 1 cup raisins, 1 cup currants, 3 1-2 cups flour, 1 teaspoon soda.

Cream the butter until it is soft. Add the sugar and eggs and beat 3 minutes. Add rest of ingredients and blend well. Chill the dough. Break off bits of dough and shape into balls 1 inch in diameter. Place on greased baking pan and bake 15 minutes in moderate oven.

WOMAN IN LIFE AND IN THE KITCHEN

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Blend the sandwich filling with the creamed butter to save time in making sandwiches.

If you wax the corks of your grape juice bottles the juice will keep for years.

Paper may be removed easily from a package of raisins if it is placed in the oven a few minutes.

Be careful when scouring the faucets to clean away all scouring grit from the joints or it will work into the threads and soon wear them.

An excellent linen closet can be made from an unused bookcase. If curtains are fastened inside the glass doors it will add to the appearance.

When buying canned goods if the sides of the cans bulge outward do not accept them. These cans contain gas and the contents is spoiled.

If you are annoyed by having raisins or currants sink to the bottom of a cake put them into a dish and set over a slow fire. Stir occasionally so they will not burn. When heated add them to the batter.

If a kitchen knife or fork becomes loose in the handle, fill the opening in the handle end and force it into the handle opening. Tie a string around it and allow it to remain until dry.

In pouring drippings into a basin add to them an equal part of water. This is the quickest and best way of clarifying drippings, as all pieces of meat that may be in the liquid sink to the bottom and the drippings remain clear.

Be sure to leave sufficient space between the walls of the refrigerator and the dishes near them, and between the dishes on the shelves, to allow a free circulation of cold air through an electric refrigerator especially that preserves your food.

To remove glass stoppers from bottles, take a piece of twine, double it and put it around the neck of the bottle twice. Have someone hold the bottle, then take the ends of the twine, one in each hand, and work back and forth until the neck of the bottle becomes warm.

HOUSEHOLD BULLETIN

Buy an ordinary blackboard 18 by 24 inches in size and hang it on the kitchen wall, with a dustless crayon and felt eraser placed conveniently near. This board can be used as a memorandum pad for jotting down things to be done or purchases to be made. If a mother is obliged to be away from home when the children return from school, she may write on the board where she has gone and when she will return. Every member of the family may use it for messages. It can contain the latest news for the whole family.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY

A remedy for face pimples is to wash the face daily with hot castile soap suds. Rinse in hot water, followed by cold water.

When the child complains of earache, try giving it a liberal dose of castor oil. This may seem an odd remedy but it very often cures the earache within a short time.

If new shoes hurt at the heel, rub the inside of the heel with a hard soap before putting on. Try fastening cross strips of court plaster to your heel. The plaster will take the rub.

Start your scalp massage by using your thumbs in a circular movement at the base of the head and move outward toward the ears. Then, also with a circular movement, move your fingers over the front and top of your head.

BOUDOIR SLIPPERS

Some of the newst moccasins or shoes for the boudoir are made of moire, combined with kid and satin. The slippers have a strap of kid which slips round the heel at the back, a sole of satin under the foot, and a moire toe, with a jaunty moire bow in the front. The slippers may be obtained in attractive pastel shades of blue, green, pink, mauve, or yellow.

Novel Hat Stand

A pair of novel hat stands is made in the form of two heads, one a boy, and one a girl, with long flaxen hair. Above the heads are two sticks with the usual hat rests at the top, and when the hats are placed in position they appear to be worn above the hair of the boy and girl.

LAUNDRY HINTS.

The best thing with which to rub irons is a fairly large pad of folded brown paper. This will also serve to test their heat. In addition a cloth should be kept at hand on which to wipe off any flakes of soot or dirt. A small piece of wax is excellent for producing a gloss when rubbing on the iron. Paraffin has the same effect.

Even guaranteed fast colors will not stand strong washing soda or boiling.

Kid gloves can be made to look like new, after cleaning, if they are rubbed with the white of an egg.

To wash woolen knitted garments, handle them gently, use lukewarm water and lay them flat on towels to dry.

TABLECLOTHS

Some of the newest and smartest tablecloths of linen and specially woven with a portrait in the center, either of the hostess herself, if she chooses, or of some celebrity. Other new linen damasks show sea-piece motives designed by a well known maritime painter and etcher.

SASHES AGAIN IN FAVOR

Sashes with bows and long ends are worn with simple chiffon and net frocks. So are quaint sprays and posies of beautiful artificial flowers, some of which are made in ethereal fabrics, painted and dusted with jewels. Others are exquisite examples of fine feather-work.

The inserted decolletage of beadwork on net and lace, with worked braces across the back, is among quaint revivals. No formal evening dresses have sleeves, though the top of the arm is often covered by an embroidered decoration, berthe, or pointed collar. White gloves are worn with both white and black frocks.

AN IVORY FLOWER

A beautifully carved ivory rose is the handle of a dark blue umbrella very short as are smart umbrellas, and unusually good looking.

DICTATES OF FASHION

Black satin is a highlight among evening fashions.

The gay little dyed fur bolero has found many a friend this season.

Antique gold earrings and other jewelry in heirloom design are much worn.

The short sleeved dolman is one of fashion's efforts to appear casual in the midst of all this formality.

Evening handbags often repeat the fabric used in either gown or wrap.

Wool gingham is a term destined to make worsted plaid a greater success.

Onyx jewelry, pearl studded, is being revived—not excepting the sentimental locket.

The jeweled clip is having a tremendous vogue. It is chic to clip one to the edge of one's coat collar.

Stiff fabrics are winning a place for themselves in the evening mode—taffeta deserving especial mention.

PINK AND MOCHA

Pink and mocha are two shades that combine most effectively in lingerie especially when the pink is a faint blush tint and the mocha a very deep tone. It is shown in satin, crepe and chiffon lingerie and has the stamp of Paris in every exquisite stitch.

BLACK ON GREEN

Whether for morning or afternoon ensemble the combination of black with green is a new color scheme. Black astrakhan on bright grass green is a smart suggestion for a winter suit. Black suede gloves are clever accessories for the green ensemble. Light shades of green for frocks to wear with black trimmed green coats are good.

SHADED KRIMMER

A new fashion recently seen consisted of a shoulder cape made of krimmer shading from light to dark grey on a coat of rough black tweed. These rough tweed coats are outstandingly chic this season.

KRIMMER ENSEMBLE

One hopes that the winter will be cold enough for one to wear the fur ensembles that have been introduced as a "high fashion." These consist of coat, beret and wee muff. One of the best looking is carried out in krimmer of a rather deep shade of grey. If one prefers black, they come in sleek ponyskin, or caracul.

A REVIVED FASHION.

The return of cut glass after many years of oblivion is one of the most interesting features of 1930 decoration. Not the elaborate cut glass of the nineties but the chaste formal designs which have made the glass of the Georgian era a pattern for all time to come. The reproductions are exact copies and are much in vogue for formal luncheons and dinners.

NAIL HEAD BAGS

These new bags designed to be carried with autumn ensembles come in dark shades of suede and each has an effective design done in silver or gilt nailheads. The shapes are the satisfactory medium size envelopes with strap handles.

DRESSING TABLE LAMPS.

If you want something a bit different, here are fascinating little lamps for the dressing or night table. The tiny stands are of painted wood and the painted glass shades are like small cups. This throws the light upward on the mirror. It is hard to describe them but take our word for it they are really charming.

CONCERNING WOMEN.

Women's dirt track motorcycle races are to be held in Europe.

Russia plans to train 5,000,000 girls and women for military work.

Cutting teeth at the age of 90 was the experience of Mrs. Elizabeth Querry, of Bethany, Mo.

Of Turkey's total population of 13,-480,275, men are outnumbered by women by nearly half a million.

One of the civil disobedience campaigns of Gandhi's followers in India was led by the Indian poetess, Madame Sarojini Naidu.

As her contribution to the medical world's fight on cancer, Dr. Maude Slye, scientist at the University of Chicago, has devoted 20 years of her life to cataloguing the family trees of 50,000 mice.

According to Dr. Donald A. Laird, of Colgate university, who has been conducting studies concerning the sleeping habits of guests in hotels, women have a stronger desire to lie in bed mornings after awakening than men have.

PASTEL OILCLOTH.

All the loveliest pastel shades may now be found in oilcloth—which adds just so many more uses to this very practical fabric. For kitchenette, for pantry shelves and for the bathroom—it adds color and yet may be so easily kept spick and span.

SILVER KID ROSES

A rose of silver kid placed at the side of silver kid mules give the added touch of elegance in keeping with the luxuriousness of boudoir fashions.

RECIPES.

After mixing let stand over night. Fill buttered moulds two-thirds full, cover tight and steam for six hours.

The lemon sauce is made by pouring two cups of hot water into one cup of sugar mixed with two tablespoons of corn starch. Keep stirring while adding the water. Place on the stove and cook until clear. Stir in the grated rind and juice of one lemon and two tablespoons of butter. Serve hot.

DRAB KITCHENS CHANGED TO COZY SPOTS OF HOMES

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21 — (AP) — Beauty is now being combined with utility in every domestic article, however, insignificant, says Emeline S. Whitcomb, senior specialist in the government department of home economics.

"From basement to attic," Miss Whitcomb says, "every home can now be brightened and made more attractive.

"Dull, sombre colors are gone. Manufacturers, retailers and home-makers are co-operating in making houses more pleasant places in which to live."

Heat the pork in a frying pan, add the onions, celery and parsley and cook until a light brown in color. Mix with fork, and add rest of ingredients and carefully stuff fowl.

Yellow cream cheese, spread on buttered wafers and browned in a moderate oven makes a very good accompaniment to serve with appetizers, soups or salads.

PROPER CURTAINS ADD CHEER TO HOME.

Hope Hammond

The decorative treatment of casement windows needs careful planning. The curtains used for them are especially important.

Such windows are not difficult to curtain when their rigid necessities are understood and met.

If the windows open outward, inside screens must be considered. Roll screens must be considered. Roll hinged screens are frequently already installed, and curtains have to be arranged for free operation of all the factors involved.

A recent successful example of the effective handling of casement curtains showed how easily the requirements of such windows can be met, so that the curtains do not interfere with either the screen or window operations.

One pair of glass curtains was used, made of tubfast and sunfast fancy rayon maize gauze, thus doing away with the unnecessary ends caused by a multiplicity of curtains. Six inch hems were finished along the edges with several rows of maize crewel wool darned into the mesh of the gauze.

Tops were pin-tucked four inches deep, a 2-inch brass ring behind each tuck. A brass rod was attached to the wall three inches above the top of the screens.

When the screens were opened, the curtains were pulled back out of the way by means of a draw cord at the extreme right of the window.

Overhangings were also operated by drawcords, so that they could be neatly and easily pulled together at night. In the day time they were drawn to the far sides, clear of the windows, where the crewel-embroidered pattern fell against the wall.

Whether a draw curtain is simple or handsome, it is satisfactory only when it glides easily. So well-made hardware and strong draw-cords are essential to its purpose.

NURSERY IS TEMPORARY HOME OF LITTLE HOOVERS AT WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21 —(AP)— A nursery shorn of frills but rich in history is the temporary home of the three little Hoovers in the white house.

For the grandchildren of President and Mrs. Hoover there is plenty of sunshine and fresh air. But no Bo-Peeps or bunnies adorn the walls.

Special miniature furniture bought by their grandmother has been installed for the three children in the four rooms constituting the nursery.

There are small tables, dressers, beds and hooked rugs in the two rooms allotted to little Peggy Ann, aged four, and Herbert III, almost three years old.

Baby Joan, born last spring, also has a room to herself with a special nurse. The room has been equipped with everything a baby needs.

The two older children also have a nurse. Their meals are served from the white house kitchen in the fourth room of the suite. This has been fitted up as a general play and living room.

The fireproof nursery is on the third floor.

The little Hoovers have for their play all the wide space of the gently sloping white house lawns with their many trees, fountains and flower beds.

The white house physician, Dr. Joel T. Boone, will watch over their health.

DRESSMAKING IN HOMES STILL IMPORTANT TASK

POETRY FOR THE WIDE AWAKES

Christmas In a Barn

Our old barn is joyful,
  This is Christmas day;
Blessed be a manger—
  Where a Christ-child lay.

Apples in the grain box,
  Flakes of yellow hay;
Let the beasts be happy—
  Christ was born today!
—Julia Van Der Veer.

An Invitation To Horses

Come all you horses, far and near,
  Now do not say us "neigh,"
There'll be a feast again this year
  For you on Christmas day;
A food-tree in Post Office square—
And all good horses must be there.

You'll not refuse, we hope, poor beasts,
  For you who know the storm,
The cold and snow, have need of feasts
  To hearten you and warm;
And on this great day of the year
You well deserve your bit of cheer.

So hasten to the Horses' Tree
  And bring your drivers, too,
That they may also eat, and see
  The gifts we have for you;
Which Boston people have prepared,
For rich and poor alike have shared.

And as you go upon your way
  Along the streets and roads,
You'll understand why Christmas day
  Oft lightens heavy loads;
Why Christmas trees give joy to others—
So Merry Christmas to you, brothers!
—Maude Wood Henry.

UNCLE JED'S TALK TO THE WIDE-AWAKES.

In the countries to which the elephant is native, Asia, Ceylon, Sumatra, Africa, the intelligence of the animal is well known. He is an economic factor, indeed, for he is of invaluable assistance in piling and moving lumber. He pushes the huge logs with his trunk as well as his tusks, for he utilizes the bony part of his head as a battering ram.

When the baby elephant loses his "milk" teeth or incisors, the tusks take their place, increasing in size, as the elephant develops. These tusks, which are composed of "a fine elastic dentine with a tip of enamel," comprise the valuable ivory of commerce. The tusks are useful to the animal in uprooting plants or holding his enemies at bay.

LETTERS WRITTEN BY THE WIDE AWAKES

A Sight Seeing Trip

Dear Uncle Jed: Suppose you and the Wide Awakes take a trip with me? We will start from Norwich and go over the new bridge in Jewett City and go to Providence by the way of Scituate and take the new four lane road to Providence. Then go over Point street bridge where we can see the New York boats and over the beautiful Washington bridge. Let's stop and read the history of the bridge on the tablets at the entrance. Then along the Barrington parkway. We shall stop at one of the parking spaces and look over the bay and see the oil tankers and different boats. Go right along past the oil tanks through Riverside and over Warren bridge, on to Bristol, where the cup defenders are built. Bristol is over 300 years old, then we pay our toll, 60 cents, and go over the Mount Hope bridge which is about one mile long and 180 feet high, spanning Mount Hope bay. Let's stop in the center of the bridge. On the right you can see Prudence island and lighthouse, and on the left we shall see the hill that they call Mount Hope where King Phillip's chair is, made out of stone. When we leave the bridge we will go about a half of a mile on the Newport road where we come to a farm house and the gardener has trees trained to grow in all shapes of animals. Then we will turn back and go through Portsmouth, past Island park, across Stone bridge into Tiverton, then along into Fall River, Mass., right along through the city, back over Brightman's bridge, through the old fishing village in Swansea, Mass., where the home of the Standby gypsy has been for years. Come along to the Providence airport where there are many airplanes. Go over the Red bridge, down past Brown, down Waterman's hill by the Victor monuments. Come back by Reservoir avenue, by the boys' school and state prison and hospital, through Natic to the Hope Valley road, into Westerly, and then back to Norwich. Now, we have been about 150 miles. I hope you and the Wide Awakes enjoyed the trip, I'm sure I did. If you did, I will take you on another one sometime.

ROSE CURRIER, age 13.
Plainfield.

A Bird Bath

Dear Uncle Jed: This is my first story to you and the Wide Awakes. The name of it is An Old Indian Mortar. There was a man who took an Indian mortar from Rixtown mountain being once used by Indians long ago to grind corn into meal. They went up into the woods and cut a path all the way up there through brush and over ledges until they came to the mountain. The Indian mortar was taken then on a drag drawn by a horse to a truck which they went in by the way of our farm and this man intends to place the old relic in his garden for a bird bath. Hope you will find this story interesting.

MARGARET F. BURKE, age 13.
Norwich.

My Visit To Colonel Green's Estate

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the first time that I have written to you and I hope you will enjoy it. One day as we were visiting relatives in New Bedford we decided to visit Colonel Green's estate. On arriving at the estate we saw beautiful gardens and many pine trees. When we got to the airfield we saw an aeroplane and as we watched it go up we saw a blimp coming down to pick up a passenger. The next thing we saw was an old whaling vessel. We went on board and saw the man that used to be captain of the ship. He was very old. My uncle said that at certain hours of the day he explained all the things in and around the ship, but he had already explained them before we arrived. We first went into a small room which used to be the captain's bedroom. Next we came to a room in which the rest of the men used to sleep. We then went into their dining room. The table was set with old dishes. We then went down into the lower deck of the ship. There we saw their tools with which they used to go whaling. Then we saw the rings and bracelets they had to wear. We went back to shore and saw Colonel Green's home. It was very beautiful and we were very glad that we had been able to visit it.

A Big Thrill For a Small Boy

Dear Uncle Jed: Guess what I did one Sunday a short time ago? I went to Hartford to see my Aunt Helen, who is training to be a nurse. While we were there we went to the aviation field to watch the many planes that were doing commercial flying. Mother asked me if I wanted to go up. I certainly did, so up we went in a cabin plane. It was great fun flying over the city of Hartford. It looked like a miniature city. I didn't like it when the time came to land. I would like to have flown longer, but mother said she felt safe on the ground.

A Merry Christmas!

Dear Uncle Jed: I have not wirtten to you for a long while, so this time I am going to tell you why I like winter. One reason is that I like to watch the snow fall which makes a beautiful blanket on the ground that protects the flowers and grass for the coming summer. I also like to go sliding, skating, snowballing and building snowmen. I live about one-half mile from the school which I go to and find it great fun going to school in the winter. But most fun of all is Christmas day which I think everybody enjoys; wishing you and the Wide-Awakes a merry Christmas and happy New Year.

Two Pets.

Dear Uncle Jed: I would like to tell you about two squirrels that I had. One day as I was playing in my backyard I looked up and saw our cat crossing the road carrying some thing in his mouth. At first it looked like a rat but as the cat came to me I saw it was a squirrel. I quickly took the squirrel away from him and put it in an old bird cage. About half an hour later I spied the cat coming from the woods with another squirrel. I took this one away from him and put it in the cage with the first one. At first they were very timid but they soon became used to seeing me about. I fed them with nuts and acorns which I gathered in the woods nearby. It was great sport to see them sit in the cage and nibble on nuts. How quickly those tiny jaws worked. I had gathered nearly a bushel of nuts and as many of acornes for them for their winter's feed, when one day to my sorrow one of them died. Shortly after this the second one died. I felt bad over the loss of my two squirrels as they had become very tame and were very nice pets.

Christmas Wishes.

Dear Uncle Jed: As the time draws nearer and nearer to the joy of all children, I feel that in appreciation for the past gifts I received in writing those little letters which made me very proud, I cannot go by this time without wishing you my best wishes for a joyous Christmas. As times are a little hard I do not know if Santa will be very generous, but I do sincerely hope he will not forget the poor little ones who are smaller than myself on that very day which we look forward to so much. If Santa is kind enough to fill my stocking on Christmas morning I will gladly share what I have with anyone who may not be as fortunate.

Our House Plants.

Uncle Jed: We have quite a few plants and flowers in our house. I shall tell you of some. One of the plants we have is called a "patient," It gives little pink flowers.

Another flower we have is the "fuschia," which gives pink blossoms. Other fuschias give red, pink, white and pudple blossoms.

We still have another flower, its name is "narcissis." It is blossomed already. It has large tall green leaves. It has six or seven white blossoms now. It is very beautiful and has a very fragrant smell.

We have two kinds of "begonias." One is sometimes called a "wax plant," because its leaves are so shiny and waxy. It bears little pink blossoms. The other begonia is a small plant, which also bears little pink blossoms.

We also have an Easter lily growing.

Just a Dream.

Dear Uncle Jed: This is my first letter to the Wide-Awakes. I dreamed that I had a doll carriage and I put a real baby in it. The carriage broke and I was angry with the baby, but my father said that he would fix it for me and he did so, and I had my carriage once more, and I never again put the baby in it.

A Good Time

Dear Uncle Jed: Saturday, December sixth, I had such a good time. My mother and I went shopping in the morning, in the afternoon I was invited to a birthday party at three o'clock. When I reached my friend's house, all the other children were waiting for me outside. We all went in and played games. First we tried pinning the donkey's tail. Then we played button, button, who has the button. Then we had eats, such good eats, ice cream, cake, sandwiches, candy and lemonade. After eating, my friend opened his gifts and such nice ones; two ties, stockings, books, games, money, a leather jacket and some leather mittens. After awhile it was time to go home. We all wished him many more happy birthdays and trotted home. I wish there were more days like Saturday.

Christmas Ideas

Dear Uncle Jed: Here are some ideas of home made Christmas presents for the Wide Awakes to use. We make very pretty vases and this is how you do it. Take a jar or glass in the shape of a vase. Then take some pretty envelope lining, wallpaper or some pretty pictures, cut these in triangle shape. Take the jar and paste one of the pieces of pretty paper cut in triangle shape on the mouth of the jar. The wide piece will be pasted on the inside of the jar. The pointed piece will be on the outside about 1-4 inch down. Cover the whole jar with these. Be sure to use the prettiest and brightest pictures. After you have covered the jar with these pictures, shellac it over, then you will have a bright, pretty vase for flowers or to put on your desk to keep pen holders in. Another idea is a paint book. First, get an old loose leaf note book cover and fill it with sheets of plain paper, then cut out of old magazines and papers pictures that have not been colored and paste them in. Paste an attractive picture on the cover of your book. I wish some of the Wide Awakes would write to me as I like to make new friends. Hoping you'll like my ideas for Christmas.

What I Saw

Dear Uncle Jed: I Ilalm going to tell you about what I saw one summer day. I am a boy eleven years old. I live on a farm about three miles from town. One day as the wind was blowing, I went out to fly a kite, but I couldn't. Then I sat down on the lawn. Then came the unexpected. The wind had been blowing dust around, but this time it took much more with some sand. Its shape was like the funnel of a whirlwind or a tornado. It was blown out of sight. Later I called it the baby whirlwind.

My Banty Chickens

Dear Uncle Jed: I am writing to tell you of my four banty chickens. I have two roosters and two hens. The roosters are red with black spots here and there. The hens are brownish color. My father is going to build a coop for them. The other day I couldn't find the hens anywhere. At night my father looked in the coop, and there they were with all the other big chickens. My father took one on each hand and put them in the small coop. They didn't even stir. I guess they were too sleepy. They are very small and look like those stuffed cloth chickens. But all day long they roam around the yard and crow at the top of their voice, cock-a-doo-do-loo!

A Tiger Cat

Dear Uncle Jed: I thought I would write you a letter today. I have a cat. It's name is Tiny. It is a tiger cat. He is about a half a year old. He is very playful. I have lots of fun with him. I also have a mother cat. Her name is Patty. Today they were playing together. One would get near a tree and the other near another one. They would run together and bite each other. I have lots of fun watching them. Every time I come home from school he would be coming to meet me. I mean Tiny. I am eleven years of age and in the sixth grade. My name is Margaret Ristan. My address is 229 E. Middle Turnpike, So. Manchester, Conn.

My Trip To Somers

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the first time I have ever written to you and hope you will like my story about my visit to Somers this summer. Oh, that glorious day had come that I was to take a trip to Somers. I was to go alone on the bus that started at one o'clock. I said goodby to all and chug and away we went. I reached Somers at 4 o'clock. I went to my uncle's house as I did not know the way to my aunt's house. He showed me the way to get there and I got there safe and sound. After spending a wonderful week full of pleasures and adventures it was the day to go home as school started in three more days. I got the bus at Somers Center and we rode for four hours. I reached home tired, but safe and happy. I hope you liked my story and I hope you and the rest of the Wide Awakes have a Merry Christmas.

My Pet Pigeon

Dear Uncle Jed: I have a very nice pet pigeon. He is light blue with dark blue and green feathers on his neck. My neighbor gave him to me. He is very gentle. I go to the door and call "Coo-Coo." He will just look at me, then fly into the house and alight on my shoulder. I put a paper on the table and put a dish of water and a lot of bread crumbs on it. The pigeon will fly down and eat and drink. Then he will fly on my head and go "coo-coo," then he will fly out to the barn and sit in the sun for hours, but just as soon as he sees the house door open he will come in. When I go to school, mother has to keep him in the house until I am out of sight. Everywhere I go he is bound to follow me. We have to watch him all the time. When we are going in the car he will fly on top of it and stay right there if we don't take him off. I am afraid I will lose him, and I do think so much of my pigeon.

Our Farm

Dear Uncle Jed: I want to tell you and the Wide Awakes about our farm. We have a farm with a few animals, a horse, calf, three cows, with some chickens. Oh, what a jolly time we have in the summer planting! I had a garden last summer. I took good care of it. We live on the top of the hill. We have a lot of trees in our yard, too. We go walking in the summer time, and I go to feed the animals and get the eggs from the hens, and clean the barns.

My Halloween Party

Uncle Jed: October thirtieth I had a Halloween party for my school friends. The party started right after school. All were dressed in costumes. First we had salad and cocoa, then we played games. Among them were searching for peanuts which mother hid during the day all through the house. Then we pinned the tail on the donkey. One prize was for the nearest and one for the farthest away from the correct place. The first prize, nearest to the correct place, was a football pin, and the booby prize was a harmonica. Then we had the grab bag. Each one got something to make a noise with. Later, candy, fruit and punch were served, also cakes and cookies. The ducking for apples was enjoyed most of all. There were two prizes hidden in the apples. One was a ten cent piece and the other a wedding ring. During the evening our neighbor and his wife dropped in. He was dressed as George Washington, and his wife as a clown. They had masks on. We were all guessing who they were and no one knew them until they spoke.

A Dream

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the first time I have written to the Wide Awake circle, I will tell you one night what I dreamed. This is my dream. One day I ran away from home. Some pirates captured me. I was very frightened because they were going some place that night. The captain said they were going to leave at 10 o'clock that night. Before they left I tried to escape. Just as I was going to escape a pirate saw me and took me by the hand and brought me to the captain. He told the pirate to tie me up because the next day they were going to throw me overboard. So we sailed on all that night. When morning came they let me loose. I saw a coast guard ship coming. I took out my handkerchief and waved to them. They saw me and came to my rescue. They captured the pirates and they told me their names. I was glad to see my mother calling me for school.

A Day In June

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the second time I have written to you. I hope you and the Wide Awakes will enjoy my letter. I will call it "A Day in June." It was a pleasant day in June. It was clear and there was no wind. My friend Gladys and I went for a walk. After a short time we came to a brook where there were bright colored pebbles. We stopped to admire them for a moment, then we hurried onward. We had not noticed how far we had gone when Gladys stopped and said, "Had we not better start toward home." I said "Yes." And we started the other way. The sun had started to sink behind the horizon. We hastened our pace and at last we were on a main highway. It did not take us long to reach Glady's house where we had a light lunch and I started for my home. I reached home about nine o'clock in the evening sound and happy. I had had a pleasant afternoon.

A Make Believe Visit

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you about a make believe visit to Switzerland. I think every one would like to go there because there are so many sports there. Many people go there in summer and winter. Mostly they go to St. Moritz. St. Moritz is in the Alps. It is also one of the fashionable places in the world. I think I would like to visit Switzerland. I think all the Wide Awakes would enjoy reading about Switzerland. Berne is the capital of Switzerland. Switzerland manufactures many watches and clocks. The government is a republic. The Swiss people are liberty loving, thrifty, independent and industrious. Switzerland is known for its scenery; also Switzerland is called the "Playground of Europe."

Stumpy Changes His Opinion

A sorry world 'twould be and strange
Did formed opinions never change.
—Old Mother Nature.

Stumpy, the three-legged young muskrat, was just like most other people, wishing that he had something he hadn't got but someone else had. What he wished he had was a white coat. Jumper the Hare, who did have a white coat, had told him that it was nothing but envy and that he was better off without a white coat. You see Jumper, from the wisdom of experience, knew that if a white coat was a good thing for a young muskrat or any other muskrat, Old Mother Nature would have seen to it that it was supplied.

But Stumpy couldn't see this and he sat on his favorite tussock by the open water of the Laughing brook and thought how fine it would be to be dressed all in white and be able to go about on the snow and practically disappear just by sitting perfectly still.

"It would be fun," said Stumpy.

"What would be fun?" inquired Jerry Muskrat, who happened along just in time to overhear that remark.

"Why, it would be fun to have a white coat and just sit still when an enemy came along and thought you were a lump of snow," replied Stumpy. "I don't see why Old Mother Nature didn't give everybody white coats for winter."

"You'll find as you grow older that there are many things Old Mother Nature does or does not do the reason for which you cannot understand," said Jerry. "But," he added, "you may be sure of one thing, and this is that she makes no mistakes. For whatever she does there is a reason."

"What do you mean?" asked Stumpy

"Just the same I think we would be better off if we had white coats like Shadow the Weasel and Jumper the Hare," grumbled Stumpy.

"Where do we muskrats spend most of our time, in the water or on land?" asked Jerry rather sharply.

Stumpy hesitated for a minute. He wanted to think that over. "Well," said he slowly. "I suppose we spend more time in the water than on land excepting when we are in our houses. This time of year we spend more time in the house than anywhere else."

"And this time of year is the only time of year when a white coat would be of the least use to any one," replied Jerry. "A white coat would be of no use in the house, and I for one don't want one when I am swimming. When the black shadows have come we can swim about where they are without much danger of being seen, but how would it be if we had white coats? Now when we dive we at once go out of sight, but with white coats we could be seen under water easily. A white coat may be all right for Jumper and for Shadow the Weasel, but I doubt if even with them it is wholly a blessing."

"What do you mean?" asked Stumpy.

"You will find out," replied Jerry, "that there are times even in winter when the ground is bare. Sometimes the snow is long in coming. Jumper and Shadow get their white coats before the snow comes and then they are just as easily seen by their enemies as we are now with our brown coats. I don't want a white coat. No, sir, I don't want a white coat. If Old Mother Nature should come along and offer me one I would thank her and say that I am quite satisfied with what I have."

Stumpy thought this over for a while. The more he thought about it the clearer it was to hi mthat Jerry Muskrat was right. He looked at his own brown coat and the more he looked at it the better pleased with it he was. He had thought a white coat very lovely, but so was a brown one. So gradually Stumpy changed his mind and the next time he saw Jumper the Hare there was no envy left. In fact he was thankful he didn't have a white coat. His brown coat seemed just suited to his needs, as indeed it was. So, without knowing it, Stumpy had gained wisdom, for it is the part of wisdom to waste no time in wanting those things it was not intended you should have.

PETER GALLAN POST ENTERTAINS 250 CHILDREN

Santa Claus paid a visit to Community hall, Taftville, Sunday afternoon when Peter Gallan post, No. 104, American Legion, and its auxiliary entertained 250 children of ex-service men of the World war residing in Occum and Taftville. The children ranged in age from 6 weeks to 14 years old.

The exercises opened with a selection by Adams orchestra followed by the singing of America by the children and the salute to the flag. Santa Claus then arrived with Commander Bessette and after a short talk to the children presented each a stocking filled with candy, a toy and an orange, each child coming to the stage as his name was called.

After all the gifts had been distributed cake, fancy cookies and soda were served by members of the auxiliary. The enjoyable afternoon closed with fancy dancing by Eugene Mercier and the singing of Christmas carols and the Star Spangled Banner by the children.

The handsomely lighted Christmas tree was the gift of the Ponemah mills and the committee acknowledges courtesies by the Baldwin store, Donais Bros., Martin Bros., Tony Longo, Bert Young, Mohican Co., Ralph Dion, Paul Peltier, Rae Cote, Adams' orchestra and George Herrmann, who made a jolly Santa Claus.

SAYS FEDERAL RELIEF AID IS NOT NECESSARY FOR NORWICH

(Special to The Bulletin)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21—Senator Walsh of Massachusetts read into the congressional record a series of replies he had received on the unemployment and other business conditions of a number of eastern states, during his demand for liberal federal aid for unemployment conditions. From Connecticut came a half dozen answers dealing specifically with the unemployment situation. One was from Mayor Lee Roy Robbins of Norwich in which it was stated, "There are approximately 500 unemployed persons in this city and twice as many requiring aid, as compared to last year. Of course any assistance will help extend relief to the needy and will lessen the burden of tax payers. I do not think our community needs any assistance from the federal government to meet local burdens although I am not personally opposed to the idea. Conditions in Norwich are not extreme." Details of relief work were included in the mayor's letter.

Hartford reported about 6,000 unemployed. The mayor declined federal help adding, "We are going to take care of ourselves and pay our own freight."

New Haven reported only 3,000 registered unemployed saying probably many of the number were not anxious to obtain work. I do not regard the situation as serious but we should of course be glad to have the federal government share the burden. The reply was signed by Thomas A. Tully, mayor.

New London stated there were from 500 to 800 unemployed. As to federal aid the city of New London expects to take care of its own as it always has and the situation does not seem to be such as to apply for federal aid. The letter was signed by William A. Holt, mayor.

Ansonia reported fairly good conditions but was not averse to federal aid. Bristol said federal aid would be appreciated though only about 500 unemployed.

ATTENDED DANCE AT STORRS COMMUNITY HOUSE

(Special to The Bulletin)

STORRS, Dec. 21—A Christmas dance was given in the Community house here Friday evening by the women students of the junior class of Connecticut Agricultural college. The hall was decorated in seasonal colors.

Among those present were: Miss Harriette Bray and Kilbourne Gates of East Hampton, Miss Anne Claffey and James Fitzgerald of Norwich, Miss Kathryn Kennedy and Richard Pickett of Willimantic.

New Haven Road Leads

Up to the present time, the New Haven railroad has eliminated a greater percentage of its grade crossings than any other railroad in the United States, according to reports on file in several states. In Connecticut alone, nearly 50 per cent of all rail and highway intersections are on separated grades, so that the highway passes either above or below the railroad tracks. Throughout its entire system in Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut and New York, the New Haven has eliminated 45 per cent of its grade crossings.

Participated In Service

Miss Pauline E. Nawrocki took part in the Christmas vesper service, which included the play, "Why The Chimes Rang," at Pembroke college, Brown university, where she is a member of the sophomore class. She is a member of the college choir and Solon Francaise. She was an honor student of the graduating class of 1929 of the Norwich Free Academy.

NORWICH TOWN

At the request of the Norwich Rural association announcement was made from the Congregational pulpit Sunday morning, relative to the Community Christmas tree celebration to be held on Norwich Town Green, (Christmas eve) at 7:45. A general invitation was extended to all, to unite in the singing that evening of old time Christmas carols.

"Joy to the World," was the theme assigned to the Congregational Young People's C. E. service Sunday evening in the chapel.

Sale and Supper

Friday evening in the vestry of the Methodist Episcopal church, the annual Christmas sale and supper of the C. E. society was held. The affair was in charge of the social department of the society, Mrs. Richard Carter, chairman. An excellent bean and salad supper was served with Mrs. Frederick G. Ross in charge of the dining room. The waitresses were Muriel Rose, Virginia Ward, Florence Gembel and Doris Rose. The kitchen was in charge of Mrs. Arthur Fulton, assisted by Mrs. John Yetke, Mrs. Reginald Ward, Mrs. Byron Fargo, and Mrs. Sarles who demonstrated a popular brand of coffee. For the apron and fancy work sale, Miss Florence M. Bennett was assisted by Mildred Carter. The following entertainment was given, after the supper: Vocal solo, "A Dream," Mrs. Charles E. Schwenk, Mrs. Harry Stebbins accompanist; recitation, "A Faithful Few," Beulah Rogers; piano solo, "Under Orders," Virginia Ward; trumpet solo, "Somewhere a Voice is Calling", Edward Jordan, accompanied by Virginia Ward; vocal solo, "Fiddle and I", sung by Mrs. Schwenk; trumpet solo, "The Road to Mandalay," by Edward Jordan; recitation, "Pulling Together," Beulah Rogers. All those taking part won hearty applause and responded with encores. The pastor spoke highly in closing the program and thanked all who took any part in the affair.

Saturday morning, the Wolf Cub pack connected with the church, held a meeting. Following the opening ceremony, John Gibbs led the Cubs in a song period in which Christmas carols were used. The assistant cubmaster, then led the pack in an outdoor marching period. Following the march the cubmaster, Rev. George Warren Potter invited the Cubs into the parsonage where they found a beautifully decorated Christmas tree furnished by Assistant Cubmaster Clayton Rose. The Cubs enjoyed a game period and at the close of the meeting the cubmaster presented each cub a box of candy. The cubs on a motion made by John Gibbs voted to give Mrs. John Bussey, the cubmaster's crippled aunt, a gift of two dollars, also a present of two dollars to the cubmaster.

BOY SCOUT FIREPLACE BEYOND HALF WAY MARK

Due to the efforts of Bruno Weinert, well known builder of fireplaces and the assistance of Albert Koziol, Paul Winkel, Sam Missino, Jim Mingo, Antony Sallucl, Gus Sorterro and Sam Nassem, the Boy Scout fireplace at the new scout camp on the Quinebaug river is more than half completed. These men, bricklayers and stone masons, volunteered to help the scouts and spent all day Saturday in raising the fireplace to the mantel level. They have declared their intention of seeing the job through and within a week's time if possible. The fireplace when completed will be very attractive, of brick on the inside and of stone on the outside. It will measure eight feet, six inches in width with an opening four feet, six inches in diameter and a large hearth.

About twenty Boy Scouts, under the leadership of Assistant Scoutmaster John Dodge and Eagle Scout Nick Tarrant, assisted with the work. Through the continued efforts and good will of Ed Grover, Charles Browning, and two other carpenters the roof was completed and the roof paper laid assuring that the interior of the cabin will not be harmed by rain or snow.

Much remains to be done and a call will be sent out for every scoutmaster, assistant scoutmaster, and members of the local council to do their bit by getting out to assist with the work of the cabin. Never before have Norwich scouts and scout men had quite such an opportunity to put over in short time so practicable a project as the building of a large cabin for winter camping. For the cabin to become the property of every scout and scouter, every scout and scouter should make some sacrifice in time and energy towards its completion.

Among the things still to be done are: Papering the exterior of the cabin, cutting and fitting on the hemlock slabs, hanging doors and windows, boarding the interior, building a veranda, placing the outhouses and cook shack. Through the cooperation of many firms and persons the work has progressed rapidly during the four week-ends since the first ground was broken. Among those who have contributed materials towards the project are: The Shetucket Coal & Lumber Co., W. S. Spencer, Chandler & Palmer, New London County Home, E. W. Chappell Co., P. F. Sweeney, Richmond Radiator Co., Fred C. Crowell, Dr. W. T. Browne, the Gas and Electric department, W. S. Ryan, Connecticut Light and Power Co., the Eaton Chase Co.

The Hanover-Curland Co., through Max Hanover, vice president of the local Boy Scout council, announced that they will give a cabinet victrola to the scouts if they complete their cabin in time to occupy it during the week following Christmas.

Among some of the materials still needed to complete the cabin are wall boarding for the interior to cover the sides and ceiling, mattresses or pads for 32 bunks, blankets, etc. The scouts hope to finish the work in time to have some get togethers around the fireplace during the week following Christmas.

According to President H. D. Larrabee, the next board meeting will be held in the cabin and Mr. Larrabee urges every board member to do something during the holidays to assist in the work. According to the officers of the scoutmaster round table a get-together of the scoutmasters at the cabin will be held in the near future.

All scouts of the Norwich Free Academy not working have been asked to spend Monday in assisting carpenters lay the paper on the exterior of the building and to lay the floor of the veranda. If enough of these young men will volunteer the interesting work of cutting and fitting the slabs log cabin style can be undertaken.

GIRLS' CITY CLUB PLANS ANNUAL CHRISTMAS PARTY

There was a very large attendance at the weekly meeting of the Girls' City club under the auspices of the Woman's City club on Friday evening with the newly elected officers presiding. The club director, Mrs. W. C. McKean, feels confident that the club is going to continue its fine progress with this new group of officers. Florence Barrett was elected club librarian to succeed Dorothy Holmes who is now the president, and Marian Guillios was elected assistant librarian. Plans were completed for the annual Christmas party for the club to be held next Friday evening, Dec. 26, in the regular club rooms. This party is for club members and the members of the girls' work committee of the Woman's City club. Each member is to take an inexpensive gift to the party to be placed on the tree. Next Tuesday evening the club will meet to fill and deliver Christmas baskets for the families decided upon by the Girls' club. Members who have donations to contribute to these baskets should take them to the Tuesday night meeting.

COMMUNITY TREE AT NORWICH TOWN

With Christmas approaching, interest of the townspeople is being centered on the Community Christmas tree celebration on the Norwich Town Green, Christmas eve (December 24th) at 7:45 o'clock. This annual celebration sponsored a few years ago by Norwich Rural association, has aroused much enthusiasm each year, with its varied programmes. This year Mrs. Walter T. Clark is in charge of decorating the tree, which was lighted for the first time Friday evening, the lights to be turned on each evening throughout the Yultide season, until after New Year's.

It is the desire of the Rural association, Willard Haugh, president, to make this celebration distinctly a community affair and all residents of Norwich and outlying districts, will be welcome to attend and have a part in the singing.

When this idea first originated a large hemlock or evergreen tree was cut and hauled to Norwich Town green, where it was temporarily set up. For the past few years, there has been a permanent tree on the Green where the celebration has been held each succeeding year, since the tree was set out under the direction of the chairman of the tree committee of the Rural association, at that time. Walter T. Clark is treasurer of the Christmas tree fund, and all contributions forthcoming should be forwarded to him at 37 East Town street.

A large star of white lights is suspended from the top of the tree while the tree proper is strung with various colored light bulbs, a large spotlight being hung from the center of a wire across the Green, to afford light for the singers, making the whole quite effective. Joseph H. Worth is to direct the singing same as last year, the programme made up chiefly of the beautiful Christmas carols.

The brightly illuminated tree each evening for nearly two weeks greatly admired by all who chance to observe it in passing automobiles, as well as the residents around the Green, who are privileged to enjoy its brilliancy each evening, also the Christmas carols sung the night of the celebration, makes this event one of real interest.

Through the generosity of its management, the electricity each year is a favor of the Norwich Gas and Electric company. The wiring was done by Eaton Chase Co.

FIRE IN COLCHESTER CAUSES $1,500 DAMAGE

(Special to The Bulletin)

COLCHESTER, Dec. 21—Fire of unknown origin caused an estimated damage of $1,500 here tonight to the six-chimney tenement house on Lebanon avenue about 10:30 o'clock tonight. The fire started in the front end of the building and had worked its way up through the partitions to the roof when discovered. A call was at once sent to the local fire department and Chief Brown with the engine and squad of men responded in record time. Two lines of hose were laid to the old mill pond several hundred feet distant. The firemen had difficulty in extinguishing the blaze in the blind attic. They were handicapped by smoke but after a half hour battle succeeded in subduing the flames and had the situation under control.

It is understood that the loss is only partially covered by insurance. At the same time last night a fire broke out in a house only a few hundred feet distance from the six-chimney house. The loss in that fire was estimated at $500.

BARN DESTROYED AND FOUR COWS BURNED TO DEATH

Fire said to have started in the hay loft destroyed a two-story frame barn located on the farm of Henry Hensley on the Plain Hill road at 7 o'clock Sunday morning. A quantity of grain and farming implements and four cows were burned to death. A large pile of loose buckwheat, located near the building, was also burned, but the house was saved by the firemen. The estimated damage was placed at $15,000, partly covered by insurance.

While in the house Mr. Hensley noticed flames and smoke issuing from the building and immediately got in touch with the Taftville department, which responded with Chief Phillas Poirier, who, in turn, notified the Yantic department. Both companies made a rapid response to the fire, but the firemen were unable to save the barn, as adequate fighting facilities were lacking. A supply of water sufficient to fight the blaze was not at hand.

As the flames quickly spread to all quarters of the building there was no chance to save the four cows or any of the farming implements which included a buggy. It is said that one-quarter of the loss was covered by insurance. The farm is located near the town of Baltic.

THE WARNING OF ST. JOHN MONSIGNOR MAY'S THEME

That the preparation period of Advent is one of seriousness with the people of St. Patrick's great parish was evidenced Sunday, when the four masses were attended by large congregations, while hundreds of penitents received holy communion at the early services. The gospel read in all the masses throughout the world was the warning of John, the son of Zachary, as he came from the desert into all the country about the Jordan, Luke 3:1-6. It was this warning which the rector, Rt. Rev. Msgr. M. H. May chose as his brief sermon theme, preaching to the large congregation attending the mass at 7:30. The warning of John, precursor of Jesus Christ, has sounded for us all throughout the weeks of Advent, the preacher said. His reproach may apply to us. How have we attempted to prepare the way of the Lord, to make plain the path through which Jesus wishes to come into our hearts?

"Do penance" was the admonition of John; it is the warning being sounded in every Roman Catholic church throughout the world. Do penance for the sins of the past year. John came from the desert to teach and to preach that Christ was at hand. What have we done toward making straight the paths, toward casting aside obstacles, toward leveling the hills and mountains of pride?

The soul of man craves happiness: it was created for the one purpose, to be satisfied through union with God. The Lord has given us means to attain this happiness on earth, through confession and communion in coming back to friendship with Him. Unless we make straight the way of the Lord through contrition for sin, a sincere purpose of amendment, to resolve to sin no more, Christmas can bring us no real happiness. The valleys must be filled, the mountains of sin leveled, the paths made straight. On Christmas day, while we may not actually see Christ, nevertheless we will have the joy of receiving Him into our hearts and souls spiritually. The sermon was a gentle, through practical, rebuke to those who are careless about making of Advent that time of repentance which Saint John enjoined.

Afterwards, Monsignor May was assisted by Rev. John J. Reilly in giving holy communion to the great proportion of the members of the congregation assembled.

It was announced that the masses on Thursday next, Christmas day, will be at 5:30, 7:30, 9 and 10:30, the first and last to be high masses. Wednesday the vigil of Christmas is a fasting day for those of the age and condition to fast. Confessions on that day will be heard by the priests at 3 and 7 p. m.

Tuesday morning, beginning at 8 o'clock, holy communion will be carried to the aged and infirm who are unable to leave their homes.

The Christmas day offertory is the annual personal offering of the people of the parish to their priests and in this regard St. Patrick's has always had a reputation in the diocese of Hartford for special generosity, in manifesting appreciation of the faithful labors of pastor and curates during the year.

POLICE CAPTURE GREENEVILLE MAN WANTED ON STABBING CHARGE

Wanted on a charge of stabbing Walter Partnicki, 18, of No. 520 North Main street, Salvator Abruzzes, 35, of No. 106 1-4 North Main street, was captured Sunday night about 11 o'clock by Sergeant Matthew Delaney and Officer John Quinn. Booked at police headquarters on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon, Abruzzes was later released in bonds of $3,000, furnished by a relative, for his appearance in the city court this (Monday) morning. Abruzzes was arrested at the corner of North Main and Roath streets.

The stabbing affray occurred shortly after 6 o'clock Sunday evening at Abruzzes' club and pool room at No. 464 North Main street. Partnicki, who it is understood, was not badly injured, is a patient at the W. W. Backus hospital.

From what can be learned of the affair, Partnicki went to the club room where he was not wanted and tried to force his way in through the front door. Abruzzes is said to have met him at the door, and, becoming incensed, to have stabbed him with a nail file.

Partnicki was taken to the office of Dr. John W. Callahan to be treated. While he was at the physician's office, Captain Thomas P. Murphy received a telephone call at police headquarters to the effect that a man who had been stabbed was at the doctor's office. Captain Murphy started an immediate investigation, and a warrant was sworn out for Abruzzes' arrest. Abruzzes disappeared immediately after the stabbing affray but was found by the officers about 11 o'clock.

MRS. IDA CROCKER DUNCAN CONTINUES VERSE-WRITING

Mr. and Mrs. Guy Dale Duncan (Ida Crocker), of the Park Lane hotel, Denver, are sending handsome holiday greeting cards to Norwich friends of Mrs. Duncan, who is a native of Norwich. Mrs. Duncan, who is always in rather frail health, writes to friends that she received a big thrill last week when there came to her from the University of Arizona a request from Professor Cook, of the College of Music, for permission to publish her verse, "Nocturne." This he had seen in a publication and had set it to music for women's voices, with chimes. Another stanza by Mrs. Duncan took the prize in a September magazine.

On the holiday greeting booklet sent out by Mr. and Mrs. Duncan the Christmas verse is entitled, "Sing On."

AVIATOR PAYS RETURN VISIT TO NORWICH

Pilot F. W. Murray of Wallingford whose airplane was forced down at the Pierson lot, East Great Plain about four weeks ago, by high winds flew to Norwich Sunday afternoon and paid a visit to Gustav Kudlik of No. 575 New London turnpike, who assisted the aviator at the time of the accident. During the conversation between the aviator and Mr. Kudlik Pilot Murray highly recommended the lot as an ideal place for a prospective landing field. The aviator left here about 4 o'clock in the afternoon and expected to arrive at his home before dark.

SENATOR NORRIS RESENTS ATTACK ON PARTY LOYALTY

The Senator Asks "Who Gave Mr. Lucas the Authority to Say Who Was a Good Republican or a Bad Republican?"—Declares That Lucas Had Concealed His Identity and Was Too Cowardly to Fight in the Open—Senator Cutting Demands Repudiation of Lucas' Attitude by "Those Higher Up"—Leaders of the G. O. P. Have Expressed Neither Support Nor Disapproval of the Lucas Statement

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22—(AP)—Records showing that money borrowed by Robert H. Lucas, executive director of the republican national committee, to help finance a publicity campaign against Senator Norris, republican, Nebraska, was backed up by funds of the national committee, were placed today before the senate campaign funds committee.

While the committee was tracing the source of the anti-Norris campaign financing, Senator Norris himself issued a statement welcoming Lucas' challenge of a contest on party regularity, but asking that "my enemies fight in the open and not, like cringing cowards, hide behind anonymous names or use methods which are disreputable and too dishonorable for anyone to father."

Lucas promptly issued a reply to Norris, denying "that my opposition to Senator Norris was anything but proper." He said the conduct of Norris "has given rise to a condition which amounts to a growing cancer in the vitals of the republican party and it must be cut out if the party is to survive."

Meanwhile, Senator Cutting, of New Mexico, another of the western republican independents, demanded repudiation of Lucas' attack on Norris' republicanism "by those higher up."

President Hoover and republican leaders silently watched developments today. The demand by Lucas that "men like Norris" be eradicated from the party stood tonight without either support or disapproval of the republican high command.

Senator Norris refused to demand that Lucas be ousted, but some of his friends in the senate have advocated such action.

Wade H. Cooper, president of the Commercial National bank of this city, informed the campaign funds committee late today that when Lucas obtained his $4,000 loan at his bank he presented a letter signed "Republican National Committee, by Robert H. Lucas," and placing a $40,000 special account of the committee behind it.

The committee immediately decided to summon Joseph R. Nutt, of Cleveland, treasurer of the national committee, for questioning after the holidays as to the reasons for opening up the $40,000 account on October 23, when another account of the national committee already was in existence with the same bank.

Lucas previously told the committee he borrowed $4,000 on his own account to finance the campaign against Norris and some democratic senators. He said he regarded Norris as a democrat and came to the assistance of the regular republican organization in Nebraska when they asked for aid to fight Norris.

Cooper said he had a letter from Lucas today enclosing a personal check for $520 to be applied against the note and asking an extension of from 30 to 60 days. The letter added Lucas was leaving for Louisville, his home, tonight and probably would not return until after January 2, when the note is due.

"Who gave Mr. Lucas the authority to say who was a good republican or a bad republican?" Norris demanded in his statement. "Who appointed him to a position where he should be the judge of other men's motives?

"If the rule which Mr. Lucas attempts to apply to me were made general, even the great party leader in the white house would have to retire and pursue the calling of a humble engineer. His own conduct shows that he has violated the very rule which he would apply to others."

Lucas' statement of last night, the Nebraskan added, was "an adroit attempt to detract attention from his own ridiculous and indefensible position. I had not demanded his resignation and do not intend to do so. His own guilty conscience is his worst accuser and his own conduct shows that he is entirely unfitted for the position which he holds."

"I have never objected and I do not now object to his opposition," Norris continued. "I distinctly made that clear in my address in the senate. He has a perfect right to oppose me and to contribute money to bring about my defeat. But his sin is that he made his attack in the dark. He concealed his identity. He was too cowardly to fight in the open. The weapons he used were indefensible."

Norris said "no one believes that this man who had no personal interest in the Nebraska campaign would borrow money and make the contribution he made."

"Everyone who heard his testimony must believe that he was using somebody else's money and that he is now concealing someone higher up," he added.

Cutting said Lucas was "merely an employe of the national republican committee," and the responsibility for his actions "lies higher up—considerably higher up."

"The trouble with the gentlemen whom Mr. Lucas represents," the New Mexico senator added, "is that they fail to remember that the republican party does not belong to the president of the United States, the national chairman, and a few dozen members of the national committee. It belongs to the republican voters. It is not a part of Mr. Lucas' official functions to determine whether the republican voters are right or wrong. The republicans of Nebraska decided in the primaries that Senator Norris was a good enough republican for them."

Cutting said the framers of the constitution intended congress should be the policy-making branch of the government.

"The executive branch," he said, "was created in order to carry out the laws passed by congress. Yet the gentlemen who dictated the statement which Mr. Lucas signed are serving notice on republican senators who dare to hold views of their own that when they come up for re-election the republican national committee will support and lend financial aid to their democratic opponents.

"This constitutes political thuggery. The decent element in the republican party believed that this sort of thing ended with the Harding regime. No party organization can survive on such a basis."

JURY FINDS MAJOR SHEPARD GUILTY OF MURDER OF WIFE

KANSAS CITY, Kas., Dec. 22—(AP)—A federal court jury today found Major Charles A. Shepard, 57, army specialist in pulmonary diseases, guilty of the poison murder of his second wife, Zenana, and recommended life imprisonment.

The physician, whose love affair with Miss Grace Brandon, blonde stenographer of Brooks Field, San Antonio, Texas, was bared during the long trial of the case and alleged as the motive for the crime charged, wept silently when he heard the verdict.

His composure regained, he said eagerly that he was surprised, adding: "I am absolutely innocent and this case will eventually be thrown out of court."

C. L. Kagey of defense counsel said he would move for retrial, listing 30 to 40 citations of error in the trial. If a new trial is not ordered, he said, he will appeal the case.

"The verdict," said Kagey, "was apparently a compromise. If Major Shepard actually murdered his wife, he should be hanged for it."

The major nodded assent.

Shepard, court officials said, will remain at liberty under his $25,000 bond until February 2, when he will be sentenced formally at Topeka, Kas., unless further legal action intervenes.

DEFENSE OF THE EARLY SETTLERS OF NEW ENGLAND

NEW YORK, Dec. 22—(AP)—A defense of the early settlers of New England against "the caricatures which modern sophisticates have drawn of our forebears" was made tonight by Chief Justice William R. Pattangall of the supreme judicial court of Maine before the New England society of New York.

The 30,000,000 descendants of the pre-revolutionar New Englanders "are the backbone of the nation," he told the society at its annual dinner.

"If this nation is to endure, if this government is to live, it must be the re-birth and growth and maintenance of the spirit in which it originates," he declared. "It must be because New England ideals become and continue to be its ideals."

Against the background of the seventeenth century, he said, there was no basis for "a popular conception of the men and women who created New England" as "hypocritical professors of pharisaical piety, illiterate, intolerant, bigoted, whose chief aim in life was to eliminate pleasure from the world, whose time was largely devoted to enacting ridiculous blue laws, listening to interminable sermons, x x x and the high note of whose lives was reached when they were permitted to participate in a holiday of witch burning."

"What's that for?" inquired the festive spirits.

"To clear my voice forever—To your health, senores," Lopez replied. He tossed off the drink and fell dead.

Pleads Guilty To Ten Counts Grand Theft

Gilbert H. Reesemyer of Los Angeles, Who Confessed $8,000,000 Embezzlement

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 22—(AP)—Gilbert H. Beesemyer, who confessed he wrecked the Guaranty Building and Loan association of Los Angeles by embezzling $8,000,000, appeared late today in superior court and pleaded guilty to an indictment charging ten counts of grand theft.

Beesemyer waived time for sentence but Superior Judge Walton J. Wood set 10 a. m. Friday.

The former financier said he had pleaded not guilty last week only because he felt he might be of assistance in straightening out the tangled affairs of the company of which he was manager, if allowed to remain here.

With the appointment of a federal receiver, he said, he decided his service no longer was needed. His attorney indicated, however, a five day stay of execution would be asked at the time of sentencing.

Meanwhile, the grand jury had before it drafts of 100 new indictments charging grand theft against Beesemyer.

INCOME TAX COLLECTIONS CREATE SURPLUS OF $47,719,552

WASHINGSON, Dec. 22—(AP)—Collection of $73,637,357 in income tax on December 19 shifted the condition of the treasury from a deficit of $16,740,846 on the preceding day to a surplus of $47,719,552.

While the surplus is likely to fade away again after the first of the year the deficit which has held sway since last September was wiped out by collection of the last quarter's payment of tax on 1929 incomes, the quarterly financing of the treasury which brought $425,000,000 from sale of certificates and war debt payments by foreign countries.

The last treasury statement for December 19, showed for the month a total of $440,932,489 had been collected from income taxes as compared with $471,188,311 in the same number of days last year. For the fiscal year starting last July 1 income tax receipts amounted to $1,051,418,275 compared with $1,140,005,471 in the same period of the previous year.

BROOKLYN GANGSTER SHOT AND SERIOUSLY WOUNDED

NEW YORK, Dec. 22—(AP)—Tony ("The Chief") Bonosera, fourth Brooklyn gangster to snatch at the mantle of the slain Frankie Yale, was shot and probably fatally wounded in a new outbreak of gunnery tonight in the Bath Beach section of Brooklyn.

Bonosera, who assumed the title of "The Chief" after Yale was assassinated, had just seated himself at the wheel of a new coupe parked in front of his home in Brooklyn. He did not even have time to lower the windows when a sedan drew up alongside.

Gun muzzles—large calibre automatic pistols—were poked out of the sedan windows and a stream of lead was poured at close range into the gang leader's head and neck.

Several persons saw the attack and saw the car, carrying at least two men, speed away toward downtown Brooklyn.

MAY HALT ANNOUNCING OF EXCHANGES AND BALANCES

NEW YORK, Dec. 22—(AP)—There was no Christmas cheer for the gambling world in the report today that the New York clearing house contemplates halting the daily announcement of exchanges and balances.

The prosaic figures that are posted at 11:30 a. m. daily on a blackboard in the lobby of the clearing house building have lost their significance to the financial community but are the basis for one of the most widespread gambling rackets in the country. Thousands of persons try their luck in the lotteries conducted in New York and many cities throughout the United States. They play for high stakes, attempting to guess the first three numbers in the announcement or whatever combination is designated.

Subjects Ho[illegible]ile To The Prin[illegible] Monaco

Riotin[illegible]owed the Return o[illegible]e Louis to His Principality—Many Arrests Made

MONTE CARLO, Monaco, Dec. 22.—(AP)—Half of Monaco's 100-man power army was camped tonight at the foot of the long, wide flight of steps leading to Prince Louis' castle to prevent the recurrence of rioting and hostile manifestations which marked the reigning prince's arrival in his principality today.

The bayonets affixed to their rifles, stacked within easy reaching distance and ready for use, proclaimed that the populace's state of mind had reached a point where the present troubles could be treated no longer as comic opera revolution.

Today's rioting was not particularly violent, but it was noisy and it yielded a big crop of prisoners, most of whom were later released by the police. The prisoners still in jail tonight, however, warned that the manifestation was intended to give notice to the prince that he must attend more closely to the business of his realm and spend less time in Paris and other points outside Monaco.

They said no bodily harm was intended the ruler but police and army officers expressed the belief that an unquestionably large number of the inhabitants were prepared to commit violence. Thus half the army was stationed to protect the palace and the other 50 men were held in reserve, ready for action.

Just how many were arrested in the free-for-all at the Monte Carlo station when the prince's train pulled in was not announced, but eye-witnesses saw at least 20 carried or dragged away.

The manifestation which had been scheduled for yesterday but was postponed when the prince put off his arrival until today, was carefully planned. Several hundred men gathered quietly in side streets close to the station while the police, reinforced by a line of school children, protected the main thoroughfare. Then when the train came in they rushed from all directions, overwhelming the guards. In an instant a dozen fights were on and those who did not use their fists used their voices.

More than a dozen persons were injured and a good many people had their hair pulled. The police finally saw to it that the prince reached his palace and restored order.

The active manifestants were not more than 300 but at least 7,000 spectators were on hand to see the show when the train pulled in. Eugene Marquet, former president of the national council, recently deposed by Prince Louis until he cleared himself of charges growing out of the recent failure of a real estate firm, was nowhere in evidence but police declared his supporters made up the bulk of the manifestants.

M. Marquet told correspondents tonight that the manifestation was a "spontaneous expression of the population's dissatisfaction." Many citizens agreed with him and openly advocated that France step in and assume control of Monaco's affairs.

CONFESSES SHOOTING OF COUPLE DANCING

MEDINA, N. Y., Dec. 22.—(AP)—District Attorney William H. Dunn announced late today that Porter Webster, 24, of Alabama, N. Y., had signed a confession that he shot and seriously wounded Helen Dunn, 24, of West Shelby, and Walter Bryant, 31, of Spencerport, early yesterday in a moment of anger.

Webster was arrested today at Stanard, near Wellsville, in Alleghany county, where he fled after the shooting, and was brought here for questioning. He was taken later to the county jail at Albion, where he was to be held pending the outcome of the wounds inflicted on Bryant and Miss Dunn.

At Memorial hospital here, physicians held little hope for Miss Dunn's recovery. Bryant's condition was described as critical, but he was expected to recover.

Both were wounded by the same bullet, said by investigators to have been fired from a rifle. Crashing through a window of the room in which Bryant and Miss Dunn were dancing together, the bullet smashed through Miss Dunn's body and lodged in Bryant's liver.

HELD IN CONNECTION WITH SLAYING OF HER SWEETHEART

HICKSVILLE, N. Y., Dec. 22.—(AP)—A 16-year-old girl was held today as a material witness in the slaying of her ex-convict sweetheart—New York's first murder victim discovered by air.

Starting early in the morning, Nassau county police continued all day to fire questions at Margaret Murray, blonde, attractive former telephone operator. Detective Inspector King said he believed the girl may have been with Stephen E. Sweeney, 22, when he was slain.

Sweeney's body, with five bullets, lay yesterday in the tall grass along the roadway leading into the Aviation Country club. Benjamin Adamowicz, flying low over the club grounds, spied the body and notified police.

BORAH GIVES REASONS FOR SPECIAL SESSION CONGRESS

Aside From the World Court, Borah Cites Bills to Regulate Motor Busses, Power Rates and Revision of Railroad Regulatory Laws—Efforts to Force an Extra Session Are Not Looked Upon With Favor at the White House—Consensus of Opinion of the Solons is That a Special Session Would Be Unnecessary

Washington, Dec. 22—(AP)—Another advocate of a special session of the new congress in the spring spoke a few words for it today while administration leaders were counting the reefs ahead of the appropriation bills they must pilot to port to avoid one.

Senator Borah, republican, Idaho, said that aside from the world court the bills to regulate motor busses, power rates, to revise railroad regulatory laws and the Shipstead anti-junction bill and the export debenture plan furnished legitimate reasons for a special session.

The suggestion of several senators that a continuing motion on last year's appropriation bills be resorted to if a filibuster should be made against the supply bills to force a special session is not looked upon with favor at the white house. It was said today President Hoover had no intention of asking congress for such action.

Some republican leaders in the senate believe an assurance from the white house that no special session of the senate would be called for the world court would prevent the necessity for a continuing motion and that the legislative jam would be broken.

Speaker Longworth said today the same elements that would filibuster a supply bill would use like tactics against a continuation motion.

Chairman Snell of the house rules committee likewise said a special session would be unnecessary.

While Chairman Wood planned to call the house appropriations committee to hear the agriculture department on need for drought relief funds, the democrats prepared to block any effort of administration leaders to appropriate less than the $45,000,000 authorized.

Representative Byrns of Tennessee, the ranking democrat on the appropriations committee, told Wood that a measure appropriating the full amount should be presented to the house January 5 when congress re-assembles.

The agriculture department advised Wood it would be better prepared to submit figures next week, and the chairman said he would offer a resolution to appropriate the funds so quick action could be obtained.

"If Secretary Hyde fails to request the $45,000,000," Byrns said, "we are going to force it through both houses anyway. The senate and house agriculture committees held extensive hearings which justify the full amount. If it is not used in relief work, of course, we will expect him to return it to the treasury."

Longworth said a vote would be had this session on the Norris measure to abolish the short sessions of congress which follows elections.

He added he had been informed the conferees on Muscle Shoals were near an agreement.

The Vestal copyright and the Capper-Kelly re-sale price bill would be given early consideration, he said.

COLONEL WOODS REPORTS PROGRESS IN EMPLOYMENT

NEW YORK, Dec. 22—(AP)—Employment is the great nee dof the hour, and public works are one kind of construction which it is best to rely upon in a period of depression, Col. Arthur Woods, chairman of the president's emergency committee for employment, said today.

Applauding the enactment Saturday by congress of legislation which sets afoot $116,000,000 worth of new public improvements and appropriates $45,000,000 for drought relief, Colonel Woods said, "the addition of this to the large amount of public construction already under way is calculated to have a good effect."

Colonel Woods was confined to his home today, recuperating from a cold which has kept him housebound since Sunday.

He said reports from mayors and emergency employment committees in 328 cities show "they are doing a magnificant piece of work in meeting the problems which have come up."

"This," he said, "is the first step in the program which the president's emergency committee has under way. We believe that wherever there is a need every state and every community must organize so as to be able to meet its own problems first. They must, insofar as is possible, work out the solutions best suited to their needs."

4,000 BANDIT COMMUNISTS SLAIN BY CHINESE TROOPS

SHANGHAI, Dec. 22.—(AP)—Government troops have slain 2,000 bandit communists at Ningtu, Kiangsi province, and 2,000 other reds at Tsingshih, Hunan province, in a determined campagin to end brigandage and massacre, said Chinese press dispatches today.

President Chiang Kai-Shek has taken personal direction of the troops which he said recently would number 300,000 if necessary, to exterminate outlawry in several provinces.

Nationalist soldiers, the dispatches said, stormed communist headquarters at Ningtu, killing 2,000 reds, releasing 500 hostage captives and destroying the seat of communist government. Ningtu, which had been held by reds for two years, was the scene recently of a bloody engagement between soldiers and communists, the former being sharply defeated.

PROHIBITION A FEDERAL AFFAIR IN PORTO RICO

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, Dec. 22—(AP)—Porto Rican insular authorities may not prosecute for violation of the Volstead act, the supreme court decided by a 3-2 decision today, thus leaving the burden of prohibition enforcement to federal authorities.

In the past about 3,000 cases a year were handled by the island attorney-general. Attorney General Beverly said tonight he was studying the decision in view of a possible appeal.

The decision reverses one handed down by the supreme court some time ago upholding the law placing Porto Rican magistrates and courts on an equal basis with United States federal courts in trying cases involving violation of the prohibition act.

1,300 CASES OF LIQUOR SEIZED; 800 MORE AT BOTTOM OF SEA

NEW YORK, Dec. 22—(AP)—Some 1,300 cases of liquor rested in the barge office today, but almost 800 cases more rested on the bottom of the sea off the Jersey shore, where an overladened craft went down while in tow of a coast guard boat.

The liquor, valued by coast guardsmen at $130,000, was taken from three boats yesterday. Eight men were arrested.

The craft which sank was the sloop Elsie, disguised as a scallop fishing boat, which was boarded off Asbury Park, N. J., by the crew of the patrol boat Boutwell. Five men were aboard and the boat was loaded with about 1,200 cases of liquor.

A guard was placed on the boat and she was started in tow for New York. In about an hour coast guardsmen on the sloop called for help and the Boutwell hurried to her side. The heavily laden Elsie had sprung a leak and was sinking.

Pressing the prisoners into service, the guardsmen tried to transfer her cargo to the coast guard boat, but only 400 cases were removed.

Customs men said four of the eight prisoners had been arrested in a previous capture.

The other boats seized were the two-masted schooner Hope Leslie, captured after a short chase in Gravesend Bay, and the speedboat 976-G, abandoned by her crew when she grounded in Rockaway Inlet after a chase by a coast guard picket boat. There were 44 cases of liquor aboard.

On the Hope Leslie guardsmen discovered three secret compartments in her hold laden with liquor. They arrested the captain and two men.

ALARMING BREAKDOWN IN THE RESPECT FOR LAW

NEW YORK, Dec. 22—(AP)—The necessity of force "to sustain the orderly processes of law and order" was discussed tonight by Secretary of War Hurley in an address before the graduating class of the New York police department school.

Secretary Hurley warned the rookie policemen that "since the war our nation has experienced a breakdown in the respect for law and recognition of constituted authority. A wave of lawlessness, unprecedented in our previous history, has swept the country.

"We seem to have inherited a stubborn determination not to submit ourselves to any discipline whatsoever," he said. "It is but a short step from individual freedom unrestrained to the actual breaking of the law. To say the least this spirit has encouraged the forces outside the pale of the law. The law itself has come in for ridicule and organized crime has shown its contempt for it by using machine guns, bombs, hand grenades and poison gas in its murder of the law's representatives. x x x

"I need not enlarge upon the picture. Crime no longer depends on stealth and ambush, on cunning leaders and efficient organization. It now challenges with its own force the force of the law, in broad daylight."

The war secretary declared that "in general efficiency and devotion to duty the police force of the city of New York excels."

THREAD CITY POST OFFICE SWAMPED WITH MAIL

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Dec. 22.—The post office employes waged a gallant but seemingly hopeless battle today against one avalanche after another of mail matter that belied every outside indication and talk of a depression period.

Postmaster Frank M. Smith and his staff this morning faced an accumulation received since Saturday afternoon and including mail arriving on the 6:55 a. m. Central Vermont railway today. Some inroad had been made on this pile of mail matter during overtime work Sunday but the job was only begun when the clerks waded in this morning. The accumulation was the largest for any Monday morning before Christmas within the memory of Postmaster Smith and the outgoing mail is keeping apace with incoming. Saturday, the stamp machine cancelled over 18,000 pieces of first class mail and over 9,000 Sunday.

Parcel Post Carrier Dennis F. Haggerty was relieved of some of the strain he has been laboring under today when Morris Johnson's three-ton auto truck was called in to assist in this work. Carrier Haggerty is assisted by William Gurnack and Adelard Cote and Substitute Carrier William Podbersky is handling the regular parcel post truck.

The four star route carriers left the post office this morning with the largest amount of mail for any one trip in the history of these routes and the rural free delivery carriers manned capacity loads. The star route carriers are: Clayton Hunt, Columbia; Harry N. Moseley, Scotland; Arthur Burdick, Mansfield; William A. Costello, Chestnut Hill and Leonard Bridge. The rural free delivery carriers are George Arnold and William Cummings.

Local Boy Rescues Two

Paul Lavigne, 17, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Lavigne of 54 Broad street was hailed as a hero today as a result of his rescue from drowning in the Willimantic river Sunday of two boys, Irving Caya of 14 Milk street, and Sylvio Coriaty of 656 Main street, both 12 years of age. The youngsters, accompanied by several others, had been sliding on the ice on the river cove near the Providence division railroad bridge. Lavigne had been watching the group and was just walking away when he heard the ice crack and turned to see the two boys struggling in the icy waters. Rushing back to the cove Lavigne crawled on his stomach along the ice to the boys who were hanging to the broken edges some 10 feet apart. As he reached the Caya boy the ice broke but Lavigne managed to get this youngster to the river bank. Meanwhile young Coriaty, who had swallowed much water, lost his grip, went under, but came up again and was grabbed by Lavigne. The boy struggled and both he and his would-be rescuer were in danger when an employe of a pump house nearby extended a long pole to Lavigne who grasped it. Both were then pulled to safety. The Coriaty boy became violently ill and was rushed to his home but he had fully recovered today and the Caya youngster suffered no ill effects other than a bad scare. The water at this point is said to be from 12 to 15 feet deep.

CENSUS SHOWS INCREASE IN URBAN POPULATION

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22—(AP)—The census bureau today announced the urban population of the United States as 68,955,521 and rural population as 53,819,525.

The 1930 urban population represents 56.2 per cent of the total population, 122,775,046.

In 1920 the urban population formed but 51.4 per cent of the total.

The census bureau defined urban population as including all cities and other incorporated places having 2,500 inhabitants or more.

The division of population as in the various states included:

State	Total	Urban	Rural
Maine	797,423	321,506	475,917
N. H.	465,293	273,079	192,214
Vt.	359,611	118,766	240,845
Mass.	4,249,614	3,831,426	418,188
R. I.	687,497	635,429	52,068
Conn.	1,606,903	1,131,770	475,133
N. Y.	12,588,066	10,521,952	2,066,114
N. J.	4,041,334	3,339,244	702,090
Penna.	9,631,350	6,534,211	3,097,139

The census bureau extended its definition of urban population to include besides cities of 2,500 and over, townships and other incorporated places that had a total population of 10,000 or more and a population density of 1,000 per square mile.

Due to this change, and to some alternations in the New England states, 1930 figures are not strictly comparable with 1920.

The net result of the changes in definition was to increase the urban population of the United States as a whole by 284,708.

Had the classification been made in 1930 exactly as in 1920, urban population would have been 68,670,813 and the urban percentage would have been 55.9 instead of 56.2.

The census bureau, however, said its new classification "represented more adequately the population living, respectively, under urban condition and under rural conditions.

Affecting New England, the middle Atlantic states and two townships in California, the changed urban and rural classification added suburban sections of great cities to the urban class, and took from it essential rural sections with no political entities aside from their nearest towns.

To the urban group was added 11 townships in New Jersey, 10 townships in Pennsylvania, four towns in Connecticut and one town in New York.

From urban to rural were transferred 12 towns in New Hampshire, 56 towns in Massachusetts, and eight towns in Rhode Island.

"In three of the New England states, New Hampshire, Massachusetts and Rhode Island, conditions are exceptional in that the compactly built portions of the towns (townships) are not separately incorporated or politically distinct in any way from the rural territory within the same town, nor is it the practice to incorporate even the larger places as cities until they attain a population or fifteen or twenty thousand," the bureau explained. "Consequently, if only the cities were counted, as urban, the classification would be quite inadequate.

"In 1920 and 1910 all towns in these states having a population of 2,500 or more were classified as urban. This resulted in including a considerable number of places that were mainly rural in their general characteristics.

"In 1930 the special rule for these states has been modified so as to place in the urban classification, in addition to the regularly incorporated cities, only those towns in which there is a village or thickly settled area having more than 2,500 inhabitants and comprising, either by itself or when combined with other villages within the same town, more than 50 per cent of the total population of the town.

"The apparent decrease in the urban percentage in New Hampshire, Massachusetts and Rhode Isla is due entirely to this change in classification."

The census bureau said if the 1920 rule had been followed, the percentage urban in Massachusetts would have been 95.3 instead of 90.2; in New Hampshire, 66.3, instead of 58.7, in Rhode Island 97.5 instead of 92.4.

Minister Wanted

Our church seeks a new minister—
We want a well-known man—
And so we're looking through the field
On a considered plan:

He must be an executive—
Opinions sure and sound—
Of course we're all idealists, but
Our feet are on the ground.

You see we need a bigger church—
Impressive Gothic style—
The plan's original with us
And thought of quite a while.

We want a man to see this through,
For it's the only way
To draw the necessary crowds
Which mark success today.

There's Mr. Jones; but he won't do,
He cannot sell the church;
The time he wastes in curious ways
Would leave us in the lurch.

He's zealous, but he deals with things
That must be left alone
If our new church is to be built
Of real wood and stone.

But Dr. Boomer—there's a man
Who's made a great career—
Five-hundred-thousand-dollar church
Completed just last year.

Perhaps he might not come? What bosh!
That job is done; he's free—
Of course he'll come. Why, man alive!
We'll raise his salary.

—Tertius Van Dyke, in The Churchman

A Visit To Santa Claus

Mary and I, two children together,
Decided to brave the snowy, cold weather,
And visit Old Santa, to tell him our needs—
As well as our virtues and all our good deeds!

Now Mary is eight—and I? Does it matter?
As long as I love the charm and the chatter,
Of childhood; and never really grow old?
And never I will, if the truth it be told.

O, the joy of the meeting with Santa that day!
When Mary told of the games she would play,
A telephone, doll and a book to be had—
A fur coat for mother, some golf balls for dad!

For Mary K.—hankies, and silk stockings blue—
Then Santa said—"Next"—and he never knew—
That I had some wishes all ready to say!
But they're made of faith so they'll come anyway.

—Marie Ollivier Rippler, in Detroit News.

DANIELSON

PUTNAM YOUTHS FINED FOR THEFT OF AUTO ROBE

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Dec. 22—Chester Hale and Harold Martin, Putnam youths, respectively 18 and 19 years of age, were in the town court today and pleaded guilty to stealing an automobile robe from the car of Mrs. Marjorie Waller of North Main street on December 10. That night Mrs. Waller was in the Westfield Congregational church and had left her car parked in Reynolds street. Also at the church attending a meeting of a boys' organization were Harold L. Keech and Jack Waller, son of Mrs. Waller.

These boys upon coming out of the church noted a Ford coupe parked nearby in which two youths were sitting. The youths got out of the car and strolled up Reynolds street. There was something so suspicious about them that the Keech boy took the number of their machine and wrote it down on a piece of paper. Following the discovery of the taking of the robe and a package of Christmas gifts from Mrs. Waller's car, the incident was recalled, the number of the car that had been taken given to the state police and an investigation started. The lead proved a true one and the recovery of the robe and package of Christmas gifts followed.

This morning Hale and Martin pleaded guilty to theft and each was fined $25, with costs, by Judge W. Fenner Woodward.

On a continued case in which he was charged with keeping with intent to sell, Leo Ouillette was before Judge Woodward in the town court this morning and was found not guilty. He was represented by Attorney Joseph Smith of Moosup. Ouillette was ordered into court by a state officer last week after a man who had been arrested for intoxication made some revelations that led to the suspicion against Ouillette.

Zotique Dion, who has a record of repeated arrests for intoxication, was in court here this morning, charged with having been intoxicated and with breach of the peace. He went to the county jail in Brooklyn for a long stay, getting 30 days for having been intoxicated and 180 days for breach of the peace.

Leo J. L'Homme post is to open a membership drive early in the new year, Jan. 10, having been selected as the date. A. E. Zimmerman heads a committee of Legionnaires that will direct the drive and has as his assistants Commander Arthur DeForest of the post and Lieut. Ira A. Warren and James Harney, past commanders. Headquarters are to be established at a vacant store in the Berris building in Main street. A chart that will be put in place there will record the progress of the drive and list the new recruits, of which it is hoped there will be a great many.

Elmville Man Found Dead

Charles Freniere, 64, was found dead this morning in an outbuilding near his home in Elmville, a comparatively short time after he left the house. An attack of heart disease is said to have caused death. The body was viewed by Dr. F. P. Todd, as medical examiner, and later taken in charge by L. E. Kennedy and brought to the latter's funeral home here. Mr. Freniere had been a resident of this town for a considerable length of time, having lived in Goodyear before coming to Elmville. He leaves his wife, three sons and a daughter.

Christmas Mail Heavy

Postmaster E. H. Keach and the staff at the postoffice again struggled today with a rush of Christmas business that appeared largely comparable to similar rushes of other years. The lobby of the office was about filled with people throughout the day and clerks working at the various windows were kept going at top speed.

The rush is expected to be even heavier during Tuesday and Wednesday than it was today, and there is no hazard whatsoever in forecasting that the office force is going to be all tired out by Christmas eve. Letter carriers are no less under pressure than the men working in the office. Their burdens are heavy these days, both on deliveries and collections.

As in other years, Postmaster Keach and his staff will endeavor to clear up all Christmas mail by the holiday. On that day there will be the usual curtailment of service, but the lobby will be open and mails will be distributed and despatched as usual.

Following a cut of three cents in the price of gasoline at some of the filling stations in Danielson business has considerably increased. It was regarded as likely that this would happen when the announcement of the price cut was made last Saturday morning. The forecast came true almost immediately, for it does appear that car owners will do more driving when the cost is made a bit easier for them.

Added to the long distance motor coach lines operating vehicles through Danielson is the new one—the Coast-Coast route—out of Boston for Los Angeles. These big coaches are painted white with wide blue striping. One will be run through here in each direction once each week. The first westbound one had a capacity load of passengers.

From police comes the suggestion that car owners who leave bundles in their automobiles during these busy Christmas shopping days should lock the machines as protection against thieves. In some of the less closely guarded places in Danielson cars are being left parked with many bundles in them, inviting the light-fingered gentry to help themselves.

All toys and games half price at Dowe's. This includes mechanicals, dolls, erectors—everything! Just cut the price in two and take them home with you. Dowe's, Inc.—Adv.

With only two more shopping days remaining before Christmas when the stores here closed tonight merchants were expected a final rush of business.

The great Christmas tree on Davis park was erected today and lighted for the first time this evening. The exercises that are to be held about it Christmas eve will begin at 8 o'clock.

Some small bodies of water were frozen over to sufficient depth today to make it possible for many of the young people who are on vacation to enjoy some skating, but it is dangerous as yet to venture on the rivers.

In some sections hereabouts owners of wells are watching them with anxiety. The rains of the fall season have not been sufficient to restore them to normal after the prolonged drought, and there is still the danger of them petering out during the winter season.

Thousands of Christmas cards are now being handled daily at the Danielson postoffice, sacks of them being included in both incoming and outgoing mails. Use of them permits of greeting relatives and friends at no great expense, and the cost is a feature on making them more popular than ever this particular year.

Danielson's Christmas lighting at homes has probably reached its peak, and the effect is very pleasing. It appears that more of these lights and Christmas trees are being used this year than ever before.

Miss Irene Bilodeau of Holyoke is here to spend the Christmas season with relatives.

DELAY IN EXTRADITION OF ABRAMS; FIFTH BANDIT HELD IN SAN DIEGO

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Dec. 22—Counsel for Harry Abrams, alleged silver bandit leader, successfully battled at a hearing before Governor Norman Case of Rhode Island in Providence today for a further delay in the extradition proceedings that have been inaugurated to get Abrams into this state.

State Attorney Howard C. Bradford of Putnam and State Officer Royal V. Scranton of the Danielson barracks appeared at this morning's hearings to present their information relative to Abrams' alleged connection with the robbery of the silver laden truck at South Killingly early in the morning of October 6, and Attorney T. A. Kiernan appeared in behalf of Abrams, who is held in Providence in default of bonds of $10,000.

Although Governor Case approved of the plan to extradite Abrams, Attorney Kiernan gave notice that he would apply for a writ of habeas corpus, that he might obtain a hearing relative to the matter in the superior court in Providence. In view of this development Governor Case delayed signing of the necessary papers until Friday of this week.

State officers here feel certain that the effort to extradite Abrams will eventually succeed. Abrams has a police record and only a few months ago completed serving a sentence of eight months for his part in a holdup of a bank in Providence. He was arrested about a fortnight ago when his home in Providence was surrounded by officers one morning. It is believed that he had been out of Providence practically all of the time between the robbery of the truck and his arrest.

Once he is returned to this state he will be presented in the Killingly town court.

State officers continue to seek other men who are alleged to have had a part in robbing the truck. Two of the members of the party already have been sentenced to long terms in state prison for their part in the affair.

Cardoza Arrested in San Diego, Cal.

A wire tonight from San Diego, Cal., brought the information that police of that city are holding Frank Cardoza, alias Frank Fleska, and Doris Bell, the woman formerly of Norwich. She is wanted by the Providence police for taking a drive yourself car and rolling it out to the Pacific coast. She is also wanted in Providence for buying a fur coat on a bad check. Cardoza will be brought back to Connecticut to answer in the town of Killingly for the part he is alleged to have played in robbing a silver laden truck at South Killingly on the morning of Oct. 6. It is understood that the pair will come back here without extradition proceedings. Cardoza is the fifth to be arrested in connection with the robbery of the silver. He is no relation of Joseph Cardoza who already has been given a long state prison sentence for the part he played in the robbery of the truck. The Bell woman was held for two or three days just after the robbery and it is understood gave more or less valuable information to officers who at that time were investigating the robbery. She was released and returned to Providence.

PUTNAM

MANY PATHETIC CASES OF POVERTY IN PUTNAM

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Dec. 22.—Only those with a most intimate knowledge of conditions through unemployment and business depression realize the serious predicaments in which many families in Putnam find themselves at the present time. While this town is not so bad off as many of the larger cities of New England, there is a comparatively large number of people whose optimism has been stemmed by the effect of domestic reverses suffered during the past few months. Edward F. Girard and Frank Vadnais, members of the board of selectmen, this afternoon confirmed current reports that the numbers seeking town aid are greater this year than they have ever been in years. The situation, Mr. Girard said, is really pathetic and every effort is being made to assist those who apply for relief. For the past few weeks, the chairman of the board stated, the number appearing before the organization has increased steadily until last week, when more than 20 men and women formed outside the selectmen's offices at the municipal building awaiting opportunity to make appeals on behalf of their families.

Mr. Girard said this afternoon that the main reason responsible for the plights of the majority is the inability of men to secure employment. In an effort to alleviate the situation the selectmen are assigning as great a number as is possible to work at the town farm, where they are paid $2.50 a day, and in addition to this, town funds are being sparingly disbursed to provide food and clothing for the needy. Although the number to be cared for is greater than ever before, the selectmen through their careful investigation of every appeal are adequately coping with problems confronting them and thus far have furnished welcome relief in every deserving case.

With Christmas only two days away the outlook for the spirit of the season taking hold of the poor and needy is by no means a dull one. Aside from the splendid work being done in their cause by the town executive board, those who are without means to help themselves will find joy and happiness at their doorsteps to be brought during the next two days by local charitable organizations who will distribute to deserving ones baskets of food and clothing and little things to delight the hearts of youngsters who have little to be glad about at this joyous season.

Midshipman Edward Authier of the United States Naval academy at Annapolis is spending a Christmas furlough at his home in this city.

Putnam young men and women, students at eastern colleges who have arrived home for the Christmas holidays, are: Miss Judith Sabin of Brown university, Providence; Russell Sherman of Rutgers Prep, New Brunswick, N. J.; William Shann of Carnegie Tech, Pittsburgh, Pa., and George H. Gilpatric of Dartmouth.

There were large congregations that attended Christmas services held in all Protestant churches of the city last evening.

The age-old custom of carol singing was revived Sunday night when a part of the student body at Putnam high school went about the city in groups singing the Christmas hymns in front of houses where candles were burning in windows.

The home of Edward H. Burt on Grove street each evening becomes a veritable star field dotted with twinkling vari-colored lights when an outdoor Christmas setting is illuminated. The arrangement is one of the most beautiful in the Grove street section where out-door holiday decorating is steadily gaining favor.

Principal E. L. Robinson and members of the Putnam high school Christmas relief committee were scurrying about the city today checking up on this needy family and that, in an effort to ascertain just what part of the big P. H. S. gift bag will suit the needs of those who are to benefit from it. The high school scattergoods have been busy for the past three weeks, preparing for their annual delineation of cheer among the city's poor.

Rev. Frederick M. Coholan, pastor of Holy Trinity church in Pomfret, announced Sunday that two masses will be celebrated at the church on Christmas morning, the first at 7:30 and the second at 11 o'clock.

Myron Perry, son of Mrs. Edith M. Perry of Grove street, has been discharged from the Day Kimball hospital and is convalescing from a recent illness at his home.

The local division of the state highway department, which is supervised by James Maher of Pomfret, is busy these days fortifying itself for winter's attack. On all of the trunk line highways occasional piles of sand stand out like commanding fortresses at the entrance of a harbor. At the outset of a snow or ice storm the department's fleet of sand trucks will start out covering treacherous hills and curves in the roads and will save both time and effort by replenishing their supply at the numerous sand bases along the various routes.

It was inadvertently stated in this column this morning that the first anniversary mass for the late Captain of Police William J. Jarvis, whose death occurred on Dec. 23, 1929, will be celebrated in St. Mary's church Wednesday morning. The memorial mass will be offered this (Tuesday) morning at St. Mary's church.

OBITUARY

James A. McGarry, Jr.

James A. McGarry, Jr., son of James A. McGarry of Pomfret street, died late Sunday afternoon at the Holy Ghost hospital in Cambridge, Mass., where he had been a patient for nearly two months. Mr. McGarry had been ill for more than a year. He was in his 43rd year.

Mr. McGarry was a lifelong resident of this city. He was born on July 20, 1887, the son of James A. and the late Winifred (Casey) McGarry. After the completion of his schooling, Mr. McGarry was engaged in the insurance business. Later he worked in mills in and about Putnam as a textile operator. Mr. McGarry held no fraternal affiliations. Politically he was identified with the democratic party and for many years was active in the city units of the organization. He was a member of St. Mary's church and was associated with the men's societies of the parish.

Besides his father, Mr. McGarry is survived by two sisters, Miss Rose McGarry of Pomfret street and Mrs. J. R. Elliott of Laurel, Delaware, and a brother, Bernard J. McGarry of South Main street.

JEWETT CITY

MOST GENEROUS RESPONSE TO REQUESTS FOR AID

Those who are in charge of the several organizations acting for the relief of those who are less fortunate than others said Monday evening that the response is nothing short of wonderful. Groceries, foodstuffs, shoes, clothing and money were being received at a number of headquarters Monday. The never-failing Elks are on to their job again. One deserving man with a family, who always worked when he was able, said when he received his bulging basket, "Them's horned cattle worth talking about." Jewett City people in the main have only to be told about it and the response is as generous as it is prompt. The selectmen and the relief committees of several organizations have long lists in their hands from which distributions are to be made. One man telegraphed in Monday to find out what the Elks would place in their baskets, as he wanted to give some on his own account. Monday evening, the vestry of the Baptist church gave the appearance of a department store, with Mrs. Arthur M. Brown and Misses Ida I. Foster and Alice A. Brown the busy clerks. Besides all the edibles, there has been sent in over $50 in cash. The Red Cross room is open Mondays and Fridays for the receipt of any articles of apparel. It is the intention that none who are worthy to receive aid and Christmas cheer shall find an empty stocking or a bare larder.

Don't forget the big reduction on Christmas gifts at Arremony's store. Toys are going at cost. Your dollar will do more for you at our store than anywhere else.—adv.

Stanley Malek is home for the holidays from Cambridge Springs, Pa., where he is a student at Alliance college.

TOTAL DISABILITY CLAIM IN CASE OF J. F. SULLIVAN

The Ashland corporation has succeeded in securing a total disability on their group insurance for John F. Sullivan, it being the first claim of its kind which they have found occasion to collect. The indemnity is payable to the insured in monthly installments over a period of 40 months. This arrangement is most acceptable to Mr. Sullivan, who has been incapacitated for close to three years since an operation for intestinal trouble which has never healed. Mr. Sullivan is one of the democratic representatives in the general assembly from Griswold, his native town.

Ernest Lemieux is employed at Jodoin's for the holiday trade.

HOLIDAY MAIL HEAVY IN ALL DEPARTMENTS

The Christmas rush struck on with a whir Monday morning at the loc postoffice. Besides several ca pouches which ran mostly to holi cards, close to 100 sacks of pa post were received during the The entire office force, supplemen by Substitute Clerk Ralph Wilbur, on duty all day in an effort to ahead of the rush. Postmaster Wi T. Crumb said he did not expec peak to be reached until this (T day) morning. There is an appre increase in cards over last year, approximately 15,000 arriving M day. The big out-going dispatch M day evening filled half of one of big mail vans. The amount of mo orders, going out of the country proof of substantial remembrances the folks back home. The local int change of holiday greetings has ca increased 50 per cent over two years ago. The home town mailing lists so far are reckoned as including over 5,000.

JACK SPRATT AND WIFE RECEIVED THE GUESTS

Mrs. F. E. Robinson, assisted by Miss Loretta Alley, one of the kindergarten teachers in the Congregational Sunday school, gave a Christmas party for the kindergarten department, of which she is superintendent, in the church parlors Monday afternoon. The mothers and grandmothers were invited and were met by Mr. and Mrs. Jack Spratt as a reception committee. They wore a full dress suit and evening gown, respectively, and were impersonated by Gordon Willis, Jr., and Shirley Peterson. Then the guests were delighted with a Mother Goose party, in which every little one had a part, and all in costume. Miriam McNicol was a fairy, Bernice McNicol Little Miss Muffet, Ernest Moran Jack and Corinna Zegeer Jill, David Goodenough Peter, Herbert Webster Dr. Foster, Harold Tomlinson Little Boy Blue, Beatrice Dominique Little Bo Peep, Jackie Whalley There Was a Little Man, Watie Wyatt Old Mother Hubbard, Lilly Link Quaker Girl, Helen Gouda Old Woman Who Lived in a Shoe, Her Children, Muriel and Shirley Pigeon, Mertis Randall and Junior Zegeer, Barbara Payne Little Red Riding Hood, Ruth Mae Benjamin Mother Goose Shild, Agnes Broadfoot Mary, Mary Quite Contrary, Junior Wilcox, Little Jack Horner and Pearl Philbrook a queen. From a lovely Christmas tree, the children gave the mothers a pretty little article made by themselves during the Sunday school hour after their lesson, during the year. Then Helen Gouda invited the guests to wait and be served tea and wafers, which was done by the older children in the class. It was a delightful party, and Mrs. Robinson received many congratulations. She was assisted by Miss Alley and Mrs. Earl Robinson.

Plan Christmas Exercises

The Christmas exercises at the Congregational church will be Wednesday evening at 7 o'clock. The primary children will give a short program, and there will be a miniature pageant featuring White gifts. Miss Virginia Goodenough represents Paganism, Miss Lucile Tomlinson Christianity, Miss Janet Wilcox the Spirit of Christmas and Miss Loretta Alley the Needy Woman. Each class will bring gifts to be laid at Need's feet, and later to be given to children who will not have so pleasant a Christmas. Toys to gladden children's hearts are especially acceptable for these White gifts. Baskets of food are to be sent out in large numbers from several sources, and this Sunday school plans to remember the children to whom Christmas means their own special toy or game.

BETTER COUNTRY ROADS

In the calling of a meeting to consider rural road conditions in Middlesex county, another county is to be heard from. It is part of an organized effort to line up all sections of the state for the much-needed attention to the country roads, and it is not too much to expect that Middlesex county will display the same interest and enthusiasm that has been manifested in other sections. Middlesex county has its country roads which are entitled to better attention than they are getting. There are certain of those roads which, if improved, would provide a short cut for a considerable amount of traffic during the course of a year. The betterment would likewise aid those sections through which the roads run.

These roads do not require the construction of a cement highway but if given such treatment as would establish good gravel roadbeds there would be satisfactory accommodation for those of the respective localities, those who want to get to them for business reasons or those who would like to cut distances.

Sentiment in Connecticut has been crystallizing for some time in behalf of better country roads and there is strong evidence that it is going to be manifested at the coming session of the general assembly. It is a question that has been agitated for a number of years. It is only fair that increased consideration should be given to those who have been going down into their pockets to provide funds for the road construction expense through the gasoline tax. They are entitled to it, but it is to be remembered that they are by no means the only ones who will be benefited thereby. Quite the same as the main highways are now being used by the country as well as the city residents, it will be found that the city as well as the country people will be using the improved country roads and applauding the advantages which are afforded thereby.

Middlesex county is doing at this time only what other counties have already done or should be expected to do in the interest of better highways for the residents of the state of Connecticut. It has taken a considerable time for Dr. Higgins to gather support for his gravel roads, but he had the right idea and it is due for endorsement, even though a bit tardy.

LEGISLATURE VS. CONVENTION

It is an interesting opinion which has been given by Dr. M. C. Mitchell, professor of political science at Brown university, on the recent decision by Judge Clark in which he declared the 18th amendment invalid because it had not been ratified by conventions specially called for such a purpose.

Dr. Mitchell cannot see a chance for the Clark decision to be upheld. He sees "from the standpoint of the constitutional lawyer the decision of Judge Clark is unsound, but from the standpoint of the political philosopher there is much to be said for his contention."

That, of course, brings up the fact that it is on the ground of constitutional law rather than of political philosophy that such a question must be decided. The method of amending the Constitution is clearly set forth. At least it has been so regarded since the days when the thought of amending developed, and Dr. Mitchell points out that article five clearly states that congress may decide whether a proposed amendment should be ratified by the legislatures of the several states or by conventions in the states called for that purpose. That decision congress made.

Dr. Mitchell is inclined to like the convention method of ratification for any amendment. He considers it in keeping with the principles of popular government but directs attention to the inconvenience and expense involved in setting up conventions and thinks that if those objections did not exist it would be better for congress to provide for ratification of amendments by conventions.

In the Clark decision it isn't a case, however, of what is the better method to follow, but whether a constitutional method was carried out. The Constitution does not make a distinction in the use of the two methods provided. It leaves that with congress, so no matter which one is adopted it meets constitutional requirements, and that would appear to make the amendment valid when the necessary state legislatures ratified.

The decision of Judge Clark can be employed as a strong argument for the convention method, the method that would amount to a national referendum, but that doesn't invalidate the legislative method, which not only was followed in the case of the 18th amendment but has been followed whenever the Constitution has been amended.

UNIFORM AIR LAWS

The movement for greater uniformity in laws has extended in many directions. The value of it in one direction simply emphasizes its importance in another. There were the days when special efforts were being made to have it applied to marriage and divorce. More recently stress has been placed upon motor vehicle laws and traffic regulations, and while [illegible] too great speed has been disclosed in reaching the desired goal progress of importance has been made in the right direction.

In view of all that has been done in behalf of simplification and unity, it was inevitable that there should be a demand for the application of such policy to aviation. Aviation has been going ahead by leaps and bounds. It has caused the enactment of new laws. States have found it necessary to protect themselves and to undertake regulation, and as is true in other directions it is found that each state has its own notion of what should be done and how it should be done. The result is that there is more or less confusion for the flier if he undertakes to comply with the regulations as he crosses state boundaries.

Flying is demonstrating more speed. Longer distances are being covered. Faster time is being made. One of those who recently voiced his ideas concerning the need of greater uniformity in state laws concerning aviation was Captain F. M. Hawks, who said, "Flying across a state or two will not mean much when air transportation gets its full stride. In terms of air travel the United States has already been reduced to the size of Delaware. Pilots must not be burdened with a different law in every state."

Captain Hawks doesn't think that there should be no regulations, but he does believe that they should be general, that regulations in one state should be the same in others and that legislation should be in keeping with the enlarged vision of the present day. The situation is one that may well get thoughtful consideration. If uniformity is desirable in other directions it is quite evident that it should be extended to aviation and there is no good reason why states should not be willing to come to a common understanding in that respect.

A CONTINUING RESOLUTION

Indications are that there is a disposition to avoid a special session of congress. In other words, there is evidence of a determination to take care of the necessary business before the present session of congress and clean it up before adjournment is required in March.

If that works out all will be well. If it does not and there are filibusters in order to push through legislation which would not receive approval under normal conditions, it will be necessary to call a special session of the 72nd congress in order to provide funds by which the federal departments can keep functioning.

It is a situation which is objectionable. It ought not to be possible for a handful to control the entire situation. National welfare justifies the prevention of any such development and if the plan that has been proposed by President Hoover goes through it will be prevented. This would be accomplished by the adoption of a resolution providing that there would be a continuation of appropriations for the departments if congress failed to act before adjournment.

Such action would obviate a special session which no one wants but which some senators are in a position to force unless they are allowed to have their own way, even though that way is harmful and unsound.

The plan proposed is only what has been done before, and if there is a sincere intention to avoid a special session there can certainly be no objection to its adoption. If there is a determination to force through undesirable legislation over the threat of a special session the failure to adopt the suggested resolution will disclose it. In the interest of national welfare and with the idea of removing any uncertainty which would certainly accompany a special session the resolution should get approval.

DEATH'S INFLUENCE

How important a factor death is in connection with party control in the next congress has been stressed ever since the election results of last November disclosed the small margin held by the republicans.

It has been maintained that while the republicans appear to have a small advantage, an advantage which has to take into consideration the fact that their strength is greater only when the insurgent element is counted. It is possible for that to be upset by deaths between now and the time when the new congress will meet. Under normal conditions it would be expected that where such vacancies occur the governors of state, losing senators or representatives would appoint in accord with their politics. That is, republican governors would name republicans and democratic governors would appoint democrats. But it so happens that the November election put into office governors who by following their own party attitude would be replacing republicans with democrats, or possibly, vice versa, and through such changes might easily topple over the thin republican majority in the house.

Since the present session of congress has opened there have been two deaths in the senate. In those cases, one a democrat and the other a republican, there will be no change in the political complexion of their successors, whether appointed or elected, but the filling of vacancies in a number of states might be entirely different. Should there be any replacements by appointment in Massachusetts, New York, Connecticut and other republican states with democratic governors the majority of one in the house would fade away like the mist before the sun. While all states do not provide for gubernatorial appointment for the remainder of the unexpired term, but call for a special election, it is readily seen that death may play an important part in determining party strength in the next congress.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The man on the corner says: There's nothing like buying your own so as to get what you want.

Not much more than a week in which to whip your 1931 resolutions into shape.

Judge Clark's decision has made him known to thousands who never knew there was such a judge before.

What luck have the automobile dealers had in getting a branch office of the motor vehicle department located here?

While Vermont and New Hampshire have been getting excited over old blue laws, other states might profitably give some thought to their antiquated laws.

WASHINGTON AFFAIRS

(Special to The Bulletin)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—Prominent among the many reasons that republicans are striving to keep the house under republican control, are the committee chairmanships involved, and which will be greatly disrupted should the democrats obtain leadership. A committee chairman exercises tremendous power through his office, when measures are being considered by the committee. If such measures are uncontested in districts represented by other committee members, the suggestions of the chairman are usually accepted without much question; in contested cases he has great influence, but of course his word is not law. New England has much to gain or lose in the organization of the next congress.

In the house, where the balance hangs by a slender thread, we find that the rivers and harbors committee will have Richard P. Freeman of Connecticut as chairman, by right of succession, if the house remains republican. Freeman is now ranking republican member with Dempsey of New York chairman. But Dempsey was defeated in November and so Freeman automatically steps right into the chairmanship of that important committee, on the fourth of March, unless the house goes under democratic control. If it does, then what happens? Well, instead of a New England man whose broad views not only protect the interests of the whole country, and who is ever zealous in protecting the rights and needs of New England, the chairmanship will go to Joseph J Mansfield of Texas, and Texas hasn't any specific interest in New England, which would be likely to come out at the little end of the horn.

On two important election committees, instead of Gifford of Massachusetts and Beedy of Maine we should find installed as chairmen, Jeffers of Alabama and Eslick of Texas. On the library committee, Warren of North Carolina would succeed Luce of Massachusetts; Davis of Tennessee would follow Lehlbach of New Jersey, and so the list might run on indefinitely with in practically every instance a southern democrat following a northern republican.

In the senate the situation is even worse. Chairmanships of important committees, and places as ranking members on many others are held a'plenty by New England men. Among them are the office of president pro tempore, Moses of New Hampshire; expenditures in executive departments, Keyes of New Hampshire; immigration, Gould of Maine; naval affairs, Hale of Maine; public buildings and grounds, Keyes of New Hampshire; rules, Moses of New Hampshire; territories and insular affairs, Bingham of Connecticut; education and labor, Metcalf of Rhode Island. In no instance would these chairmen or the president pro tempore be succeeded by New England men, and successors to their rank as next to the chairmanship are seldom found to be from the eastern states. If these figures are studied, perhaps they will do much towards holding republicans in line at the 1932 election, for the continuance of the present New England prestige in congress is threatened by the existing condition. It depends entirely on whether the grim reaper strikes republicans or democrats in the three months that intervene between now and the fourth of March, when the 72nd congress will be in a position to organize.

The recent Y. D. dinner given here by the Washington members was distinctively one of New England interest, for at it were honored as special guests men who fought in the Y. D. overseas, or did their bit in marked degree on this side of the water. For instance, Representative Fenn of Connecticut, who retires from congress March fourth of his own volition, was made a life member of the organization. It seems Mr. Fenn has never missed a meeting since he became a member, and the life membership is accorded him as recognition of his patriotic devotion and his unfailing attendance on the Washington meetings. Then there was Representative Connery of Massachusetts. Connery was color bearer for the 101st Infantry in the war, so Connery came in for a big share of honor at the dinner. Then, too, there was Edward E. Goss, representative from Connecticut, who came to congress in December of this year. Goss is a member of the organization and got full share of deserved praise and prestige. And speaking for Mr. Goss, it is interesting to folks out here to know that not only is he a prominent and zealous member of the New England council, but that he succeeded his father, Edward O. Goss, in that position. The elder Goss intends coming to Washington after the holiday recess, and will renew acquaintances here and go down to call on the president, with his son.

It is the custom of congress to send funeral delegations, as guards of honor, to attend the burial of senators and members of the house who die in office. No matter from what distant section of the country they come, if they die in Washington a delegation representing both branches of congress escorts the body to its resting place, as a tribute of respect. Sometimes men who have never visited those sections take that opportunity to make it a travel trip; sometimes senators and members of the house are strongly against such guards of honor. Two instances have come to notice within the last few months. One was Congressman Curry of California, who is said to have requested burial in Arlington cemetery, in order to prevent a "joy ride trip" to California, as he was wont to wittily express it, for Mr. Curry never failed to see and speak of the "funny side" of things as he saw them. He died just before congress assembled and was laid to rest in Arlington.

The past week Senator Frank Greene of Vermont died, after an operation performed in Rutland, his Vermont home. He left here before the operation, so it is said, in order that if he did not survive it, there would be no funeral delegation sent to Vermont as a body guard. Mr. Greene told this to the secretary of the senate, just before taking his train for home, adding, "I don't want the congress put to that expense. It would not help me in any way, so I should not want it done." It was not a "junket" as Greene regarded it, but to save the nation money in these days of need. It is a custom of more than a century, and doubtless will continue. All the same, the senate insisted on paying a tribute of love and respect and a delegation from congress went to Vermont.

The "wets of the house," led by New England and mostly Massachusetts members, have decided to change the name by which they are known. Hereafter they are to be called, that is if they have their own way, from the "committee for modification of the Volstead act," to the "committee opposed to national prohibition." This was done when they gathered in ten new members after the present session organized. Among the new men joining in the fight are Andrew, Massachusetts, though Andrew had always stood out strong for the amendment; Fenn and Goss of Connecticut, all Connecticut delegations in both branches being wet, in accordance with the expressed views of their state; Aldrich and Burdick of Rhode Island, which is wringing wet in both parties. The other new members of the organization are Minnesota and New York.

NOANK'S WONDER EEL FINDS COUNTERPARTS AT GREENEVILLE AND HALLVILLE

The jovial Noank correspondent tells of Capt. Jake McBride's luck in capturing an eel on the east side of Kirk island that was 38 inches long, weighed eight pounds and measured seven inches around the hips. In the old days it was nothing uncommon for eels to be caught at the Greeneville dam that weighed from five to seven pounds. Lots of 'em, too, including the mysterious blood-sucking lamprey, which though nearly extinct in New England as a whole even so far back as 1880, was still plentiful at that day in the Shetucket.

Confirmation is supplied in the back files of the Bulletin as follows:

5-Ton Catch at Greeneville.

Nov. 20, 1874—The catch of eels at Greeneville dam this year has nearly reached five tons. If there should be a heavy rain it might run over that amount. The season hangs on unusually late. These eels are caught by two companies, one being Frank Durfee's the other Barney Dodge's and George Johnson's.

The whole catch is taken by Mr. Bushnell, of Market street, our old oyster and fish merchant. He has been in the eel business for 20 years and never saw anything equal to the business this year. He pays the fishermen 4½ and 5 cents per pound for their catches.

Nov. 13, 1879—The eels have begun their annual passage through the sluiceways at the Greeneville dam. One house has shipped to the New York market a ton and a half within the past 10 days. At this place specimens are sometimes captured that weigh seven and a half pounds.

Shetucket Lampers' Stone Nests.

May 27, 1880—The lamper (lamprey) eel is considerable of an institution in the Shetucket river at this time of year, and now that the water is low at the Greeneville dam the fishermen have an unusually fine opportunity to observe their habits. Yesterday, when the water was coming over the dam, several of these eels came over on the apron, and one was observed to take hold of the plank with the subcircular suctorial disk of its mouth, and work its way slowly back in the face of the sweeping current until it regained the pond.

Beneath the dam these fish dart about in the deepest water and there have their spawning grounds. Their eggs are deposited in nests formed of stones, which they build in a marvelously short space of time.

Those who are familiar with the habits of the fish need not be told of its wonderful power to adhere to objects to which it attaches itself, as well as to acquire sustenance by parasitically attaching itself to fish, whose flesh they consume by abrasion and suction. They first gather together a mound of small stones, and then add larger and larger ones until the stones weigh several pounds apiece and until the pile gets from five to eight feet in circumference and nearly three feet in height. These stones are covered with slime as they lie upon the river bottom, but are thoroughly cleaned before they are deposited upon the pile, and it is averred by "ancient mariners" here that these large, clean, stone heap nests are the work of a single night.

The Mystery Fish

The lamprey eel is and probably ever will remain to scientists a nondescript. It is declared not to be a fish. It appears to be a cross between a sea serpent and a bloodsucker. It has been known to attain a length of three feet and a weight of seven pounds.

Although now nearly extinct in New England, a century ago it used to be plenty, and in good demand for the table. In one New England stream a man took 3,800 in one night.

It holds to stones by suction, and in this way builds circular nests of pebbles. It is carnivorous and parasitic. It sucks the blood from shad, sturgeon and halibut. It has never been caught attached to salmon, although it is found in most all rivers frequented by these fish. It is frequently seen now near the Greeneville dam, but is never taken for food in this vicinity.

Apropos to the reference of the Quinebaug as a salmon river in the past, a writer for The Putnam Patriot thus records the way lamprey eels were captured within his memory at the falls on the Quinebaug in that town:

Mittens Hold Prey Fast

The manner of taking these eels was the novelty of the business. Each fisherman was provided with a long sack or bag which was suspended around his neck, and its top or mouth came close under one arm. He was also provided with a heavy pair of woolen yarn mittens.

Feb. 18, 1899.—

Thus equipped, these hardy men, after nightfall, crept around among the rocks adjacent to the falls. The eels had attempted to ascend the column of water flowing over the dam, but its velocity had repelled them, and by their peculiar conformation they attached themselves to such rocks as they came in contact with, preparatory to making another trial to ascend the rapid current of water pouring over the dam.

Feeling around the sides of the rocks with their mittened hands, they grasped the wriggling eels and quickly threw them into their sacks. Seldom less than a bushel, and frequently two bushels of the eels were the result of each man's evening work. A barrel of salted lampreys in Tolland county were exchanged for a barrel of salted pork.

In the time of Henry I of England the lamprey was highly esteemed as an article of food. A popular way of preparing it for the table was to drown the eel in wine and then stew it. Henry I is said to have died from gormandizing. He put too much lamprey eel upon his stomach at one time and suffocated himself.

Weigh 5 to 7 Pounds

The eel business has opened at the Greeneville dam, and about 1,500 pounds have already been taken. The catch yesterday was 361 pounds. The largest eels weigh from five to seven pounds each. These eels are shipped to New York, where they are smoked and pickled and packed in jelly to be exported to all parts of the world.

A fish dealer on Market street has paid a single catcher of eels at that point in the past 20 years $5,000. The eels breed up the Quinebaug and Shetucket rivers, and come down stream every fall to salt water. The eels begin to run in October.

Hallville Eels Lived in Dry Dirt

Oct. 7, 1889—Fibre and Fabric, an industrial paper, says:

About four miles from Norwich, Conn., is situated the village of Hallville, on one of the tributaries of the Thames river. During the present fall it became necessary to repair the dam which furnished the waterfall for a large woolen mill owned by Hall brothers at the above named place.

In taking away the dam, five eels were found in dry dirt three feet below the surface of the road bed and 12 feet from any water. One of these eels weighed one and one-quarter pounds, and they were very lively and seemed all right, as the men who examined them took them home, had them cooked and ate them.

We place this on record knowing the parties who have furnished us the data to be absolutely truthful. We have in our time chronicled some remarkable cases of eel migration and other facts connected with their peculiar life, but this beats anything we have ever yet known in reference to the eel family.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22— When that one time devil-dog, Representative Maas of Minnesota, the only ex-marine in congress, began his battle over the St. Paul commercial station post office lease, he had some difficulty even getting into the regular proceedings of the house to talk about it.

The Bystander recalls that his first speech on the subject went into the appendix of the Congressional Record under "leave to revise and extend."

What a lot of water has flowed under the bridge since then. As a more or less direct result of the row the Minnesotan then kicked up—and kept up—the committee headed by the stormy Senator Blaine of Wisconsin has been booming about the land inquiring pointedly into the post office lease business.

More Disclosures Yet

Rumblings of disclosures still to come erupt frequently from the senator.

The postoffice department itself has investigated its own leases—and found them far from satisfactory according to Postmaster General Brown.

A five-year program for purchase of all leased property where rentals exceed $6,000 a year, involving a government outlay of upwards of $50,000,000, has been presented to congress for approval by the administration.

President Hoover found it desirable to urge that project in his initial message to the present session of congress.

Certainly Maas started something. Where it will wind up nobody can tell, at least so far as existing leases are concerned.

Senator Blaine promises sensations when his committee reports. But so far as the proposal to do away with all major leases in future in favor of government owned plants goes, it would hardly have been launched under more promising auspices.

The unemployment relief program which is the major subject before the final session of the 71st congress should help the postoffice extension project a lot.

Oppose Leases

General Brown contends that his department all along has battled for abandonment of the leasing method.

"The department has repeatedly called the attention of congress to the extravagance of the present system," his annual report stated.

As an example of this "extravagance," the report noted that more than $2,000,000 in annual rebates were being paid on 92 properties valued at about $19,000,000.

It was the contention of Maas, sustained by preliminary outgivings of Senator Blaine, that these valuations were far too high.

Clearly, postoffice leases will be a subject coming in for a lot of publicity this winter, which is what Maas was after in the first place.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Christmas, And What It Means

Mr. Editor: Do you not think of Sunday mornings, Sunday mornings which we seem to put on like a Sabbath garment, a something of divine origin? Do you, when you go into a church, not feel as though you were in the presence of an invisible being? And as you hear the peals of the organ this all takes on a divine harmony, a solemnity, that is hard to define. You are in the presence of Him who has said, "These are my children. Enter into the house of the Lord." And now, we will soon honor His birthday, Christmas. This is the world over.

A short time since, during one of my many trips back home, in a conversation with a very dear friend of mine, I spoke about having a story of Christ. It was a story as told of the Saviour by one who had seen Him, when as the living person while on this earth. He had given a description as He appeared in the living person.

The following, written by request, is believed to be the only true pen-picture of Jesus the Nazarene as seen in actual life. It is an exquisite piece of word painting, taken from a manuscript which is now in the library of Lord Kelly. It was copied from an original letter of Publius Lentulus, procurator of Judea, to the senate of the Roman government at Rome, as a matter of information. To me this is very interesting and should appeal to all no matter what creed or what nativity. As translated:

"In these, our days, there appeared a man of great virtue, named Jesus Christ, who is yet living amongst us, and of the Gentiles, is accepted as the Prophet of Truth. He raises the dead and cures all manner of diseases. A man of stature, tall and comely, such as the beholder may both love and fear. His hair, of the color of a chestnut when full ripe: Plain to His ears, whence downward it is more orient and curling; beautiful like the sunshine and waving about His shoulders. In the midst of His head is a seam, a parting in His hair, after the manner of the Nazarites.

"His forehead plain and very wrincate. His face without spot or wrinkle; beautiful with a lovely red color. His nose and mouth so formed that nothing can be reprehended. His beard is in color like His hair. Not very long but forked. His look innocent and mature. His eyes gray, clear and quick, and luminous. In reproving He is terrible. His eyes piercing as with a two-edged sword—the greedy, the selfish and the oppressor, but look with tenderest pity on the weak and erring, and sinful. Courteous and fair spoken; pleasant in conversation, mixed with gravity. Many there are who have seen Him weep. In proportion of body—most excellent. A man for His singular beauty, surpassing the children of men."

I have taken it from the records as I have found it.

When that great day arrives, the birthday of our Saviour, what a difference seems to pervade all mankind. You meet people on the street who perhaps have never spoken to you before, and they greet you with a smile. They speak and wish you a merry Christmas and you know they mean it, for it is in the air. It is infectious. It is that something that enters into the hearts of all people. There is something about the very Christmas season. The spirit that is abroad these days makes it easy to think of others. We remember: "It is more blessed to give than to receive." We find happiness in making others happy.

We ought to carry that thought with us all through the coming year. Let the influence of that day go with you all through your life. All this has its practical side, for we read the Lord loves a cheerful giver— a thought divine.

What finer thoughts can be expressed than is found in Dicken's description of Christmas? Numerous indeed are the hearts to which Christmas brings a brief season of happiness and enjoyment. How many families whose members have scattered far and wide in this reckless struggle of life, are then re-united; who meet once again in that happy state of companionship and mutual good will, which is a source of such pure and unalloyed delight—one so far from the cares and sorrows of the world, that the religious belief of the most civilized nations and the rude legends of the roughest savages, alike number it as the "first day" of a future state of existence, provided for the blest and the happy! How many old recollections, and how many dormant sympathies, Christmas time awakens!

These words are written many miles away from the spot at which, year after year, we met on that day, a merry and joyous crowd. Many of the hearts that throbbed so gaily then, have ceased to beat. The hands we grasped have grown cold. The eyes we sought have hid their luster in the grave. Many of the looks that shone so brightly then have ceased to glow. Yet the old house, the room, the most minute and trivial happenings connected with those happy hours, crowd upon our mind at each return of that day, as though it were but "yesterday"—Christmas.

That one day, the greatest day of all, wins us back to the delusions of our childhood days. Recalls to the old man the pleasures of his youth, and brings the wanderer back to his own fireside and quiet home. Here we live life over again and become as children. We enter into the spirit of the occasion and enjoy ourselves for a few short hours. Yet we miss, those others, who smile at us from some dim corner of our memories.

Many a heart is hungry for just a word of encouragement. It costs you but an effort but it means much to some one you meet. Do we not read that a word fitly spoken is like apples of gold on pictures of silver? And when that day and that morning arrive, what memories they awaken in our old hearts, when we hear those Christmas bells! How the dead but not forgotten past, at that sound, pushes its tangled head out between the sheets of "yesterday," and gazes once again upon the half-forgotten pictures that adorn memory's wall!

No name is held in greater reverence than Him whom we revere, and His name will continue ages after the structures of man have crumbled into dust, and are buried under the shifting sands of time.

And now, to all my friends and readers, "a merry Christmas" and "a happy New Year."

C. H. "DAD" SHAW.

Passaic, Dec. 20, 1930.

Norwich 100 Years Ago

The institution of the Norwich Lyceum and Mechanics Institute is undoubtedly one of the most valuable establishments of modern times, The Norwich Courier of Dec. 22, 1830, says. Other institutions of learning, as the school, the college, the university, are necessarily confined to a privileged few; while this in its mode of operation, bears directly upon the bulk of the community. As its professed object is the dissemination of intelligence, so its results have been invariable in the amelioration of society. By providing the means and motives for the exhibition of industry, talent, and the free interchange of opinion, it unites the interests of men, encouraging a habit of independent, vigorous thought.

Under the heading "married," the century old paper notes that Mrs. Eliza Miller of Lyme and Garrett Brace of St. Augustine, Me., were married at Lyme, but date of wedding is lacking.

Of eastern Connecticut interest was an advertisement carried in this issue concerning the approved set of text books for the students at Brooklyn (Ct.) academy. YOUR HEALTH

About Heart Disease

By S. R. Salzman, M. D., Toledo.
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

"John Jones, a successful young business man, dies suddenly of heart disease." "Walter Smith, a former college football star, dies at the age of forty-two of heart disease." These are headlines not infrequently seen in our daily papers. Could these deaths have been prevented? The answer is "yes." Death so early from heart disease might very well have been prevented by proper supervision of the individual by periodic health examinations.

There is practically no other disease to which the human body is heir that comes on so slowly that the individual himself has absolutely no knowledge of the fact that he is not perfectly well and fit. If he were as careful of himself as he is of his two thousand dollar automobile, and would seek the counsel of his physician regularly, it is possible that this early insidious onset of heart disease might be discovered and if not entirely prevented, the serious damage could be slowed up and life prolonged for many years.

Where formerly tuberculosis and pneumonia topped the list of deaths, today heart disease ranks first in the total number of deaths from all causes. One death out of every six or seven is due to heart disease. Five per cent of all the men called in the draft during the World war were rejected because of heart disease. From these figures, it is estimated that well over a million cases of heart disease exist in the United States.

Let us survey the field and see what can be done to lessen or prevent heart disease. We speak of prevention rather than of cure, because, at the present time, we are not able to cure heart disease. Often, however, the physician can minimize the damage done and the heart can be restored to great usefulness; but to lessen the economic loss to the community it is the province of the physician to prevent this disease. In his efforts the public must play its part.

Nearly one-third of all people afflicted with rheumatic fever or St. Vitus' Dance develop some form of rheumatic disease. Frequently, repeated attacks of tonsillitis also produce this type of heart damage. Therefore the constant care and supervision of such diseases plays a large part in prevention of heart disease. After the heart is damaged by rheumatic infection, the chief problem of the physician is to prevent reinfection. Here he must be watchful of such conditions as infection of the teeth, gall bladder, sinuses, etc. There is also the life routine of the patient that must be readjusted. This would include school work, play hours, occupation, rest and recreation periods, housing conditions, food, mental and physical activities and family life.

As to the heart disease of advancing years—it is often associated with high blood pressure existing over many years of time, it is, at times, accompanied by chest pain or angina pectoris, and sometimes by sudden closing off and destruction of one or more of the blood vessels of the heart muscle. The last type of heart disease is often mistaken for acute indigestion.

The heart and its associated blood vessels are working under a tremendous strain every minute of the day. Other organs may rest but not they. That is all the more reason why they should have an occasional check-up.

It is by the repeated periodic examinations that the physician is enabled, by comparison with the previous examination, to notice the earliest possible changes or deviation from normal, and be of real service to the individual so affected. Just as you must repair a rim-cut in your tire at once if you wish to prevent a blow-out so must you repair the earliest damage to a heart muscle if you wish to prevent the heart muscle from blowing out.

HUNDREDS OF SACKS OF CHRISTMAS MAIL RECEIVED AT POST OFFICE

The regular force at the Norwich postoffice, augmented by 18 additional sub clerks and carriers, under the direction of Postmaster Casper K. Bailey, have been waging a winning battle against an avalanche of Christmas postal cards, letters, and packages. The exact number of letters, packages, etc., that have been received in the incoming and outgoing mails was not determined. However, an idea of the volume of mail received Monday, is gained from the number of outgoing first class pieces that was passed through the stamping machine. Over 80,000 pieces were checked by the machine.

Hundreds of sacks of mail were brought into and left the postoffice Monday. Almost as fast as the sacks arrived the mail was sorted and distributed with the result that at 10 o'clock Monday night the force had things well in hand. Twenty men, in addition to Postmaster Bailey, William L. Fletcher, superintendent of mails, and Morris Kelly, superintendent of parcel post, were working Monday night.

Monday was the heaviest day so far this season. Thousands and thousands of letters and postal cards were handled at the sorting and carriers' tables. This mail will be taken out this (Tuesday) morning by the carriers for delivery along with many packages. Pointing to the huge number of letters, Postmaster Bailey said, "This is what late mailing does."

MRS. GLADYS JAMIESON EXPECTED HOME TODAY

In a letter to her mother, Mrs. Mary A. Thompson, of No. 77 Church street, Mrs. Gladys Jamieson, wife of Dr. Jamieson, and a missionary for years at Ceylon, writes that she is homeward bound. Mrs. Jamieson is expected to arrive in Norwich, today (Tuesday.)

"The dream seems to continue," she writes, "that we are actually on our way—but such seems to be the fact that we are off at last. We have done nothing but farewell for over a week now and it will probably take that long to recover. Somewhere in my boxes is the letter I started you three weeks ago—but you won't believe me when I tell you I didn't have time to finish it. I think I made mention of the baby who fell and dislocated her elbow and got the 'flu' directly after. [illegible] week. I did nothing but attend baby day and night. I scarcely slept. If I had two or three hours I got along. Then the first night she slept Billy got it and I was up with him and he was in bed a couple of days the week following baby's illness. Lastly, Girlie got it and had to go to bed. Many times I had to leave the children for visitors for short calls—later, long ones. I can't tell you how busy I was as I couldn't muster the effort, not even for a home letter.

"Then one of the missionaries was very ill in the hospital and I didn't know whether we'd get off or not—but she has begun to improve. It was also the rainy season and clothes wouldn't dry and I had to iron them for safety's sake as the children had colds and fever. It was a great business, that packing! I can't tell you how that was done, really. I didn't get my letter done and I didn't get my exam papers corrected—but still I hope to do it when I have time. I kept the housekeeping with six boarders to the end —I wanted to do it. Well, just as the children got better the parties began."

After telling of several of the parties, Mrs. Jamieson writes:

"Thursday we had a church farewell, Friday a hospital farewell, Saturday a public farewell. Such a farewell as we had, no other missionaries of all denominations ever had! We have had photographs, music, garlands and presents—I can't write it all. We were marched from our house to the hospital under a canopy of flowers and cloth was spread down so we wouldn't have to walk on the ground. It was just like a wedding procession, the covlahs to carry the punthal and the dhobies for the cloths and the drummers besides.

"When we left in a wedding car all decorated with flowers we had torpedoes and firecrackers. Everything but the ceremony. There were 2,500 at the farewell reception. We had heaps of presents. The doctor had four rings and other things and I had a saree and three bracelets and a ring (which was meant for the doctor) and a pendant and chain and three other pendants and chains, also a sunset white sapphire and four pins, and Julia got a chain and baby a chain and I a sovereign and a 25-rupee check and the doctor got four walking sticks and a safety razor set and I am going to get another saree. I got a carved ivory elephant tusk. Billy got two rings and two wrist watches and Girlie two seed pearl necklaces.

"Though I am in Colombo, I shall be home most as soon as you get this. I hope you will meet me. I'll see you soon. I shall have started homeward!

Dancing was enjoyed until a late hour, music being furnished by Joseph Peeceni and his Serenaders.

Miss Emilio received many beautiful and useful gifts.

A noisy divorce is sometimes the outcome of a quiet home wedding.

OBITUARY

Samuel Johnson

Samuel Johnson, aged 95, died at the home of his son, Henry D. Johnson, 21 Lincoln avenue, on Monday morning.

He had been usually well until about two weeks ago when he began to show loss of strength and developed a cardiac condition but was able to be dressed and down stairs as late as Friday.

Mr. Johnson was born in Lebanon, Nov. 17, 1835, the son of Ebenezer and Ruby Clark Johnson and was one of ten children. His early life was passed in Lebanon and was divided between work on the home farm and attending school. At 17 he began to teach school in the winter, doing farm work in the summer. His first school was in Norwich and he continued teaching for ten years in Lebanon and adjoining towns and also on Long Island.

In 1863 he and two brothers, Chauncey and Gilbert, under the firm name of Johnson Brothers, bought a grocery store on Water street, in the Rockwell building, Norwich, and continued the business for six years when they sold out to Peckham Brothers. Samuel and Gilbert then went into the coal business, having a yard where the present Bulletin building stands, and were there for five years. Samuel then went back to farming, on the Starr farm in Norwich, and in 1875 bought the Reynolds farm in Preston. He had a serious illness in 1880 and was obliged to give up farming. He then went into the hotel and restaurant business in which he continued until 1920 when, because of the loss of his eyesight, due to cataracts, he was obliged to give up active business. In his hotel and restaurant business he was at various times located in Westerly, R. I., New Britain, Yonkers, N. Y., Ansonia, Old Lyme and New Haven, where for 15 years he had Grove Hall, and in summer hotels at Narragansett Pier, Watch Hill and Branford Point.

SAMUEL JOHNSON

Mr. Johnson was twice married, first in September, 1865, to Harriet E. Crandall of Norwich, by whom he had two sons. His first wife died in November, 1880, and in June, 1898, he was married to Mrs. Lena Hosmer King in New York city. The second wife died in May, 1917.

Since September, 1923, Mr. Johnson had made his home in Norwich. He is survived by his son, nine grandchildren and two great-grandchildren, also by his brother, Chauncey W. Johnson, now of Dumont, N. J., and a step-daughter, Miss Emma A. King. His elder son, Edward C. Johnson, of New Haven, died in March, 1919.

In politics Mr. Johnson was always a staunch democrat and while living in Preston served in different town offices.

In 1865, soon after entering business in Norwich, he became a member of the Second Congregational church under the pastorate of Rev. Malcolm M. G. Dana.

His chief interest was in his home and he delighted to have his family around him and to meet his friends in whom he always showed a deep interest. Many who had been his guests in his hotels, continued to manifest their friendship and interest in him by sending him greetings from time to time. This brought great cheer and comfort to him and helped him in patiently bearing his blindness.

His was a long and useful life now ended in the fullness of his years and he will be greatly missed by his many relatives and friends.

The death of Harry McKinley Richmond of No. 222 Franklin street, adjutant of R. E. Hourigan post, No. 594, V. F. W. occurred here at 7 o'clock Monday morning, following an operation for appendicitis about a week ago. He was born in Franklin, Dec. 29, 1896, the son of George B. and Isabelle Peck Richmond and attended the public schools in Franklin. At the rectory of St. Mary's church in Greeneville on June 20, 1922, he was united in marriage with May Morrison.

Mr. Richmond was a veteran of the World war and served in the United States navy on board the U. S. S. Iowa. He was for several years after his discharge from the naval service employed as an expressman for the American Express Co. Mr. Richmond was prominently identified with R. E. Hourigan post, having been actively interested in the affairs of the organization for years.

Besides his widow Mr. Richmond is survived by a daughter, Claire, his parents and a sister, Mrs. Ruth Savage. He also leaves two nieces and a nephew. Possessing a pleasing personality Mr. Richmond made a large number of friends, who learned of his death with sincere regret. He was an efficient and courteous employe and was well liked by his employers. The sympathy of his numerous friends and acquaintances is extended the family in their loss.

She was born in Norwich on Feb. 25, 1887, the daughter of Rubin and Sally Waller Powers, and was united in marriage with Joseph Jackson in Norwich on July 6, 1904. She received her education in the public schools of this city. Besides her husband Mrs. Jackson is survived by a son, Edward, and three daughters, Mrs. Neddiette Gonzales, Mrs. Cornelia Prenes and Miss Evelyn Jackson, all of New London. BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Stumpy Does a Little Boasting

Who never boasts is wise indeed,
For to retract he has no need.
—Old Mother Nature.

The Smiling pool was frozen over. It had a roof. That is what Stumpy, the young muskrat spending his first winter there, said. To those who lived beneath it it was a roof. When Stumpy had first discovered it he had thought that it was nothing less than a disaster. His father, Jerry Muskrat, had seemed pleased and had explained why he was pleased to have the Smiling pool with a roof of ice. However, Stumpy didn't think much of it at first. It wasn't until he had become used to living that way that he began to understand why his father liked to have the roof of ice over the Smiling pool. In the end he was led to do a little boasting.

He had climbed out on his favorite tussock beside the open water of the Laughing brook just above the Smiling pool, where the Laughing brook came out from the green forest. He had been sitting there but a short time when Jumper the Hare in his beautiful white coat came along and stopped for a bit of gossip.

"That water looks black and cold," said Jumper, and shivered.

"It isn't as cold as this air," replied Stumpy.

"It must be awful down there under the ice of the Smiling pool," continued Jumper, and shivered again.

"That shows how little you know about it," retorted Stumpy. "It isn't awful at all. It is very nice. Yes sir, it is very nice. I wouldn't change places with you for the world."

"What do you mean you wouldn't change places with me?" demanded Jumper.

"Just what I said," retorted Stumpy. "I wouldn't live on land all the time the way you do for anything. Down there under the ice it is always the same. Rough Brother North Wind may blow his hardest, but we don't care. We don't even know it. He may drive up storm clouds of snow or sleet or rain, it is all the same to us. Jack Frost may pinch his hardest up here, but down there he cannot reach us. Our food cannot be buried in snow nor covered with ice, for it is at the bottom of the Smiling pool and we can get it in winter just as in summer. We can go and come as we like and nothing can harm us. We do not even have to watch out for enemies. No, sir, I wouldn't change places with you sir. I wouldn't change places with you for anything in all the great world."

"You say there is no danger from enemies," said Jumper. "What about Billy Mink and Little Joe Otter?"

"I haven't seen either of them since last summer," replied Stumpy. "They didn't bother us then, so why should they now? Besides, they live on fish."

"Very true. Very true," replied Jumper. "They are great fish eaters, though Billy Mink likes a bit of meat now and then any season of the year. As for Little Joe Otter, he is a hunter in winter when fish are scarce. I don't want him for a neighbor of mine in hard times."

"Time enough to worry about them when they are about," retorted Stumpy with a careless air. "They probably wouldn't come under the ice."

"And why not, pray?" cried Jumper. "Both are better swimmers than you, and I guess either can go anywhere you can under the ice. I wouldn't boast too much if I were you, Stumpy. I wouldn't boast too much. As for me, I want to be out where I can see all around and where I have plenty of room to run and dodge. You can live under the ice if you want to, but I would no more trade places with you than you would with me. Each for his own and his own for each. I think I'll get back to the green forest. It is very nice down here in this swamp, but there is no place like the green forest."

With this Jumper took to his long heels and soon disappeared.

A QUIET DECLINE IN STOCK PRICES ERASES HALF OF LAST WEEK'S GAINS

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—(AP)—Most of the financial markets reacted today.

The decline in stocks, although broad and large enough to erase half of last week's gains, was to have been expected in view of the violent rally last week, for obviously the short interest was substantially reduced during the rebound that started on December 17, thus diminishing potential support.

Weakness of July wheat, which broke to 64 3-4 cents a bushel at Chicago, was a feature of the day's happenings. Corn likewise, was heavy and cotton eased. Bonds developed some irregularity.

The share market seemed governed largely by technical considerations rather than by an abrupt return of pessimism. Quotations sagged steadily, with the sole exception of a brief period in the first hour when copper shares showed a fair degree of firmness coincident with a small price increase by custom smelters. If there were any outstanding soft spots, they were the utility, chemical, farm implement and rail divisions, but other classifications were not far behind and the general net losses ranged from 1 to about 4 points.

Reports that federal reserve banking authorities were to make credit still easier early next year lacked confirmation. With a large volume of funds now out of work, it was pointed out that a maintenance of the reserve's easy money policy would probably be of important assistance to the bond market, thereby facilitating loan flotations.

Weakness of July wheat nearer futures in which the farm board has been interested was reflected by pressure against the farm machinery shares, especially J. I. Case, which lost 8 points. International Harvester made a new low, losing more than three points net. There was also conspicuous weakness in Allied Chemical and Postal Telegraph preferred, both off 8, and Auburn Auto; down nearly 10.

Selling of the merchandising issues carried Woolworth, Sears Roebuck, Kroger, Best and Macy, about 2 points lower on the average. Among the more active stocks, U. S. Steel, American Can, American Telephone, Standard Oil of N. J., International Gas, United Corporation and Union Carbide lost 1 to 3. United Cigar preferred, on which dividends have been resumed, gained 3 points.

With the exception of the July delivery which closed at 64 3-4, off 3 2-8, wheat futures finished steady. The Winnipeg and Buenos Aires markets were weak and small export clearances were reported. Corn's losses averaged about 2 1-2c, reflecting an increase in the visible supply, favorable weather and lower Argentine prices. Cotton closed 1 to 8 points lower.

Far Eastern exchanges firmed in sympathy with silver. European rates were mildly irregular.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—(AP)—Price movement in the bond market became decidedly two-sided today, after steadily forging ahead for three days. Second grade issues that staged the strongest comeback last week showed a reversal of form, succumbing to the influence of a weak share market. Prime bonds, however, were steady to firm, showing small fractional changes principally on the upside.

Stock privileges issues and speculative industrials were mixed. Railroad convertibles showed good resistance to selling pressure and most of the active group held their recent gains. United States governments were little changed. Liberty bonds were steady and quiet. There was a large turnover in Treasury 4 1-2s and 4s, at 2-32nds under Saturday's closing price.

In bond circles considerable interest was shown in the report that federal reserve will follow a policy in 1931 of making banking funds even more plentiful than they have been this year which would prove stimulating to bonds and later to the mortgage market. New York federal reserve officials declined to comment on the story.

It is understood that many corporations, notably utilities, have planned bond issues to finance their normal expansion or to purchase supplies but have found market conditions unsatisfactory for several months. Little financing is expected to appear until after the first of the year. Offering will be tomorrow of a $4,500,000, 4 1-2 per cent bond issue of the city of New Orleans.

Railroad bonds that led the advance last week showed the largest losses today. Among them were St. Paul 5s, of 1975 and 2,000, off 2, Erie 5s of 1967, off 2 1-4, and the 5s of 1975, off 4 1-4; Missouri Pacific general 4s, off 1, and Nickel Plate 4 1-2s C, off 1 3-8.

Foreign dollar bonds were irregularly higher. The government obligations of both Latin American and European countries maintained a firm trend. Municipals and industrials were heavy.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—(AP)—U. S. Farish, president of the Humble Oil and Refining company, in an address before the Employes club of the company, said he believed the present business depression will end within six months and "I believe history will bear me out that at no time has a business depression lasted for two years." He added that "no man will be put out of work, that sincere efforts on our part can keep busy."

The daily gold statement of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York today showed an increase of $4,030,000 in gold earmarked for foreign account. On Saturday earmarked metal increased $1,026,000. There were no imports or exports.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Dec. 22—(AP)—The curb market gave up a substantial fraction of its recent gain in a secondary reaction, along with the big board today.

The list was firm in spots during the early trading, but worked rapidly lower during the afternoon, and net losses of 3 points or more were numerous. Trading was in moderate volume, sales aggregating 864,200 shares.

Electric Bond and Share dipped below 40 once more, with a loss of nearly 3 points. American Gas and Electric and American and Foreign Power warrants lost about 3 points. United Light "A," and Brazilian Traction, about 1. Middle West, Niagara Hudson and American Super Power, however, lost only small fractions.

In the oils, Standard of Indiana, was in strong demand early in the day, selling up about 1 1-2 points, but it reacted later and closed a point net lower. Cities Service touched 15, then recovered to 15 5-8, closing off 1-2.

In the industrials, Deere lost 2, and Aluminum Company 5. The Ford of Canada shares both closed at 21, the "A" off 1 3-8, and the "B" off 5. The B shares have had a less active market, and usually have commanded substantially higher prices than the "A" shares. Stromberg Carlson dropped 6 1-2 to a new low at 15 1-4. In the coppers, Noranda was firm for a time in sympathy with the firmer copper metal markets but closed only 1-4 higher.

Investment trusts were inclined to sag, Goldman Sachs dropping below six to close at 5 5-8.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Dec. 22.—(AP)—Jolted by an immense reported wheat surplus in Argentina and prospective huge enlargement of wheat seeding in Russia, most grains tumbled sharply today. Increased visible supplies of corn gave additional unsteadiness to the corn market. Practically no rallying power in prices developed, and the Liverpool wheat market fell to the bottom—most point reached since 1895, with corn in Chicago the lowest yet this season.

Wheat closed irregular, from the same as Saturday to a setback of 2 1-2c. Corn closed heavy, 2 3-8a2 7-8c down, oats 3-4a1c off, and provisions unchanged to 77c drop.

SHYMAS AND Y. SENIORS TO PLAY CHARITY GAME ON FRIDAY NIGHT

Through the efforts of J. Howard Demarest, physical director of the local Y. M. C. A., there will be a basketball carnival at the Y. M. C. A. gym on Friday evening for the benefit of some local charity which is aiding in the relief of the unemployed in the city. This carnival will include three games starting at 7.30 o'clock.

For the main attraction the Y. M. C. A. Seniors will clash with the Shyma club of Taftville. This game is one that will attract plenty of attention as there has been keen rivalry between these two clubs for a number of years. Several of the members of the Shyma team were once members of the Y. M. C. A. team of other years.

Another real attraction for the evening will be the Polish Citizens and the Montville Aces, two of the fastest quintets in Eastern Connecticut. The Citizens were scheduled to play at Danielson, but have cancelled this engagement to try conclusions with the Aces. The Montville quintet is a strong combination and has been going strong so far this season.

For the opening game of the evening it is planned to put on a girls' game between two of the local three girls' teams. The Y Girls will play either the Shyma Girls or the Polish Girls or the Polish Girls will play the Shyma Girls.

With three good games scheduled for this charity affair a good sum should be realized for the benefit of the needy. The players and officials are contributing their services to the cause and the Y. M. C. A. is donating the hall. Tickets for this charity game will go on sale on Wednesday.

POST SEASON GRID PLAYERS HAVE CHILLY WORKOUTS

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 22—(AP)—King football moved to southern California today for his last stand of the year, but another king, the well known winter, gave him a chilly rebuke and made some 75 cohorts of the gridiron wonder whether the "Sunny Southland" was as pictured.

Within few hours trains brought to Los Angeles 34 University of North Dakota players, 25 Washington State men and 16 former football stars of Notre Dame, all ready for intersectional games.

But while the sun shone winter descended from the mountains with overcoat producing weather. Temperatures ranged from 25 to 40 degrees.

Later in the day leather began to fly on football fields as though it were September instead of December. North Dakota worked out in the Coliseum for the game on Christmas day with the Los Angeles Firemen.

Washington State, getting acclimated for the New Year's day battle with Alabama in the Rose Bowl at Pasadena, took over the nearby tournament park. The All-Stars, minus Knute Rockne, scrimmaged for the game next Saturday with the stellar recruits which Jimmy Phelan, Washington coach, has gathered from the west, south and north.

One more team, Alabama's Crimson Tide, was sightseeing at the Grand Canyon. It is due in Pasadena tomorrow.

Coach Wallace Wade confirmed reports he has been interviewed as a prospect to succeed "Nibs" Price at the University of California next year, but said he has declined consideration. He is under contract to report to Duke university next fall,

GOLFERS START FOR AGUA CALIENTE PLAY

PASADENA, Cal., Dec. 22—(AP)—Golf and Old St. Nick drew a wintry army of professionals and amateurs southward to Augu Caliente today, where Leo Diegel will entertain them next month with $25,000 worth of tournament, the richest in the world.

For the present the majority of the divot clan will be concerned with the qualifying trials, which begin tomorrow and end Wednesday. Most of the famous are exempt from the preliminary rounds except Walter Hagen.

Augu Caliente, where Diegel is professional, requires qualifying rounds by all except those who qualified in the 1930 P. G. A. championship, the low 32 in the national open, foreign players and prize winners of last year's meet. Hagen, caught in a long slump, missed all of these opportunities.

Most of those entered in the qualifying rounds and most of those exempt will remain in the Mexican resort to observe Christmas day.

Among those trekking southward solely for Christmas were Diegel, Tommy Armour, Al Espinosa and Tony Manero. Manero captured first prize in the $4,000 Pasadena open, which ended here yesterday. Playing with the new "Balloon Ball", he shot the 72 holes in 287.

JONES TO SPEAK ON AIR DURING 26 WED. NIGHTS

ATLANTA, Ga., Dec. 22—(AP)—Radio listeners of the nation soon will hear Bobby Jones tell just how golf shots should be executed.

The Atlanta author, motion picture player, lawyer and king of golfdom, today confirmed the signing of a contract with a pharmacal company, calling for 26 weekly broadcasts over a nation-wide hookup. Starting January 14, he will speak from 8 to 8:15 p. m. EST, every Wednesday.

"This will be my first appearance over the radio," Bobby said. "I hope we all have a lot of fun out of it."

Last month, after he completed his conquest of the world's four major golf titles, Bobby made public his retirement from competitive play and announced the signing of a contract to make 12 one-reel educational motion pictures of golf. He is to make these next spring in Hollywood.

But first and last, Bobby is a lawyer. And he has an extensive practice here. Bobby also finds time to serve as a director of the First National Bank and as a vice president of the Atlanta Baseball club of the Southern association.

MAHANEY AND MARSTERS ARE AGAIN APPOINTED

BOSTON, Dec. 22—(AP)—The re-appointment of Hilary Mahaney as head coach of the Boston university football team and his assistant, Al Marsters, former Dartmouth star, was announced today by Athletic Director George V. Brown. He indicated the athletic council deliberated for two months before making its decision.

"The athletic council," he said, "after a thorough study of the entire football situation, extending over a period of two months, decided to reappoint Hilary Mahaney as head football coach. He will again be assisted by Alton K. Marsters and by a line coach whose name will be announced later."

CORNELL STAR MARRIED SINCE LAST AUG. 16

ITHACA, N. Y., Dec. 22—(AP)—Irving Tullar, star guard of Cornell's football team for the past two years, has been married since August 16, it was revealed today.

Tullar, a junior whose home is in New York city, and Miss Dorothy Elizabeth Waite, of Ithaca, were married at Auburn, N. Y., the bride's parents announced today.

BUFFALO BREAKS DOWN DEFENSE OF CORNELL

BUFFALO, N. Y., Dec. 22—(AP)—The University of Buffalo's high scoring basketball team raced through Cornell's defense for a 49-37 victory here tonight, scoring 24 field goals to hand the Ithacans their first setback of the season. The Bulls scored twice in the first 30 seconds and never were headed, the Red managing to tie the score at 11-all in its best bid, late in the first half.

Bill Pryor, Buffalo forward, gave a brilliant exhibition, scoring nine field goals on a succession of heaves from all angles of the court. Len Schrag took over the scoring burden in the second half. Ed Lipinski, Buffalo boy, and Furman, carried the brunt of the Red offense.

RUTGERS' DEAN ENDORSES PLAN OF DR. BUTLER

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Dec. 22.—(AP)—Dr. Fraser Metzger, dean of men of Rutgers university, today expressed agreement with the view of Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia university, that college athletics, particularly football, should not be dependent on gate receipts for their existence.

"President Butler's position is well founded," he said. "Colleges cannot move too rapidly in correcting the evils now prevailing in their athletic activities. x x x

"The dignity of the college and the high quality of real sportsmanship are being materially harmed by the development of spectacular athletic events and the degrading tendency to commercialization. x x x

"Such a league as is proposed by Dr. Butler already exists in the National Collegiate association and ought to aid materially in that most to be desired objective."

MORGAN STOPS BURNS IN FOURTH ROUND

DANBURY, Dec. 22.— (AP) —K. O. Morgan of Stamford, 122, won a technical knockout over Wally Burns of Jersey City, 122, in the fourth round of a scheduled eight round headliner, here tonight.

The fight was stopped when Burns sustained severe cuts over the nose and over the right eye.

In the semi-final, Rudy Marshall, of Stamford, 159, knocked out Oscar Pultz, 154, in the third round of a scheduled eight round go,

Jack Bogard, 147, of New Haven, won a four round decision over Richie Demonde, 144, of Danbury.

Johnny Lombathy, 136, of New Haven, won a six-round decision over Joe Andrews, of Bridgeport.

Joe Oliver, 134, of New Haven, won a six-round decision over Nick Petite, 132, of Bridgeport.

SUNDAY BASKETBALL TO START HERE NEXT MONTH

Norwich will be treated to Sunday basketball for the first time in many years, starting Jan. 4, according to an announcement by Manager George Bisinski of the Polish Citizens Monday evening which indicated that his team on that afternoon will attempt to stage the sport and will have as the opposition the famed Heller Bros. Five of Willimantic.

The Cits have played two games so far this year which incidentally, is their first at the game and have won both of them. Their scheduled game for Friday night with Danielson has been cancelled to give way to the benefit game at the Y gym, according to Manager Bisinski,

GRID TEAMS ONLY PLAY SEVEN MINUTES A GAME

EAST LANSING, Mich., Dec. 22—(AP)—Sixty minutes of play has been given a new meaning in football by a Michigan State college professor who attends games with a stop watch.

Prof. D. T. Ewing of the college chemistry department learns that the ball is in play only an average of 7 minutes a game, actually. He obtains his calculation by measuring the time from the passing of the ball by the center to the sound of the referee's whistle ending the play.

A kick is in the air generally about 4 seconds and a line smash usually requires 3 or 4 seconds, he says.

JOHNNY MACK BROWN IS AN ALABAMA ROOTER

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Dec. 22—(AP)—If Alabama wins the New Year's day game at Pasadena with Washington State, no one will have to wish Johnny Mack Brown a "Happy New Year." He will have had it.

Brown, one of the big cogs in Alabama's football team in 1926, which appeared in the Rose Bowl, was given a long term film contract today. He is one of the few athletic heroes who have succeeded in the movies.

All Brown wants to make a perfect new year is victory for the Crimson Tide on January 1.

ONE-ARMED BASKETBALL PLAYER AT PLAINFIELD THURS.

The Plainfield Pros will have as their opposition on Christmas night at the Plainfield Community house Johnny Hawks, one-armed basketeer, and his Globe Trotters from New York city.

The Pros will present their strongest lineup against this novel and fast organization and hope to continue their winning streak. Hawks, although physically handicapped, still is able to hold his own with the best of them and in every game on the present tour of the team has scored several points.

Hickey's Billiards

In the three cushion billiard tournament last night at Hickey's Billiard parlors, H. Reynolds and J. Wall came through with an unexpected win over the Gromko-Cooney team by the score of 85-80. As usual the game was featured with spectacular shots by the winners. In defeating the Gromko-Cooney combination they made chances for weaker team seem better.

Tonight's game will bring together Dan Lamatic-Joe Lamila versus Tom Lynch and Alex Supilcki.

Opinions of Leaders in Various Sections

ROCKY MOUNTAIN

DENVER, Dec. 22—(AP)—Educators and athletic officials of the Rocky Mountain conference view Nicholas Murray Butler's proposal for an "academic league of nations" with considerable favor; most of them believe his suggestion of alumni endowment for athletics is impractical.

"Dr. Butler's aim for athletics is one for which our colleges and universities should strive," said Chancellor Frederick M. Hunter of Denver university. "All should insist upon the primacy of intellectual ideals and intellectual accomplishments. I see no hope for Dr. Butler's plan, as a practical thing, at this date. There is a long road to travel and realization lies in the distant future."

SOUTHWEST

DALLAS, Tex., Dec. 22—(AP)—A laudable scheme, but a highly impracticable one, was the verdict returned by officials of Southwest conference schools today upon suggestions offered by President Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia university for the eradication of so-called athletic evils.

Drawing fire, in particular, was Dr. Butler's proposal that all branches of college sport be endowed by the alumni and gate receipts done away with. The suggestion drew little support from Dr. H. Y. Benedict, president of the University of Texas. There are other things that need to be endowed worse than football, he observed.

BIG SIX

KANSAS CITY, Dec. 22—(AP)—Two athletic directors in the Big Six conference, commenting today on Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler's proposed "free gate" and "academic league of nations" plan for athletics, opposed the idea on the ground there is sufficient or too much organization in this section.

Dr. Forrest C. Allen, athletic director at the University of Kansas, expressed the belief organization is over-emphasized and said he did not favor the league proposed by the Columbia university president,

Too many rules now mean discrimination against the poor boy in athletics, he said, adding that there is a need of new ideas on eligibility. He recommended one year's residence and proper scholastic standing as the only requirements for eligibility.

PACIFIC COAST

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 22—(AP)—The suggestion of Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia university, for endowment of college athletics by alumni as a means toward ending the influence of gate receipts, found both supporters and opponents today along the Pacific coast.

Brother Leo, president of St. Mary's college, agreed with Dr. Butler that too much emphasis is being placed on football.

He said "It seems to me the trouble with football is the inability of those connected with it to distinguish between work and play. I am afraid the game rapidly is leaving the realm of play and becoming work, which it should not be. Anything that departs from its natural field is sowing the seeds of its own decay. I am in favor of football and all college sports, but I think they should be handled in their proper sphere, which is play."

Prof. William B. Owens of Stanford university, president of the Pacific Coast conference, feels that Dr. Butler's proposal merits consideration. "I take it that what Dr. Butler wants to do is to get away from the dependency of other sports on football receipts," Owens said. "Anything that would assure future development of our athletics so that all students could participate in some form of competition, would be splendid.

"I would not limit such endowment to alumni, but would accept it from all available sources. Dr. Butler's suggestion of an academic league of nations does not appear to be the solution and it is doubtful if such an organization would be as effective as our various conferences."

Glenn "Pop" Warner, football coach at Stanford and a veteran of 38 years in the coaching business, said:

"Well, you hear a lot of funny things suggested. I don't think Dr. Butler's suggestion merits any comment."

NEW ENGLAND

BOSTON, Dec. 22—(AP)—Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler's suggestion that colleges abolish gate receipts by endowing their athletic teams caused only a ripple of excitement today among the institutions in this vicinity.

No one at Harvard was prompted to voice any official comment on the Columbia educator's plan, but officials of the Harvard A. A. thought an extract from the recent annual report of Athletic Director William J. Bingham, was apropos.

"There is no question," Bingham reported to President A. Lawrence Lowell, "that for a time our sports were too serious, but when the number of men graduating from Harvard with honors has increased from eight to 37 per cent in the last 12 years, no one can accuse the athletic department of interfering with the classroom because of its intercollegiate program, it seems to me that so long as we base our program on recreational competition, arrange our schedules so as not to interfere with examinations or reading periods and avoid leagues or alliances which involve schedule obligations, we need not worry about the evolution or involution of intramural or intercollegiate athletics."

President Edward Dolan, S. J., in a recent address to the students and alumni, made it clear that football would not be over-emphasized at Boston college.

The attitude of President Daniel L. Marsh on football and other sports at his institution, was that he did not care whether Boston university won or lost provided the team played cleanly.

None of the athletic officials at Dartmouth had anything to add to President Ernest M. Hopkins' statement on Dr. Butler's proposal. The Dartmouth head said that the proposal was worth consideration, but expressed doubt that alumni endowment was the proper remedy to curb over-emphasis of college sports.

SOUTH

ATLANTA, Ga., Dec. 22—(AP)—Four prominent southern university officials were skeptical today of Nicholas Murray Butler's proposal for an "athletic league of nations" and its consequent abolishment of football gate receipts in favor of alumni endowments.

Prof. C. L. Hare, of Alabama Polytechnic institute, president of the Southern conference, said the Columbia university president's proposals might "solve some of our troubles." He pointed out, however, the school with the largest endowment would be in the same position as the school with the most money now.

"We still would have recruiting and soliciting," he added.

Prof. Hare suggested the National Collegiate Athletic association might serve as the foundation for the athletic league of nations, proposed by Dr. Butler.

The endowment might place college competition on a higher plane but would not strike at the heart of the trouble, in the opinion of Chancellor Charles M. Snelling of the University of Georgia.

"The greatest menace lies in the subsidizing of athletes, while the problem of gate receipts is of secondary importance," he said.

W. A. Alexander, head football coach at Georgia Tech, and president of the American Football Coaches' association, observed the plan might be theoretically sound but he thought it would not be practical.

"If Georgia Tech had to depend on alumni endowment for its athletics, we'd have to abandon all sports now," he said.

COLLEGE AUTHORITIES DIVIDED ON DR. BUTLER'S ENDOWMENT PLAN

NEW YORK, Dec. 22—(AP)—While college executives today throughout the country commented in contrasting fashion, critically as well as favorably, upon his suggestions for an "athletic league of nations" and less emphasis on football receipts, Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler indicated himself he did not intend to unfurl a crusading banner on the subject.

The president of Columbia university, although much interested in the widespread response to his proposals, made it clear he had merely set forth his opinions and did not plan to take any specific action designed to put them into effect at his own institution. His views were expressed incidentally in his annual report. At the same time, he said, "If anything comes of it, so much the better."

No Change Seen

In the east, Chancellor Elmer Ellsworth Brown, of New York university, considered the suggestion "extremely desirable" and President Ernest M. Hopkins at Dartmouth university, thought it "certainly worth considering" but there was no general movement that presaged any change in present athletic arrangements.

While in principle Dr. Butler's comment met with approval it appeared that the obstacles in the way of endowing sports to the point where gate receipts would be unnecessary, and such branches as baseball, rowing and track would not feast on the profits of football, were too great to overcome.

Athletic authorities at Yale refused to comment on the suggestion but Thomas S. Gates, president of the University of Pennsylvania, issued a statement expressing sympathy with Dr. Butler's ideas.

"Anything that Dr. Butler has to say concerning intercollegiate relationship calls for our sympathetic consideration," he said. "Three months ago at the beginning of the football season, we began a thorough study of physical education, student health and competitive athletics at Pennsylvania, and this study is still in progress. There is no more important phase of intercollegiate athletics than the relations of the individual student athletic competition, and we are strongly in accord with any proposal which tends to clarify such relationships.

"We will be glad to join with Dr. Butler in a thorough discussion of a problem that must engage the best thought of all those charged with the responsibility of protecting the interests of that vast army of undergraduates, x x x throughout the country.

"We believe that these intercollegiate athletic relationships are a desirable and helpful feature of American life. Any proposal which looks toward their maintenance on a proper basis has our heartiest sympathy and support."

Believed Not Workable

The impression that the suggestion was commendable in principle but not workable came from schools in the southwest, Major John L. Griffith, commissioner of athletics of the Western conference, was definitely opposed to any new rules and regulations.

Dr. L. Y. Benedict, president of the University of Texas, said there were more important things connected with collegiate life in need of endowment than sports. Dr. R. N. Blackwell, business manager of athletics at Southern Methodist university, brought out facts and figures to prove that the endowment suggestion was not feasible.

Other prominent university officials in the south failed to see where Dr. Butler's plan would solve all the troubles of the present system. Prof. C. L. Hare of Alabama Poly pointed out that the schools with the largest endowments would now replace the schools where the most money was available.

"We still would have recruiting and soliciting," he said,

The suggestion was regarded with favor but considered impractical among educators and athletic directors of schools in the Rocky Mountain conference.

OLD TIME COACHES SEE NO VALUE IN BUTLER'S PLAN

CHICAGO, Dec. 22.—(AP)—Such old timers in college athletics as Amos Alonzo Stagg, of the University of Chicago, and Fielding Yost of the University of Michigan, found little or nothing to recommend in the plan of President Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia university for an "Athletic League of Nations" and alumni endowment support of athletics.

Mr. Stagg, serving his 39th year as athletic director at Chicago, said:

"Personally, I believe athletics should be administered as a regular department of the university, under full control of the university administration. Coaches and athletic directors should be members of the faculty and should be paid on that basis. As far as the "League of Nations" idea is concerned; why, we are trying to do just that in the middle west with the western conference."

Yost said he believed the problem presented by Dr. Butler is too large and too different in various parts of the country to be handled in any manner but the one foun most effective at each institution. He concluded with the statement that he saw "no possible value in the proposal."

President Walter Dill Scott, of Northwestern university, treated the proposal lightly.

"Northwestern would be glad to adopt such a plan as alumni endowment support of athletics," he said. "It wouldn't require a special meeting to gain acceptance, either. But, how to get the money from the alumni? That's something else again."

George Huff, University of Illinois athletic director, made pointed attack on Dr. Butler's proposal.

"It seems ridiculous to me," Huff said, "to suggest endowing a college activity that is paying its own way. If the alumni have money to give they can find plenty of other good places for it in any educational institution.

"Since it is reported that Columbia has a football coach who is paid about twice as much as any Big Ten coach, and the late Percy Haughton was also understood to have received an equally large salary, perhaps Dr. Butler should begin his attack on over-emphasis at home.

S. N. E. LEAGUE IN ACTION AGAIN TONIGHT

Tonight's schedule:

7:30—Jewett City vs. New London Boys' club.

8:00—Willimantic vs. Westerly.

9:30—Stafford Springs vs. New London Tel. and Tel.

10:00—Putnam vs. Danielson.

The next to the last evening of play in the first round of the Southern New England Basketball league will be staged tonight at the Plainfield Community house with four more games listed. Plainfield is the club to draw a bye this week.

Putnam and Danielson, in the 10 o'clock spot, should provide an interesting duel as they are natural rivals and will make a great fight to win, but from the lineup no game can be singled out above the rest and it should be an evening of action.

At the present time Danielson is leading the league with six games won and none lost, with Willimantic and Plainfield tied for runner-up position with five won and one lost.

MIAMI OPEN WILL BE HELD JAN. 2, 3 AND 4

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 22.—(AP)— The Miami open golf tournament, 72-hole curtain raiser for the winter season, has been set for January 2, 3 and 4, despite failure of the city of Miami to provide a purse.

The first renewal of the Fort Lauderdale open, for $1,500, was scheduled for 54 holes January 10 and 11 to be preceded by an 18-hole pro-amateur tournament January 9.

Sarazen has held the Miami open crown for several years.

Worcester Collegians Beat Bantams

Saturday night at the Assumption college gym, before a capacity audience, the Worcester Blue and White collegians combination literally stood the Baltic Bantams on their heads and finished on the long end of a 40 to 23 score.

The Bantams, hailing from Eastern Conn., and seeking victory on Worcester's greatest court were bewildered by its huge dimensions while Collegians were playing a brilliant passing game and shooting the oval through the hoop from all angles.

The outstanding players for Baltic were Deschamps and Depot. On the Collegiate offense Dufult and Mercier were the big guns, the latter shooting a number of spectacular shots.

TWO EQUITY CASES HEARD IN FAST SESSION OF THE SUPERIOR COURT

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Dec. 22—The last day of the Westerly adjournment of the November term of Washington county superior court closed on Monday with Justice Jeremiah E. O'Connell on the bench and hearing two equity cases, without jurymen, which were tried as one after service was made upon parties involved, when the proper papers had been prepared.

The partition suit was that of John Piipari, vs. Alina Piipari, in the serving of papers Attorney Roche for the plaintiff informed the court that Attorney Louis Arnold of New York had been unable to get in touch with the parties desired and requested that his injunction case against the sale of the property desired, located near Peckham Holler, in the town of Charlestown, R. I., should be tried first. It was claimed that suit was brought for fraud in 1929, and the restraining order had held up the sale of land. After the service of papers Judge O'Connell following a fifteen minute recess directed that the two suits be tried as one, as the cases had to be finished today when court session terminated to prevent mistrial, and a continuance was not desired as New York witnesses were present in the courtroom.

The first witness was Linton L. Brown, town clerk of Charlestown, R. I., who testified to copies of deeds made to the farm property held. Howard E. Thorp, a real estate specialist, testified that the recently and well built farmhouse could not easily be partitioned and on cross examination that the land in the 90 acre farm of woods, brush, swamp, and sandy side hill could be divided equally.

Mrs. Alina Piipari, a Finlander, could not readily testify and Rose Nasi was sworn in as interpreter. She said that as the petitioner for the divorce she had seen her husband on Feb. 3, 1929 in Bradford when she had unsuccessfully attempted to get her clothes and had been told by him that he would not give her anything.

John Piipari, testified through interpreter Oliver Force and the testimony was given that he was married in April 22, 1922, in New York. Later he had learned that she had been married before leaving Finland but had told him that she had obtained a divorce. The Finnish consul in New York had looked up the matter and papers were presented in court to indicate that from church papers, which it was deposed in a subscribed statement were used as civil evidence and the parish records were also the civil record to show the marriage but no divorce apparent. The admission of the papers was contested by Mr. Ferguson but allowed by Judge O'Connell to stand.

DISCOVERY OF BROKEN RAIL PREVENTS WRECK

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Dec. 22—A broken rail on the east-bound main line tracks of the New Haven railroad was discovered west of the Clarkville grade crossing on Monday morning shortly before 7 o'clock. Its timely discovery undoubtedly prevented a railroad wreck that would have tied up traffic at the beginning of the holiday rush. The New Englander express, a heavy through Pennsylvania train with many sleepers making the Westerly station stop at 5:53 a. m. and followed by the local coach express with a Westerly station stop at 6:33 a. m. passed over these rails safely.

It was thought best to have the morning accommodation with a stop at the Westerly station at 7:30 a. m. use the west-bound rails and the train was "back-tracking" at the Westerly station, causing the early morning commuteers to use the west-bound shelter and platform in taking the accommodation. A section crew made quick work of substituting a new rail for the broken one. With the variations in weather of hot and cold spells and frost in the air extra attention has to be given to rail inspection. The breaking of the rail automatically set the traffic lights on both tracks at danger where the signals remained until the new rail was in place.

At Christ Episcopal church, Rev. G. Edgar Tobin, rector, during Christmas week the following will be the program for the Christmas services:

December 21—4.00 p. m.—Church school Christmas festival service; Christmas eve, 11.00 p. m.—Holy communion; Christmas day, 10.30 a. m.—Holy communion; St. Stephen, December 26, 10.00 a. m.—Holy communion; St. John, Evangelist, December 27, 10.00 a. m.—Holy communion; Friday, December 26, Church school Christmas tree and entertainment, 3.00 p. m.—Primary department; 7:30 p. m.—Main school. The mid-night celebration of the Holy communion on Christmas-eve will be an innovation in the parish. Carols will be sung before the service. The choir will be present. Every member of the parish should be present.

On Sunday afternoon the annual Manger service was held at 4 o'clock at Christ church, during which service carols were sung, including "Everywhere, Everywhere, Christmas Tonight." Rev. G. Edgar Tobin, rector of the church, gave a short talk to the children. A procession was then formed and the children filed up to the manger in which each boy and girl placed a gift to be sent to the children at St. Mary's home on Fruit Hill in North Providence.

VINCENT HANCOCK FINALLY FREED BY FEDERAL COURT AT NEW LONDON

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Dec. 22.— Vincent Hancock, Highland, N. J., charged with smuggling and conspiracy against the federal government, was presented before United States Commissioner Russell H. Corcoran this afternoon. The agents of the department of justice, who brought about Hancock's arrest, failing to establish identification of the accused as contained in the indictment, Hancock was discharged. Hancock was arrested by Automobile Patrol Officer Elwood Bailey several weeks ago. He had been in New London at divers times and with two companions. They were possessed of large sums of money and even deposited $14,000 at one time with the clerk at a State street hotel for safe-keeping. The men were suspected of being the heads of a large liquor running ring and their movements were watched for several days by local police, state police and prohibition enforcement agents. Hancock and one of his companions were even taken to police headquarters and quizzed as to the purpose of their visit to New London, but nothing incriminating was divulged to the investigators. After remaining two or three days longer, all but one of the gang, including Hancock, departed and the following day the department of justice requested Hancock's arrest. A few days later Officer Bailey found Hancock and his wife and child in an automobile on Broad street and the arrest was made, Mrs. Hancock and child continuing, they said, to Hartford. The case has been continued two or three times since the arrest and identification failing to be established today, there was nothing to do but to order Hancock's discharge.

The five men comprising the crew of the speed boat Happy Parrot, seized off this port several weeks ago by a United States coast guard patrol boat charged with being a rum-runner, were presented before United States Commissioner Russell H. Corcoran at the customs house this afternoon. For lack of evidence to corroborate the charge the men were ordered discharged.

A daughter born tonight to Mr. and Mrs. Elmer E. Holmes of 40 Summer street, New London, arrived on the date of birth of her grandmother.

Hilton, a private in the marine corps, who was on duty in the military highway and in front of the submarine base. The truck was owned by Adam Rogeske, of Jewett City.

LOUIS ELDRIDGE, MESSENGER, CRUSHED BY BIG TRUCK

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Dec. 22—Louis Eldridge, 18, son of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Eldridge, 10 Bulkeley place and employed as a messenger boy by the Western Union Telegraph company, was instantly killed this morning when crushed beneath a five-ton truck, owned and operated by Wells Geer, of 37 Franklin street. The fatality occurred on the approach of the Thames river highway bridge in Groton. Geer was arrested by State Police Officer Arthur Kaith charged with manslaughter, but was released upon providing a surety on his bond of $2,500.

The boy had delivered a message to a Groton resident and was riding his bicycle back to New London. When approaching the bridge a line of traffic had to come to a stop and the youth was also compelled to halt, stopping his wheel in the rear of a pleasure car. While the boy remained astride of the cycle and with one foot either side of the wheel to hold it in position, the truck, laden with stone and gravel and en route to this city crashed against the wheel. Eldridge was hurled to the highway and before the truck could be stopped, the messenger was crushed to death, the front wheel of the truck passing over the boy's head, the skull being crushed. The state police were notified and Officer Kaith was assigned to the case, while other officers took charge of regulating traffic. Medical Examiner Frank Hewes was notified, as was Coroner Edward G. McKay, of Norwich and both officials visited the location of the fatality. Later Coroner McKay ordered the body removed to an undertaking establishment.

Coroner McKay continued his investigation and it is believed that he will render a finding within a few days, determining whether Geer is criminally responsible for the death of the boy.

THOMAS BURNAGE FOUND FROZEN NEAR THE WELL

Death having been caused by heart disease, the body of Thomas Burnage, 81, body and clothing frozen, was found Sunday afternoon in the yard of Burnage's home, near the Crystal Spring farm, between Niantic and Flanders. Burnage had been dead since last Friday, according to Medical Examiner F. W. Dart and probably succumbed a day or two before because of the wet condition of the man's clothing. He was dead last Friday when a heavy fall of rain prevailed, but how much longer the lifeless body had been in the yard is not known. He was last seen on Wednesday. Burnage, who had been employed several years as a laborer, apparently came to his death when going to a well after water, for the body was found close to the well. It was found by an owner of a nearby farm, who went to Burnage's home because the aged man had not been observed about the farm for several days.

Free Milk For The Needy

The B. P. Learned mission, under the supervision of Supt. Richard W. Mansfield, is distributing 30 gallons of milk daily to the city's needy, the distribution being made at the mission. But one quart is allowed to an applicant. The milk is the same quality that has been supplied Connecticut College for Women, but because of the absence of the students from the city, the surplus milk being available, the company supplying the milk donated it to the mission.

Police Force Generous

The members of the New London police department today completed the payment of the first assessment of $2 monthly for each officer, which money will be expended in paying for the necessities of life for the city's unemployed. The money contributed for this worthy cause is $106.

Charge Against Taftville Man

George U. Smith, Taftville, was arrested by State Police Officer Arthur Whitmarsh Saturday in Stonington, charged with driving while under the influence of liquor and will be presented in the Stonington town court today (Tuesday).

Wine-Maker Freed

Luigi Mergistle, P. O. Box 69, Groton, was presented in the police court today, charged with violation of the liquor law, the specific charge being illegal possession. When the evidence was concluded, which was by the accused and the arresting officer, Patrolman Dennis Murphy, Judge Daniel M. Cronin adjudged Mergistle not guilty. Mergistle came to New London Sunday morning about 7 o'clock and at a time Murphy was standing at the corner of Main and John streets. The officer did not observe Mergistle until the latter was seen to step from behind a small truck and upon the sidewalk of John street, between Main and North Bank streets. Mergistle carried a canvas bag and as it appeared weighty, the officer suspected that it contained liquor. He followed the Grotonite to Potter street and there questioned him as to the contents of the bag. Mergistle said that the bag contained overalls and tools, but the man was escorted to police headquarters where a search of the bag revealed that it contained four quarts of home-made wine and a quart of aniset. In giving his testimony, Mergistle said that he was employed at the Electric Boat company, but on Sundays of late he had been employed in Waterford and that he was on his way to board a bus to go to the employment when he was arrested. He said that he had made the wine at his home and that he intended to give it to his employer. As there was no contradictory evidence introduced, nor was there any evidence submitted to indicate that Mergistle intended to sell his product, Judge Cronin found the man not guilty.

Gets Suspended Sentence

Albert J. Richard, married, a carpenter residing at 7 Connecticut avenue, was charged with theft. He pleaded guilty and was fined $10, but execution of the sentence was suspended. In making his decision to refrain from sending Richard to jail, Judge Cronin imparted the information that if Richard again came before the court a jail sentence would be imposed. Richard was intoxicated Saturday night, went to the gasoline filling station of Joseph Serrigno, Bank street, where he created a disturbance. When Richard refused to leave Serrigno departed in search of a police officer and upon returning to the station with Serrigno, the latter entered the building while Patrolman Henry Sylvia was admonishing Richard for his conduct. Serrigno upon opening the cash register discovered that it had been robbed of $8 while the owner had been absent. A search of Richard revealed the existence of the money and Richard was locked up.

Andrew Chafkowsky, 171 North Bank street, employed as a laborer at Fishers Island, was charged with intoxication. He was sentenced to 10 days in jail, but execution of the sentence was suspended. Chafkowsky was drunk Saturday night and went to the Fishers Island Navigation company's pier where he staggered around until he fell into the Thames river. Railroad employes gave the alarm and the laborer was pulled from the river by means of a rope. He was then arrested by Patrolman Harold Goldberg.

Fined $10 And Costs

Nicholas Halifeteras, 48 Reed street, a laurel dealer, was charged with breach of the peace and fined $10 and costs. Halifeteras was arrested Friday night upon complaint of William Watrous, 39 Hamilton street, after the latter had been attacked on Reed street by Halifeteras because of the allegation that Watrous owed the laurel collector $10. When the case was called in court Saturday Watrous failed to appear as a witness against Halifeteras so the case was adjourned until today that Watrous could be compelled to be in court and give testimony.

A man who claimed to be a stranger in New London and who had not been arrested here before, was charged with intoxication. He was given suspension of judgment because he said that he had been employed in Norwich and that he had been promised additional work there today, providing conditions warranted a continuance of his employment.

Wendall T. Palmer, Waterford youth charged with reckless driving, was given suspension of judgment. The youth was arrested on Ocean avenue late last night when he was discovered by Automobile Patrol Officer Clarence Martin driving on the sidewalk between Glenwood and Neptune avenues.

Held Up Traffic

Oscar Russell, 6 Morse avenue, Groton, was arrested this afternoon by Automobile Patrol Officer William Corcoran, charged with blocking traffic on State street. He was ordered to present himself in the police court tomorrow. Russell parked his car in such a manner as to cause a blockade of trolley and automobile traffic eight minutes, at a time when the street was congested with Christmas shoppers.

A Chevrolet automobile, owned by H. H. Rafferty of Morgan street, was stolen last night while the owner parked it in front of the First Christian Science chu[illegible] [illegible]r of Hempstead and Grant [illegible] It was recovered several [illegible] later, found abandoned on Su[illegible]eet.

Nothing Takes The Place Of FRESHEST!
Taste The Difference!

Always INSIST ON NEW ENGLAND DRESSED ~ FRESH PORK

It Is Fully As Important
To Insist On Fresh Pork
. . . . As On Fresh Eggs

When you use eggs in your kitchen or on your table—you are confident that they are the freshest you can buy—that they have been delivered to you within a day or two of the time they are laid. You buy them that way because they are better, because NOTHING TAKES THE PLACE OF FRESHEST.

You will find that New England Dressed Fresh Pork offers the same natural freshness—you know it is delivered to your dealer within 24 hours after being cut from the choicest Corn Fed Porkers brought on alive from the Grain Belt, and dressed under U. S. Government Inspection. When you serve New England Dressed Fresh Pork—you and your family will Taste The Difference. Tender, sweet, pure, nutritious meat.

In Pork, as in Eggs, NOTHING TAKES THE PLACE OF FRESHEST.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Strand Theatre

Those rib-tickling funny men, Moran and Mack, the Two Black Crows, are doing their stuff all this week at the Strand theatre in "Anybody's War," a screamingly comical comedy-romance.

"Anybody's War' is the story of two Tennessee darkies who are suddenly whisked into the excitement of the big scrap, and who encounter a number of amusing adventures in the trenches. The romantic interest is supplied by Neil Hamilton and Joan Peers, boy and girl from the same town in Tennessee who also become embroiled in the farcical embroglio.

Others in the cast are Walter Weems, veteran blackface trouper and writer, as the sepia sergeant with the tough manners; Walter McGrail as the villain; Betty Farrington as a "cullud gal"; Charles Sellon and Guy Oliver.

Palace Theatre.

A holiday bill of unusual merit is offered at the Palace starting tomorrow and running through Friday, headed by the latest and greatest Victor McLaglen picture, "A Devil with Women."

The picture shows a new McLaglen, a more human and infinitely more likeable character than in anything he has done since "The Black Watch." A typical soldier of fortune, a captain in the federal army of a little banana republic, the star's role is made particularly convincing by reason of its similarity to his own past career. He merely has to "be himself," and he makes a splendid job of it.

Mona Maris carves a new niche for herself as the alluring heroine and a newcomer to the screen, Humphrey Bogart, is thoroughly pleasing as the young American tourist whose rivalry with the stalwart McLaglen over the various senoritas they encounter affords much of the merriment and action of the picture. Michael Vavitch, as the rebel bandit, and Luana Alcaniz in the role of his sweetheart, are two who cause McLaglen no end of trouble.

Co-featured on the same bill is "The Storm" a strange story of a strange land. Tempestously lovely LupeVelez has the leading role, with her is featured Paul Cavanagh and Wm. Boyd, two of the most distinguished actors of the stage and screen. The central situation of "The Storm" is sufficiently dramatic in itself. Two men, old friends are penned up in a snow storm bound cabin in the Canadian wilds with the girl whom both love. While death by starvation closes down on all three, the love hunger in the hearts of men hourly brings each other closer and closer to each other's throat.

Tol'able David is shown for the last times today together with a bill of fine shorts.

New England Products

Encouraged by the enthusiastic public response to their educational campaign during 1930 on products of New England Dressed Fresh Pork, five New England Packers, John P. Squire & Company of Boston, North Packing and Provision Company of Boston, White, Pevey and Dexter Company of Worcester, Springfield Provision Company of Springfield, and Sperry and Barnes Company of New Haven, Connecticut, have embarked on their second year of intensive advertising of New England Dressed Fresh Pork with a largely increased list of daily papers as well as other mediums. Their slogan, "Nothing Takes The Place of Freshest" succinctly describes the message they are bringing home to the New England housewife. The choicest corn-fed porkers, raised in the grain belt of the west are brought on here alive, fed and watered carefully on the way, dressed under U. S. government inspection and the cuts branded and distributed to the local markets throughout New England within 24 hours after cutting. This means New Englanders are able to buy pork that is truly fresh and most enjoyable for "Nothing Takes The Place of Freshest."

This campaign most ably backs up the work of the New England Council so earnestly striving for the success of our New England well afford to study the campaign of these five pork packing companies, and apply some of the cardinal principles to putting new fire and energy in their own business.

Broadway Theatre

The difficulty of being studiously funny never is more pronounced than in comic stunt flying, and never has there been such comic stunt flying as in "Going Wild," the hilarious aviation comedy which comes to the Broadway theatre tomorrow for a three days run.

To the ordinary difficulties is added real danger, danger of death, and such daredevil pilots as Frank Clarke and his troupe of "flying fools" were the only group who would accept the hazardous task of risking their necks to make movie audiences laugh.

In "Going Wild," Joe E. Brown, the talkies' leading comedian, plays the part of a newspaper man who is mistaken for the author of a famous book on aviation. Events—including his falling in love—force him to continue the pose and to agree to fly a plane in an unlimited speed race. Obviously a man who never had been in a plane before, like the newspaper man role Joe plays, could not be expected to do the miraculous and master aeronautical technique overnight. And thus when he takes off in the race he flies crazily in a way to thrill audiences as well as to make them roar with laughter.

Joe was well suited to the part, inasmuch as he never had been in a plane before "Going Wild" was filmed. (Subsequently he has been up several times with Laura Lee, a member of the cast who holds a limited pilot's license.) It was necessary, therefore, to let Frank Clarke, famous stunter, pilot the plane which the newspaper man is supposed to be flying.

The usual stunts were part of Clark's routine, as was to be expected, but in addition Frank had to be funny. He had to make his plane behave as a plane should behave in the hands of a man who never had flown. Frank's job was to do on purpose all the insane things a "groundling" would do by accident. Fast falling-leaves, mad zooms, unconscious Immelman turns, nose-dives and tailspins, all were rehearsed with humor in view.

To complicate the plans of the pilots, an aviation patrolman saw Frank Clarke's plane stunting over an isolated landing field, which was the basis of the difficulties and consequences. The air cop took off, all unaware that permission had been granted for the stunts. As is customary, the patrolman's tactics with the reckless pilot were to "chase him out of the air," force him to land and hand him a summons.

But he reckoned without the ability of Frank Clarke and his merrie men. They spotted the patrolman's insignia on the fuselage and instead of landing, they stuck aloft and unconsciously he took part in the picture because Director William A. Seiter, who sensed the situation from afar, ordered the cameramen to keep grinding away. The result was some very effective and very funny flying. Then the entire group landed and the permit was shown to the patrolman. He told Mr. Seiter that the least he expected for his good work was the day's salary of an extra!

Even with the uninvited assistance from the minion of the law, however, it was no easy task to make those air sequences that will thrill your spine and tickle your funny-bone at the Broadway theatre. And you will like Laura Lee, Lawrence Gray, Walter Pidgeon, Ona Munson and Frank McHugh, among others of a notable cast.

NORWICH TOWN

FILLING IN LONG DITCH ON FORMER FANNING POND

On the land of Roswell J. P. Brown, of Oneco street, a very large ditch has recently been dug which is gradually being filled in by residents in that section. The ditch has a depth from sixteen to eighteen feet and covers a long stretch of Mr. Brown's land on what was formerly known as Fanning pond, the location being between Fanning avenue and Oneco street. It is the desire of Mr. Brown to have the ditch filled in if possible by next spring and he has offered residents of Norwich Town the privilege of emptying tin cans, ashes and garbage there, providing everything is put inside the ditch, which was originally dug to procure some valuable soil for other parts of Mr. Brown's land. The approach would be at the right of the rustic summer house near that end of Oneco street which branches off from Lafayette street, not far from Backus hospital.

GIRL SCOUTS MAKE PLANS FOR CHRISTMAS GIVING

The Christmas tree which the Girl Scouts planted at Chelsea parade in honor of Mrs. Juliette Low's birthday Oct. 29, has been lighted for the Christmas season. The tree characterizes the scout movement in Norwich from a small beginning with the hope that it will grow straight and strong as the scouts themselves with a life of fullness and pleasure for others.

Christmas eve at 6:30 o'clock all the Girl Scouts of the city will meet at the tree and sing Christmas carols. The public has been extended an invitation to attend and join in the singing. After the singing at the tree the troops will sing carols for shutins and at the homes of friends of scouting.

December has been a busy month for the Girl Scouts. Troop 1 has been selling baskets for the needy and dressing dolls to be distributed among children less fortunate than themselves. Troop No. 2 members are filling boxes for children at the Newington home in Hartford. It is interesting to know that one of the little girls who will receive a box is a Girl Scout. Her box will be filled with gifts that any Girl Scout would be pleased to find on Christmas morning. Troop No. 3 has had a Christmas sale. Troop No. 4 will be the hostesses to the inmates of the Riverside home Sunday at a Christmas party. The girls have planned an appropriate programme and dainty refreshments will be served.

Friday night Troop No. 5 gave two enjoyable plays, the proceeds of which will be spent on gifts for the children at the county home. The scouts have planned a Christmas tree for the children and there will be games and songs and a general good time. Troop No. 5 has collected toys to be given to the Diocesan Bureau for distribution. Troop No. 9 has made all sorts and kinds of animals to be given to the United Workers.

WHEN "CHRISTMAS MAN" VISITS GIRL SCOUTS

Mrs. James J. Dutton, chairman of the publicity committee of the Norwich Council of Girl Scouts has received a bulletin from the Girl Scout news bureau at New York city, which has to do with the Christmas season of the Girl Scouts living in Uolo, Suomi-Finland. The bulletin which is of interest to the Norwich Girl Scouts, says:

Sleighs drawn by reindeer will jostle modern motor-cars, when Girl Scouts of North Finland drive through the dark on Christmas morning to attend the early service in their churches.

This and other colorful customs are described in intimate detail in a letter just received by a New York Girl Scout from her correspondent-friend, Aino, who lives in Uolo, Suomi-Finland.

The celebration of the festival begins, Aino writes, with a feast consisting of rice porridge and sweets, served by small "Robin Goodfellows" in grey overalls and red tasselled caps, from which hang tinkling bells. In the corner of the dining room will be a candle-lit Christmas tree. Rows of candles will light the long dining tables, and the walls will be hung with "snowballs" of cottonwool.

While the feast is in progress, the "Christmas Man" who, according to the Finns, comes from Lapland, will visit the girls, offer greetings and distribute small gifts. He will be followed by the "Star Boys" who will supply the entertainment.

SANTA CLAUS VISITS FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH

The annual Christmas party and entertainment of the Sunday school of the First Baptist church, Rev. P. A. Kilmister, pastor, was held at the church Monday evening from 7:30 to 9 o'clock, with a large attendance. The Sunday school rooms were attractively decorated, with a large and attractively trimmed Christmas tree in a conspicuous place. Gifts, candy, etc., were distributed by Santa Claus impersonated by Richard Kyle.

A delightful programme of entertainment, in charge of the junior class, Miss Edna Jones, teacher, included a Christmas sketch by members of the class. A violin duet was rendered by Dorothy Clark and Jennie Frink and a recitation was given by the latter. Stereopticon slides pertaining to Christmas were shown, the machine being operated by Robert Burke and Harry Clark. There was also singing of Christmas carols.

From 6:30 to 7 o'clock the members of the Sunday school departments with the exception of the beginners were served a delicious lunch of sandwiches, fancy cakes and cocoa, under direction of Mrs. Arthur Howard. There were about 100 present.

About a dozen mothers with members of the cradle roll met in the beginners' room from 2:30 to 4:30 for tea, and refreshments under the supervision of Mrs. Claude Wilson. The children received gifts from a Christmas tree and played games under direction of Miss Mazie Stamm and Rev. Mr. Kilmister.

DREDGING IN HARBOR FOR CHAPPELL CO.

The dredging plant of the Morris and Cummings Co. of New York is at work in the harbor dredging for the Chappell Coal Co. The company is having dredged a channel 400 feet long, 50 feet wide, and 22 feet deep. The New York company started dredging Saturday and is expected to complete its part of the work Christmas day.

The berth, which will accommodate sea-going vessels, will be located on the west side of the river near the company's property at Central Wharf. The depth of the channel, 22 feet, conforms with that of the river's channel, work upon which was recently completed by the New York company from Allyns Point to Norwich.

The contract for the river channel, sponsored by the local chamber of commerce, was let by the government and was finished at a cost of over $150,000. At that time the harbor was deepened to a depth of 22 feet to the Chappell company's wharf. The actual cost of dredging at the wharf was not divulged.

At present the local company has a berth on the east side of the river, 200 feet long, 40 feet wide and 14 feet deep, but this was found inadequate to take care of the larger barges.

The contract for the construction of the side walls for the berth has not as yet been let.

DOORS AND WINDOWS PLACED IN SCOUT CABIN

Carpenters Ed Grover and Charles S. Burke worked all day Monday at the Boy Scout cabin finishing the roof, hinging the door and some of the windows and making a start on the veranda. Several Scouts under the leadership of Nick Tarrant assisted with the work.

The cabin is slowly but surely progressing. Other carpenters of the city of Norwich are being urged to volunteer to help the boys with the project that they may have the benefit of it this winter.

A free dinner is furnished each day by the scouts to the carpenters and masons who volunteer. Next Saturday Bruno Weinert hopes to finish the fireplace. Tomorrow afternoon the cabin will be locked up and the key will be left with either the president of the local council or the chairman of the camping committee.

Among some of the projects suggested for troops to do for the camp as good turns are: Graveling the road and cutting out a parking space at the entrance to camp; piling the lumber in orderly fashion; trimming the cedar trees preparatory to using the trunks for railing around the veranda, etc.

Scouts who are free today are being urged to be at scout headquarters by 9 o'clock with lunches to go out and help with the building of the cabin. Those who have already helped are enthusiastic in their praise of it and are only too anxious to help its completion.

THOUGHT NORWICH DRIVER RAN DOWN PEDESTRIAN

The state police are seeking the driver of a New London county automobile which failed to stop after running down a pedestrian in Branford. The victim is expected to die. The only clue on which the police have to work is that the car was a Ford but the fact that the letter N was on the registration plate shows that the car was one from this vicinity, the letters N and L being issued by the motor vehicle department to car owners in this county. The first two numbers of the hit-and-run car were 37.

A thorough check up of the motor vehicle records is being made and everyone with registration markers bearing the initial N and which have 37 for the first two numerals will be questioned in the effort to locate the man who is wanted in Branford.

It was at first reported that the machine was owned by a Norwich man but a police check proved the contrary

W. Backus hospital, where he is a patient. Partnicki is expected to be discharged from the institution within a few days as his injuries are not regarded as serious.

The arrest of Abruzzes by Sergeant Matthew Delaney and Officer John Quinn followed a stabbing affray at the accused's poolroom at No. 464 North Main street. Abruzzes is at liberty on bonds of $3,000, furnished by a relative.

Miss Hirsch suffered a double fracture of the leg as the result of a fall at Williams street and Post Hill place in New London Dec. 13, 1928. She alleged in the complaint that the city was negligent in allowing ice and snow to accumulate there.

GOVT. TO SPEND $724,000,000 ON PUBLIC WORKS NEXT YEAR

The Largest Peacetime Construction Program in the History of the Country—The Average Fiscal Expenditure is About $275,000,000—President Hoover Announces That the Government Intends to See That Its Contractors Maintain the Wage Levels Existing Before the Business Depression Set In WASHINGTON, Dec. 23—(AP)—Moving to the aid of its jobless, the American government will spend $724,000,000 on public works during the calendar year 1931, the largest peacetime construction program in its history.

The amount compares with the average fiscal expenditure of approximately $275,000,000.

Figures announced by President Hoover today showed the largest amount for any purpose was the $219,922,000 to highways.

Running a close second was public buildings construction with $173,869,000 available. Rivers and harbors will receive $159,857,000 and ship construction $129,920,000.

Fifth on the list was an item which 20 years ago would have been considered an impossible dream. A total of $30,882,000 will be used for building aircraft.

Of the $724,000,000, a total of $116,000,000 was made available last week by congress as an emergency unemployment relief measure.

In addition to the appropriations for public works the government will expend $ 170,000,000 for agriculture relief, $45,000,000 of which will be used for seed and fertilizer loans to farmers stricken by last summer's unprecedented drought.

To arrive at the expenditures for the calendar year 1931 President Hoover took half of the 1931 budget figures and half of the 1932 budget figures and added the emergency and acceleration appropriations to the amount.

At the same time the president announced the government intended to see that its contractors maintained the wage levels existing before the business depression set in. He said that through conferences a year ago industry and labor had reached an agreement whereby the wage level would be maintained wherever possible and that certainly the government could not consistently do otherwise.

Difficulties with a number of minor contractors have been experienced, the president said, but they have been adjusted.

After the president made his announcement the agriculture department announced the allocation to the states of emergency funds for highways and the war department allocated money for rivers and harbors improvements.

A total of $30,000,000 was added to the public buildings fund by the application of accumulated and unexpended balances from previous appropriations which can now be applied through the expedition gained from authority to employ outside architects.

Government construction experts estimated that of the total about one-half will go for the payment of labor and the other half to the purchase of sites and materials.

Most of the projects for which appropriations have been made have passed through the technical stages and the actual work can begin in the very near future. In many cases sites already have been obtained and architectural plans completed or nearly so.

GOVERNOR OF THE PUNJAB SHOT AND SLIGHTLY WOUNDED

LAHORE, India, Dec. 23—(AP)—The name of Sir Geoffrey De Montmorency, governor of the Punjab, was added today to the growing list of British officials who have been targets for the bullets of would-be assassins. He was shot and slightly wounded by a youth who also wounded two others before he was arrested.

It was the second time that Sir Geoffrey had been shot at and the attempted slaying occurred just a year from the day that an attempt was made to bomb a train carrying the viceroy, Lord Irwin, and Lady Irwin to New Delhi.

The Punjab governor had attended a convocation of the University of Lahore and was just leaving the senate hall when a young man among the spectators, said to be a Punjabi Hindu student, fired four shots at him point blank. Sir Geoffrey was grazed in the neck and hip.

He was taken to a hospital where his wounds were dressed and he walked home a few minutes later, smoking a cigarette.

The assailant was immediately arrested and with him another youth who sprang to his side when the shots were fired. A woman doctor and Chanan Singh, a sub-inspector of police, suffered minor hurts from stray bullets.

RECORD HANDLINGS BY POSTOFFICES OF CONN.

NEW HAVEN, Dec. 23.—(AP)— Post offices throughout the state were deluged today with letters, cards and packages, all the larger cities reporting record handlings.

In this city alone, 620,000 pieces of mail matter were handled for the day, the total being 80,000 pieces more than that handled for the corresponding day in 1929.

Stamford postal receipts for the day totaled $166,000, the figure being $46,000 more than the receipts for the corresponding day last year.

New Britain postal officials stated that so many parcel post packages were received that it would be impossible to deliver them all before Christmas, even with the augmented force at the postoffice.

Torrington officials reported 16,000 more pieces handled for the day than on the corresponding day last year; while Danbury, Manchester and South Manchester postal authorities reported record handlings.

MONTE CARLO, Monaco, Dec. 23—(AP)—Shouts of "abdication, Abdication," through the windows of the police court here today as seven men, charged with rioting in connection with the arrival in Monte Carlo yesterday of Prince Louis of Monaco, were sentenced to from one to eight months in jail.

TWO HARTFORD BANKS CLOSED; ONE IN NEW HAVEN

HARTFORD, Dec. 23.—(AP)—Three Connecticut banks, two in Hartford and the third in New Haven, were suspended today by Lester E. Shippee, state bank commissioner.

The two Hartford institutions, Pallotti, Andretta and company, and the Riverside Trust company, had suspension notices on their doors before opening hour this morning. The bank in New Haven, also bearing the name of Pallotti, Andretta and company, was closed at noon as a safeguard against a possible run which might result from the closing of the Hartford Pallotti-Andretta bank, which owns control of the other two institutions.

A run which began last July and which became acute last week resulted in the action against the Hartford banks. The run is believed to have been indirectly due to the failure last April of P. M. D'Ezopo company, a private bank in this city.

Commissioner Shippe said he would make every effort to avoid liquidation of the Riverside Trust company, which he described as "unquestionably solvent." The assets of the other Hartford bank, he said, "are somewhat frozen" but he expressed the opinion that depositors may be adequately protected.

HOLDS DRY LAW VIOLATION NO BAN TO CITIZENSHIP

CLEVELAND, Dec. 23.—(AP)—Conviction of violation of the prohibition laws "cannot be considered as a serious infraction of the Constitution" Common Pleas Judge George P. Baer ruled late today in holding that Sam Cohen, of Cleveland, should be granted American citizenship.

S. E. Fox, citizenship inspector, sought to bar Cohen, claiming he had been twice convicted of violating the liquor laws, the second time in 1929, when he was fined $1,000 and sentenced to nine months in the workhouse. The last conviction was "simply for a misdemeanor and could not be taken seriously in this matter," the judge said. Cohen then was sworn to citizenship.

CLAIMS $500 DAMAGE FOR COLLISION WITH A DOE

HARTFORD, Dec. 23.—(AP)—Collisions with does and steam rollers, fees for investigation under the direction of a state's attorney, damages from closing of a highway and damages for the flooding of an ice pond are among the claims and potential claims on file at the state capitol, awaiting consideration by the 1931 legislature. Guido S. Malcarne, who struck a doe while driving his automobile on the East Haddam-Norwich highway in Salem, claims his automobile was damaged to the extent of $500 and he was severely injured. William P. Murphy, whose car was struck by a steam roller, says the damages to his automobile amounted to $23.75.

Reduce Rediscount Rate To 2 Per Cent

Action Taken by N. Y. Federal Reserve Bank to Help Recovery of Business

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—(AP)—As constructive step to help the recovery of business and industry, the New York Federal Reserve bank today reduced its rediscount rate to 2 per cent, the lowest in the history of the system.

The action, cutting the loaning rate to member banks from 2 1-2 per cent, which had been in effect since June 19, was taken at a prolonged session of the board of directors this afternoon.

While it took the financial district by surprise, it was received as further evidence that the Federal Reserve bank plans to continue into 1931 its easy money policy upon which it embarked after the stock market crash in the fall of 1929. The rate has fallen from 6 per cent in little more than a year.

While no formal explanation of the action was issued at the Federal Reserve, it was learned in banking circles that the directors felt that it was a constructive step which they could take at any time when they believed it would prove more effective than the preceding reductions.

It was regarded in financial circles as a factor that might stimulate bond buying, especially by banks, and might later be felt in the mortgage market also. Easy money ordinarily reduces the yields on United States government securities which have had the widest demand, to a point where banks turn to corporate domestic securities. Many corporations considering the raising of funds for expansion are said to have found it necessary to postpone their plans because of the recent unsettled conditions in the bond market.

The reduction is an offer of accommodation to the banks, if they want the money, but its effect upon business and industry depends of course upon whether there is a demand for cheap credit. Bankers say the easy money policy has not proven as effective in this regard as was hoped, but pointed out that the new reduction comes at a time when the psychology has been considerably altered. Business generally believes it has scraped the bottom of the trough and faces 1931 looking for an upturn and will find cheap credit available when it needs it.

DOROTHY GISH APPEARS IN "THE INSPECTOR GENERAL"

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—(AP)—Russian drama claimed the second of the Gish sisters here tonight when Dorothy Gish appeared in the leading role of "The Inspector General."

Lillian Gish has been playing this season in another Russian play, Chekov's "Uncle Vanya."

"The Inspector General" is a farce by Gogol, and this new American version has been adapted by John Anderson, dramatic critic. It is a humorous picture of mistaken identity, a nobody who comes into a Russian village and is received as a nobleman.

The Yale University Dramatic society presented the first English version of the play given in this country, at New Haven in 1908.

The play has appeared on Broadway once before, at special performances by Equity Players several years ago.

FLOATING METEOROLOGICAL STATIONS FOR AIR TRAVEL

PARIS, Dec. 23.—(AP)—Floating meteorological stations are essential to transatlantic air travel, the international air security congress asserted in a resolution tonight, and if government financial support is not made available such stations should be established by private capital.

The resolution, one of more than a score adopted at the final session of the congress, cited numerous instances in which foreknowledge of the weather had proved invaluable to fliers. Liaison between navigators and meteorologists is still a great problem, the resolution said, and there should be universal application of some standard system of weather reports.

The secretary declined to make public the names of the companies contemplating the action.

Prodigal Broker Fa[illegible] Prison Term

H[illegible] Russell Ryder, $95,452 [illegible]ort, Sometimes Spent $1,000 a Night in New York

NEW YORK, Dec. 23—(AP)—A 35-year-old broker whose stock trading motto was "Ryder Never Fails" pleaded guilty today to the theft of $95,452.

The grand larceny charge against Harold Russell Ryder, who a few months ago was leaving $100 tips behind him on Broadway and receiving applause for a $300,000 gift to Union college, grew out of the failure last June of Woody and Company, brokerage firm in which he was a partner. The specific complaint against him was that John Vanneck, president of the Equitable Holding company, gave him the $95,452 on June 11 to purchase stocks and that Ryder kept the money.

A five-to-ten year term in prison confronts the young financier who rose in his twenties from errand boy to million-dollar-a-year-man. General Sessions Judge Bertini postponed sentence to February 27 so Ryder might continue his "great help" to the bankruptcy referee engaged in untangling Woody and Company's affairs.

Uneasily Ryder stood before the judge's bench today. His attorney asked for leniency on the ground that Ryder was assisting creditors of Woody and Company to recover the firm's assets. Assistant District Attorney Gibbs interposed that attorneys for the creditors had asked postponement of Ryder's sentence so that he might testify in bankruptcy court. The district attorney had made no promises, Gibbs said, about the sentence to be imposed.

Figures compiled by creditors after the crash averred that Ryder sometimes spent $1,000 a night in his incursions into the bright lights district between February to June, when his firm failed. Ryder protested that stories of his riotous spending were exaggerated.

FOG CAUSE OF 13 DEATHS IN SOUTHERN ENGLAND

LONDON, Dec. 23.—(AP)—Old man weather crammed copious draughts of fresh air down upon London today, dissipating the fog which has caused 13 deaths and played havoc with business and people generally throughout southern England for a week.

The climax of the dense, evil-smelling pall that mixed itself with swirling smoke and soot was reached yesterday at noon, and last night it began swishing away. By noon today transportation systems had snapped back on schedules twisted and halted by the fog.

The list of dead included four persons who walked off the banks of streams hidden by the fog and drowned.

Along the fog area were strewn many wrecked autos and trucks, abandoned temporarily by their owners.

The most telling blow delivered by the haze to the Christmas life of London was the almost complete paralysis of thousands of tons of overseas mail for Americans and others who are spending the holidays in England, as well as mail from foreign ports for residents.

The postal authorities have promised that despite the setback they will have the gifts in the proper stockings by Christmas.

TENTH ANNUAL WALL STREET OBSERVANCE OF CHRISTMAS

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.— (AP)— The spirit of Christmas softened the heart of a Wall street hardened by a troublesome year in finance today.

The 10th annual Wall street observance was held at the junction of Wall and Broad streets, between the stock exchange building and stolid gray stone offices of J. P. Morgan & Co. A huge Christmas tree was erected in the middle of the street.

The ceremony began with the playing at 3:45 p. m. of the Trinity church chimes, two short blocks away at the head of Wall street. Carol singers and the 16th Infantry band gathered in the street, and the Gloria trumpeters played from the balconies of the stock exchange. After a program of music, and the ceremony of lighting the tree, Rev. Caleb B. Stetson, rector of Trinity church, pronounced the benediction.

Thousands of workers of Wall street halted on their way home to participate in the observance.

DEATH TOLL FROM VOLCANO ERUPTION NOW STANDS AT 200

BATAVIA, Java, Dec. 23.—(AP)— As poisonous gases clear away from the lava thrown out by an eruption of Merapi volcano last week, the number of dead increased and probably will gain when a final check is made. Tonight the number stood at 800 dead. Refugees from the devastated districts totalled 24,000.

POSTOFFICE CLERKS HANDLING THE GREATEST RUSH IN HISTORY OF DEPT.

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—(AP)— This talk of a business depression doesn't apply to the harried post office clerks; they're handling the greatest rush in history.

All time records in post offices throughout the country are being shattered in the deluge of first class mail matter; everyone seems to be saying it with cards.

If the aggregate equals last year—and indications are it will surpass it—the Christmas mails will have carried 1,670,000,000 letters, 20,000,000 packages and 17,000,000 postcards.

General belief among postmaster is that the peak of the rush was pushed yesterday and that the totals of today and tomorrow, while still great, will show a tapering off. In Manhattan and the Bronx, 15,000,000 pieces of first-class mail were handled through the cancelling machines yesterday, while an equal amount was

NORRIS CHALLENGES THE REPUBLICANISM OF HOOVER

[illegible]braskan Delivers Tirade After He Had Been Denounced by Rep. Wood as a "Consummate Demagogue"—Bitterly Attacks Those Who Would Oust Him From the Republican Party—Senator Borah Comes to the Aid of His Fellow Republican Independent

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23—(AP)—In an assault upon the republicanism of President Hoover, Senator Norris, of Nebraska, today challenged the control of the national party by those who are demanding his own ouster.

The Nebraskan spoke out bluntly after Representative Wood, of Indiana, left a conference with President Hoover to urge support for the "eradication" of Norris, which was advocated by Robert H. Lucas, executive director of the republican national committee.

Wood's denunciation of Norris from the white house steps as a consummate demagogue' stirred Norris to question the republicanism of Mr. Hoover and called into action Senator Borah, of Idaho, another republican independent who answered "Let them get out those who have disgraced the party."

"The republican party belongs to the rank and file," Norris said to newspaper men who gave him the news of Wood's attack. "Mr. Wood and Mr. Lucas, even though backed up by Mr Hoover, do not constitute the republican party. I was fighting for the republican party when Mr. Hoover himself was a resident and voter of Great Britain.

"Mr. Hoover is most liable to be a democrat any day. When he came to this country from Great Britain he

AGED WOMAN FATALLY INJURED BY TROLLEY CAR

NEW BRITAIN, Dec. 23.—(AP)—Approaching Sharps crossing in Plainville tonight, when the street light at that point was extinguished, Mrs. Olga Bonander, 79, was struck by a Connecticut company trolley car and fatally injured.

No witnesses saw the car strike her. She was said to have stopped out of sight of neighbors into the unlighted hollow where the road crosses the track, before being hit. It is believed she slipped on the icy road just as the car came along.

Motorman Gustave Johnson, of Milldale, in charge of the car, declared Mrs. Bonander was lying on the track when he first saw her. He attempted to stop, but the car ran several feet after striking her. She died an hour and a half later in New Britain General hospital from a fractured skull and shock.

The flames spread so rapidly the 15 field attendants were unable to salvage any of the planes. Two of the ships were dragged outside but they had already caught fire and were destroyed.

The fire was believed to have originated in a furnace room near the hangar.

STOWAWAYS WERE STEALING THE MISSING "GRUB"

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—(AP)— "The mystery of the missing grub" or "who robbed the pantry?" was solved by Captain Thomas Simmons of the Munson liner Western World while the ship was headed for New York. The story was told when the vessel docked today.

When food disappeared from the larder, Captain Simmons thought awhile. Then he studied the design of the vessel. He found that forward was a second washroom which had been closed up by a bulkhead. The skipper ordered his crew to knock down the barrier.

Inside were ten stowaways.

WILLIMANTIC POSTOFFICE FORCE WORKING AT TOP SPEED ON XMAS MAIL

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Dec. 23—The well organized human and mechanical machinery of the post office functioned in high gear during long hours today handling record-breaking volumes of outgoing and incoming mail. The outgoing mail had reached a new high peak for any one day in the history of the local office and the revenue was the largest in history by $100 for any one day, the bulk of this coming from the sale of stamps. Over 6,000 pieces of first class mail were put through the cancelling machines Monday. Bags of parcel post and packages are being received in lots of 200 and 300.

It is a fascinating "buck-passing" game that is going on at the post office. Truckloads of mail pour constantly into the postoffice from the trains and the city mail boxes. The clerks go at breakneck speed to sort these out, pigeon-holing those designated for local delivery and stamp-cancelling the outgoing matter, and the load is then shifted to the carriers, parcel post, special, regular, rural free delivery and star route, upon whom falls the final duty of disposing of peak loads. Most of the city carriers are being assisted by boys with express wagons thereby relieving tired shoulders from excessive burdens. There will be one big final effort Wednesday evening to clear the post office of all mail matter received in time for delivery before the holiday, on which day the post office employes will be granted a much-deserved rest.

With a fairly good return on the Christmas seals from which there has as yet been no response, the tuberculosis committee signified today that the sale of the seals this year would in all probability exceed that of last year. The local fund is handled through the Visiting Nurse association and 85 cents of every dollar subscribed is devoted to the local territory. The amount of 10 cents goes to the state work and five cents for national work

WILLIMANTIC ANTICIPATES A WHITE CHRISTMAS

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Dec. 23—Unless the work of old man winter is undone by rain or a thawing sun, things looked well today for a white Christmas with a four inch snowfall covering the ground tonight. The coming of the snow made traveling conditions a little hazardous but this seemed to be entirely disregarded by holiday shoppers who welcome the snow as being real "Christmasy."

The usual observance of the holiday will be made here with appropriate church services and a general suspension of business by the manufacturing plants and retail stores. With but few exceptions the industrial plants will remain closed until Monday, December 29 Stores and banks and the post office will close for the day only as will all city and town government offices.

All of the town schools, including the state normal and high schools will close Wednesday afternoon until Monday, January 5. The state trade school closed this afternoon until Monday, December 29.

Williams, the rector and Rev. T. Hawthorne Jones, pastor of the Mansfield Center Congregational church will preach. At St. Joseph's and St. Mary's R. C. churches there will be masses at 5:30, 7, 8, 9:15 and 10:30 a. m., Christmas day, with the first and last masses solemnized.

For public amusements there will be matinee and evening shows at the three theatres and dances Christmas eve and Christmas night at the Al-Pierre Tabarin.

Each stocking is labeled with a child's name and is accompanied by a Christmas greeting card. The auxiliary is also distributing quantities of clothing and found.

In cooperation with the United States Veterans' bureau in a plan whereby every ex-service man confined in any hospital will receive a V. F. W. Christmas box, the local post has sent Christmas boxes to the following hospitals: Soldiers' Home, Noroton: U. S. Veterans' hospital, Bronx, N. Y.; U. S. Naval hospital, Brooklyn, N. Y.; U. S. Veterans' hospital, Northport, L. I; U. S. Naval hospital, Newport, R. I.; U. S. Veterans' hospital, Rutland Heights, Mass. DANIELSON

ALL PREVIOUS RECORDS SMASHED FOR XMAS MAIL

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Dec. 23.—When he was a bit amazed about anything, the late "Tex" Rickard used to have a habit of saying "I never seed anything like it!" and that's just about the way Danielson's postal force felt about the volume of holiday mail that has been pouring through the local office this week.

Postmaster E. H. Keach said this morning that all previous high records for Christmas business had been smashed to smithereens, general business conditions notwithstanding. Neither the postmaster nor the force that works with him looked for any such amount of business this year. Instead of a new high record of number of pieces handled and amount of money taken in, they were looking for something of a slump. They guessed wrong and have been driven almost goofy trying to keep abreast of the work being piled up for them. Last night they worked until 11 p. m., sorting, distributing, making ready in every way to start afresh this morning. Notwithstanding the fact that six extra men are on duty, each letter carrier having an assistant with him, long overtime hours are necessary to handle the unprecedented rush of business. Employes who have been in the office for many years and who handled the rushes of the glamorously prosperous war and post-war years say that this year's business tops them all. Business bad? Well, most certainly not at the Danielson postoffice!

Mr. Keach said at noon today that overtime work would be the rule again tonight, and that the force would work until the decks were cleared, as it were. The same rule will apply Wednesday, and the plan is to handle all Christmas mail before stopping work.

Christmas day will be a well earned holiday for the postal workers. There will be neither city nor rural delivery service. No business will be transacted with patrons at the office, though the lobby will be open and mails distributed and despatched as usual.

Snow and Plenty of It

A white Christmas! It's to be, ladies and gentlemen. At sunset tonight the countryside was enshrouded in a mantle of glittering purity, significant, it seemed, of all the age-old traditions of the great festival to be observed on Thursday. As dusk came on tonight and lights began to twinkle about the borough the scene was reminiscent of the fairy tale Christmas stories and settings. It was just a marvelous sight, alluring, inspiring. Outdoor Christmas trees weighed down with mantles of snow on which lights sparkled in story book fashion. A surprisingly large number of persons, New England born and bred, expressed their delight over the coming of the snow for the holiday, about seven inches of it.

CARDOZA TO FIGHT EXTRADITION FROM CALIFORNIA

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Dec. 23.—Frank Cardoza, alias Frank Fieska, alleged silver bandit, is going to supply all the opposition he can about being brought out of San Diego, Cal., where he was arrested yesterday afternoon, to answer here in Killingly to a charge that he had a part in robbing the ByRolly truck that was transporting silver through South Killingly early on the morning of Oct. 6. A wire from that city to the state barracks here this afternoon brought the information that Cardoza will fight extradition, so immediate steps will be taken to get him back. State officers here are not interested in the return of Doris Bell, Norwich woman, arrested in San Diego in Cardoza's company. The police of Providence will see that she gets back to Rhode Island.

The Christmas gift selection at Dowe's is always good. Last day shoppers will find gifts to complete their lists. Toys—one-half price. Dowe's, Inc.—adv.

Chief John McFarland today reported to the state barracks that an ancient Ford coupe had been left parked in School street since Sunday. State officers saw that it was towed to a local garage and later ascertained that it is the property of Joseph Dichinara of R. F. D. 1, Killingly. He will be asked to explain why the car was so abandoned.

Students at Killingly high school enter the list of those to be commended for their generosity toward the needy this Christmas time by contributions that have made it possible to supply holiday dinners for eight large families in Danielson, not only dinners, but reserves of foodstuffs in very considerable quantities. Principal Ernest R. Warren assisted in making the distribution today. Each family was allotted about 150 pounds of food, including chickens, celery, potatoes, turnips, dates, eggs, canned goods and various other good things to eat.

Cars and trucks were having their troubles on highways hereabouts this afternoon, due to the snow. They were skidding and sliding around plentifully over at Dark Lantern hill this afternoon, especially after the snowfall was near to ceasing and traffic had packed the snow down on the state highway surface in a manner to make the going not only difficult but also treacherous. Several minor accidents were reported, but none of serious consequence up to nightfall.

The Danielson Booster club Ford car will be given away after the show at the Orpheum theatre next Tuesday evening.—adv.

Reports from the Day Kimball hospital in Putnam today were to the effect that Mrs. Isadore Dragon was resting comfortably after undergoing a surgical operation. Mrs. Dragon, a former resident of Danielson and now 75 years of age, came here to spend the Christmas season with her sons and daughters. She became ill and entered the hospital yesterday. Her home is now in St. Denis, P. Q.

Miss Myra Codding was elected a delegate to the District World Service council.

It was unanimously voted to request Rev. Albert Abbott to remain as pastor for another year.

Numbers of her friends here had in mind today the matter of sending Christmas remembrances to Miss Florence Mellish. Miss Mellish at one time lived at the Old People's Home here, but for the past three years has resided with Mrs. Almond Bartlett at East Killingly. Recently she became resident at The Haven in Abington.

The sidewalk cleaning brigade got its first exercise of the winter today, when much time and effort was expended in making it easier to get about the borough.

The body of George W. Brennan, who died in Baltic, was at the home of his brother, Christopher Brennan, Main street, today.

In view of the fact that only about $50 was collected from receptacles left at stores and banks in Danielson since early in the month, the money to be used to buy Christmas dinners for the needy, they are to be kept in place for a few days more, to afford generous persons a chance to make up a deficit. The demands on this charity have been unusually heavy this year, and more money is required.

The boys around the garages had a chance to regain the knack of adjusting tire chains today, as scores of motorists came in for the first time since last winter to have such a service performed. State highway crews were engaged today in clearing the accumulation of snow from state highways through this territory.

Augustus Higgins, one of the oldest citizens of Danielson in point of years of residence here, is seriously ill at his home on Furnace street.

Mrs. Marjorie Woodbury and daughter, Katherine, of West Hartford, will spend Christmas with Attorney and Mrs. Arthur G. Bill, of Maple street.

From Greensboro, N. C., Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Cudworth are remembering friends here with Christmas cards. They are former residents of Danielson.

There has been some fishing through the ice on the ponds about East Killingly the past few days, and some success for the fishermen.

THOUGHT DEAD, LOCAL MAN RETURNS AFTER LAPSE OF FIFTEEN YEARS

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Dec. 23.—Unheard of for years, and believed dead by some of his relatives and numbers of his friends here, Henry William Lacombe is in Danielson with his wife to spend the Christmas season with his aged mother, Mrs. Zoe Lacombe, and his brothers and sisters. Nearly 16 years have elapsed since he last visited his old home town, and he is being greeted by many of those who knew him in days of yore.

Mr. Lacombe, an ironworker, left here before the World war. After the United States entered the great conflict, Mr. Lacombe registered under the selective service law, at Norristown, Pa., where he was making his headquarters at the time, and in due course his questionnaire came through to the local selective service board, with its headquarters at Putnam. He was duly classified and notification sent to the address given on the questionnaire, but the card or subsequent communications from the board did not reach him, nor could the board locate him throughout the war. Years elapsed after the war without any word being received from him and the opinion grew that he might have died.

Far from it, however. Not receiving any communications from the local selective service board, he again registered at McClure in Snyder county, Pa., and still has the credentials that were issued to each registrant during war time. He also has documentary evidence that he was engaged on government work throughout the war, for a time building shipways at the Brooklyn navy yard, at shell plants and other government factories in Philadelphia, Burnham, Mt. Union and at Newcastle, Del.

It may easily be understood that his relatives and friends are glad to know that he is alive and well. He will return to his home in Pennsylvania after his visit here.

PUTNAM

NEARLY EIGHT INCHES OF SNOW IN PUTNAM

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Dec. 23—People of this city along with those of New England in general were assured a white Christmas today as old King Winter turned his hand to artistry with snow flakes, painting seasonal scenes with a seven and one-half inch snowfall. The unexpected turn in the weather programme proved to be a great surprise when residents here upon arising this morning looked out upon the blanket of snow. The storm began early last evening but did not take on a serious aspect until one o'clock this morning when flakes began to fall thickly. At 7 o'clock several inches already covered the ground and there was no indications that the storm would abate.

For the first time this winter, pedestrians were forced to resort to the protection and comfort of rubbers and galoshes and motorists for safety's sake dug into tool boxes and hauled out chains, pressing them into service for the first time.

The state highway department which has been preparing for several weeks for just such an occasion were on duty bright and early this morning and by noon the great fleet of plow and sand trucks had the trunk line highways in this vicinity opened and slippery surfaces covered. The storm furnished plenty of exercise for ambitious property owners and tenants who found it necessary to shovel their way to the streets. During the greater part of the afternoon Superintendent of Streets Frederick Dumas and members of the street department aided by an additional force of nine workers were busy breaking out municipal maintained roads and clearing sidewalks throughout the city. The roads were cleared with a newly purchased street plow and snow was removed from walks by horse drawn plows which were working in the east and west sides of the city. Alderman Eugene Migneault, chairman of the highway committee said this evening that work entailed in the removal of the snow was at an end by a late hour this afternoon and that the street forces would take up the task of sanding the streets and walks Wednesday morning.

The season's first snow storm played a hand in raising havoc with the movement of automobile traffic. State police at Danielson barracks reported this evening that reports of minor accidents on the highways in the territory hereabouts trickled in continuously during the afternoon hours. None of the mishaps were of a serious nature, police said. The majority of investigations revealed were the direct ture, police said. The majority inresult of hazardous conditions, snow and ice covered roads.

Only slight delay was caused to trains and motor coaches arriving here today. During the early morning hours all public service lines were forced off schedule but by nightfall all transportation commodities had become adjusted to winter's handicap and were meeting scheduled time requirements.

A Connecticut newspaper through its editorial columns this week, strongly urged the reappointment of John A. Macdonald, son of Postmaster Archibald Macdonald of this city, as highway commissioner of the state. The paper's statement having to do with the reappointment of Commissioner Macdonald said in part, "Various rumors are afloat, most of them of the wild variety, as to what Governor-elect Cross intends to do and what the legislature has in mind doing to him. All these may as well be dismissed. We have a notion that the new governor, mindful of the circumstances attending his election, and the legislature, mindful of some of the reasons why a democrat was elected governor, are both disposed to proceed with a reasonable degree of caution.

"Although the situation lends itself to a display of politics on both sides, the people themselves are in little mood for that sort of thing. What they desire above everything else is the welfare of the state. In the matter of the governor-elect's appointments, he will be under no considerable pressure to reward deserving democrats, of whom the number is already showing an astonishing increase. But if he is wise he will ask in what measure service to the state would be improved merely by making changes for the sake of change alone. If important departments are now functioning well, if they have been conducted disinterestedly without emphasis on politics, the governor-elect may see no partisan advantage in disturbing them, however much he may be importuned to do so. For example, he could scarcely expect to find a commissioner for the department of finance and control better equipped than Edward F. Hall, or a highway commissioner better equipped than John A. Macdonald. We plead for the retention of these two officials, not because they are republicans, but because of the highly valuable nature of the services they have rendered in their respective capacities. The state would suffer long beyond the term of Governor Cross if they were to be replaced."

Mr. Macdonald is widely known in this city. Many interested in the outcome of the so-called "Situation on Capitol Hill" in Hartford, are hoping for his reappointment to the head of the highway department, the affairs of which he has so diligently and ably managed for several years.

George E. Dresser of Church street, proprietor of the drug store on Union street, bearing his name has discontinued business activities and with his retirement one of the city's oldest drug establishments has passed out of existence. Mr. Dresser, dean of Putnam pharmicists terminated his long career as a druggist Saturday evening at the close of business. His prescription books and other medicinal records pertaining to his business have been committed to the custody of another druggist formerly associated with Mr. Dresser.

Mr. Dresser who has been in business for more than 50 years, in 1884 acquired the drug store established by Rockwell Lyons of Danielson, which was at that time located in the Rich block on Main street, opposite the Elks building. He continued in business there until four years ago, when the structure was razed to make way for the erection of the new Seder block. Forced to vacate, Mr. Dresser moved his business to the Salvation Army building in Union street, where he remained until his retirement last week.

Donald Child, student at Vermont university, Burlington, Vermont, has joined his mother, Mrs. Chester E. Child of South Main street, for the holidays.

JEWETT CITY

ILL, BUT SECURES $128 FOR UNCAS-ON-THAMES

Uncas-on-Thames is to receive $128 from Miss Dorothy Paul as the result of contributions which have been handed in to her by local people who were glad of the opportunity to aid in this direction. While Miss Paul is thanking the many who responded to the call with real holiday spirit, it is not generally known that she herself has been confined to her bed for several months. Interest in the carrying out of plans for Christmas aid and cheer, commendable in anyone, is surely more so and quite the exception in the case of Miss Paul.

Handled 11,111 Letters Monday

According to the electrically operated cancelling machine, things went by ones at the postoffice Monday. At the close of the day's business the enumerating dials showed that during the day 11,111 letters had been cancelled. Postmaster William T. Crumb says that Monday, reckoning incoming and outgoing dispatches, showed almost twice the volume of mail handled over any one day last Christmas. Tuesday's mail, in and out, was less than half of Monday's business, which shows as proof that people are responding to the "mail early" appeal.

Bigger reduction today at Zegeer's store on all toys and Christmas gifts. Do not miss this chance.—adv.

Eight Inches of Snow

Whittier, describing a New England winter scene, said, "The gleaming tree boles, ice embossed, hold up their chandeliers of frost." That picture was just about what Old Man Winter painted again all through this section before sunrise Tuesday. Trees, shrubbery, lines of fence and the overhang of house tops, were festooned something wonderful to see, while clothes lines and stretches of electric wire were padded to a half dozen times their normal diameters. For the first snow storm of the season, which came with no wind accompaniment, the blanket measured eight inches on the level.

Covered Up Ice

The second promise of an early ice harvest, a good four inches thick, was covered Tuesday evening with a heavy layer of damp snow, which the ice men declare "won't do the ice any good." With slowly rising temperature Thursday, those interested in the harvest hoped the whole pond would thaw out again and start all over with a new freeze.

When green Christmas forecasts went a-glimmering Tuesday forenoon, so also did the demand for express carts and doll carriages at the local stores. Dealers hauled the carts back to the rear counters and rushed the sleds out to the display fronts, with the result that many local youngsters on Christmas morning will reach for a sled instead of a cart or doll wagon.

Miss Florette Morey is home from St. Cesaire convent school, in Canada, P. Q., for the holiday season.

At Pachaug Community club, Friday evening, three colored entertainers from Norwich will appear on the bill. They are banjo, guitar and violin artists. Local attractive numbers may be expected. The committee of arrangements is Mr. and Mrs. Adam Medick, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Charles Campbell and Raymond Campbell.

The big state highway plow and scraper made one trip over the new cement road during the forenoon Tuesday. The borough street department was out during the storm with the local plow. On the new bridge and viaduct, the sidewalk is going to fare hard when the big scraper goes along, for in case of a heavy fall it will be banked with snow which the machine throws off the roadbed.

Somebody is going to meet with a grand streak of luck for the Christmas board. A local man was parked in beside the bowling alley Monday afternoon where he had to show the handsomest little yellow and white shoat that one would care to see. Also a wonderful white goose and a big Tom turkey with a fiery red topknot and wide-spread tail. All these are to go to some lucky person, with the possibility that all three may be given to the same investor.

Monday evening's scores chalked up by the Borough Pinochle club are as follows:

J. B. Le Claire, 8,735; Wilfred Le Claire, 9,470; Eudor Le Claire, 7,685; Eugene J. Carroll, 9,270; Dennis Sullivan, 7,320; Jacob Wechsler, 9,255; James Q. Dolan, 7,280; Horace Dawley, 7,925; Chester L. Dudkowski, 8,095; Lionel E. Boucher, 9,165; Charles E. Maynard, 7,730; Frank McCarthy, 9,020; Walter A. Field, 8,605; Arthur Le Claire, 9,460; Richard J. Dudkowski, 7,935; John A. Davis, 7,925; Hugh McLaughlin, 7,425; Clovis Casavant, 8,530; Dr. George H. Jennings, 8,345; Henry Popham, 7,130; Rose Loranger, 8,110; James H. Shea, 8,410; Everett Sharkey, 8,785; Tony Lamarine, 9,210.

Wilfred Le Claire cleaned the board with 9,470.

When the Taylor (Tex.) fire siren failed to sound, the service department of the electric company was called. Rags, and not loose connections, were found causing the trouble. With a view of keeping the birds from building in the mouth of the siren, the fire department had covered it with cheesecloth. It had become old and torn into strips that clogged the whistle.

WESTERLY GIRL FINED FOR FAST DRIVING THROUGH MYSTIC STREETS

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Dec. 23.—Miss Geraldine Gentile, 25, of 114 High street, Westerly, was before Judge William A. Wilcox in the Tuesday morning session of Stonington town court, charged with the operation of a Packard auto on the Boston post road in the town of Stonington at a rate of speed greater than reasonable and proper. The state, in the absence of Prosecutor Henry P. Hammacher of Mystic, away on Christmas vacation until Jan. 6th, was represented by the deputy prosecutor, Dr. James H. Weeks, of Stonington. The speeding complaint under date of Dec. 21st followed the apprehension of the defendant by State Officer Arthur Whitmarsh of the Groton barracks. When asked her plea, the accused said, "Guess I am, I guess so."

Officer Whitmarsh on the witness stand testified that about 2:35 a. m., Miss Gentile drove her auto through Mystic and down Baptist hill at the rate of 50 miles per hour. The officer said he was in the police sergeant's car and followed the Packard which he lost sight of at Wilcox curve at Quiambaug and did not see it again until it was traveling 50 to 55 miles per hour down Lord's hill and when the police car drew alongside near Stoneridge the speedometer showed 70 miles an hour to be the rate it was traveling. In stopping the car to question the driver it was learned that she had no operator's license, but in court Tuesday a Rhode Island license was produced so that the charge of operating without a license was not pressed as the officer had agreed.

The defendant said that she had nothing to say except that only she got frightened when she thought she was being pursued by parties unknown to her. Acting Prosecutor Weeks asked for a fine sufficient to stop such speeding on Stonington roads.

On being found guilty Judge Wilcox imposed a fine of $15 and costs which totalled $26.45, which was paid and the defendant discharged.

In the absence of Prosecutor Hammacher the case against George U. Smith, 30, of 38 Hunter avenue, Taftville, charged with drunken driving, when the 500-gallon fuel oil Chevrolet truck driven by him Saturday night on a Stonington highway overturned and in the accident Richard Coleman of Taftville received such cuts about the face as to necessitate his being taken to the Westerly hospital for treatment, on request of attorney was continued to Jan. 20th next.

CHRISTMAS MAIL HEAVIEST IN HISTORY OF OFFICE

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Dec. 23. — Monday broke all records of the Westerly post office for out-going mail and Carrier R. Joseph Smith, who transfers the mail from the Westerly station to the post office by motor truck managed to keep even with the demand placed upon him without extra help. There were several trains with which a close connection was made but every load taken from the Westerly post office made its proper train. The receipt of the parcel post matter is expedited at the Westerly post office by being tossed into a shoot from the post office driveway and the thousands of such packages received are in this way handled most expeditiously.

Annual election on Monday night resulted in the selection of George Andrews as grand tall cedar of Westerly forest, No. 107, Tall Cedars of Lebanon at the annual meeting held in Mechanics' hall on Broad street. On Tuesday evening, in the assembly room over the banking rooms of the Westerly branch of the Industrial Trust company the employes enjoyed their annual Christmas observance with suitable distribution of fitting gifts.

Season's First Snowfall

The first snowfall this season followed very close to the almanac winter opening of the previous day when on Tuesday morning early risers found the ground whitened with snow. During the morning and forenoon snow of a wet and sticky variety continued to fall with the result that highways became slushy and slippery and windshields received a coating which made them almost opaque if exposed to the falling snow for any length of time. There were numerous cases of autos going off the highways and crashing walls and poles but no injuries were reported to any of the occupants. Garages were kept busy in sending out wreckers and starting stalled autos of which the principal business streets of the town were no respecter of persons when it came to the selecting of sites for such auto stoppings.

On Tuesday morning a Ford sedan owned by John H. Daniels and driven by Miss Mary A. Daniels collided with a car owned by Pasquale Leonetti and driven by Frank Leonetti of 49 Pierce street at the top of Vincent Car Hall. Both cars were badly damaged, but no one was injured.

Both Frank and Pasquale Leonetti were in the truck and Miss Daniels was accompanied by her father at the time of the accident. The accident was investigated by Officer Paul McCarthy. The accident was caused by the slippery condition of the highway.

WHAT PROHIBITION HAS DONE

President E. M. Hopkins of Dartmouth college is a believer in temperance and he has been a close follower of the developments under prohibition. Cognizant of the office he holds, he has heretofore maintained an open mind concerning the dry law, but urged for his views by the National Temperance council he breaks a long silence and in so doing voices a conviction based upon careful study.

Thus it is a seasoned judgment that Dr. Hopkins presents when he says: "I feel so strongly in regard to the desirability of temperance in the use of alcoholic liquors, as in all other things, that, despite my objections to the whole theory of the 18th amendment, I would support it if I either had seen or was seeing at the present day any evidence to justify a belief that legislation enacted under the amendment had worked or that it could be made to work. Instead of seeing this, my observation in traveling about the United States is that great areas which used to be wholly dry are now saturated, not only with alcoholic liquors but with a spirit of complete abandon in regard to the control or use of these. Likewise, the original attitude of resentment against the use of law for the support of this amendment has given place to complete indifference to the requirements of law, which to me is a most dangerous situation. Meanwhile, money which was originally collected in excise on liquor and paid to the national government, plus the swollen profits of inflated prices on liquor and the further profits of cutting and cheapening liquor, has been made available to the extent of hundreds of millions of dollars for corruption."

Dr. Hopkins says much more of an equally pointed character and he unquestionably voices the sentiment of great numbers who are equally as strong temperance advocates as he is but who have had their eyes opened to conditions which prevail at the present time and believe that, regardless of what prohibition may have done in some instances, the general result is worse than it was before. When Dr. Hopkins says that he would not "knowingly argue against or oppose any movement which made for temperance," greater significance is to be attached to his opinion on the prohibition law and its results. His conviction has come about through the test in the past decade of prohibition.

Dr. Hopkins isn't one of those who sits back and says "I told you so." He has carefully waited, noted and studied the facts, and based his opinion upon actual conditions. It indicates the reason for the growing sentiment against prohibition.

FIRE THE INSURGENTS

The demand that the republican insurgents be read out of the party is getting hearty support from many quarters. The idea is not a new one. It has, in fact, been tried and the only mistake in connection with such a move was to get the impression that they had been taught a lesson and would display a different attitude in the future. That resulted in bringing them back into the party, only to be followed by just as bad, if not worse, tactics.

Under certain conditions such insurgency might be disregarded. That would be where party strength was such that it would make little difference. But under existing conditions in congress the insurgent element holds the balance of power. They get into congress by claiming to be republicans and immediately after getting elected as republicans repudiate their party and become renegades. They manage also to get important committee places through their claim of being republicans but display an attitude worse than the democrats with whom the, play for effectiveness.

Should the call for reading the insurgents out of the republican ranks be followed it would mean that the democrats would get the chance to organize the next congress. Thus, democratic leaders are hoping that the break will be made, for it is understood that the insurgent support is necessary if the republicans are to perfect organization and maintain control.

While it might seem that the insurgents would be agreeable to such action, thus putting them virtually into a third party, it is to be realized that if the democrats organize the next congress they will take unto themselves the much coveted committee chairmanships. That would mean putting certain of the insurgents out in the cold, taking away their authority and prestige and leaving them in much the same position as the farmer-labor congressman, who flits about as he pleases, with no one paying much attention to him.

The mistake that was made in taking back the insurgents cannot be undone. The question now is how long the party leaders are going to endure their unwelcome and undeserved presence within the ranks. It is as good a time as any to settle the matter.

EXTRA SESSION NOT NEEDED

The idea of seeking a special session of congress cannot be regarded otherwise than a desire to make trouble. Whether it is Senator Borah or any other senator who is out for the special session, it is impossible to overlook the statements which have been made by house leaders in which they declare that it is entirely possible to clean up all the important business at the present short session. That being so, there is no reason why the senate cannot do likewise.

It is quite as possible for the senate to dispose of the business, the supply and appropriation measures and the several bills which should be taken care of at this time, as it is for the house. The time is short but the senate knows it and all that is necessary is a close application to the work in order to see it through.

Of course, that will not provide time for all kinds of delays, handicaps and obstacles which the senate is fond of throwing in the way of progress. It will mean knuckling down to business and sidetracking politics as much as possible. What Senator Borah seems to want to do is to get a special session and keep congress in session all summer, much as was done this year, to the disgust of the country and the uncertainty of business conditions.

Sentiment among democrats as well as republicans has been considered as opposed to an extra session. The vote of the foreign relations committee in putting the world court matter over until next December showed democratic opposition to the idea of a special session. It wasn't a special session that was actually at stake when that vote was taken but it evidenced the desire to eliminate from this session what was thought might provoke a special session.

Those who insist upon making trouble and forcing a special session can do much to prevent the accomplishment of necessary business at this session. There have been indications of it already, demonstrations of what could be expected in the way of a filibuster if certain senators were not able to have their own way, regardless of majority sentiment, and a willingness to waste time instead of making it count through constructive effort. Senator Borah's reasons for a special session are not convincing. He would make a much better impression if he would urge and help the senate to clear the slate during the present session.

SPREADING CHRISTMAS CHEER

The agencies which are making extra efforts this year to provide Christmas dinners for those who might otherwise be unable to have them, or to provide toys for the children of households where the unemployment problem has placed a handicap on Christmas preparations, are deserving of every possible encouragement. They always are, but this year there is added reason for it.

When appeals are made for toys by the United Workers in order to supply the demand for them, they ought not to go unheeded by those who are in a position to supply the deficiency. Probably there are hundreds of households where good toys have fallen into disuse and might be handed over to children who would obtain great pleasure from them. The appeal of the United Workers indicates that there is need for them and it will be unfortunate if those who have no use for them and those who are willing to distribute them where needed cannot get together. The same is also true in regard to the relief work which this organization is doing in many directions through its various departments.

Another agency that cannot be overlooked at this time is the Salvation Army. Its kettles and its chimneys on the curbstones deserve to be filled. There will be increased calls upon this organization for assistance at this holiday season. It always renders a most effective service in looking after the poor and unfortunate at this season of the year and there is every reason to believe that it will make good use of all the funds that are turned over to it.

There is no better way of helping to spread Christmas cheer throughout the community than by contributing to the work of these efficient organizations. They stand for and render valiant service.

JUSTIFIED PARDONS

The action of the governor of New York in extending pardons to six women who were convicted on immorality charges through false testimony given by police officers is only what the situation called for.

It is bad enough when those vested with authority in the enforcement of law and order fail to live up to their duty, wink at violations or collect for permitting vice conditions to exist, but it is far more serious for police and others to bring about the conviction of innocent persons through perjured evidence.

New York has been getting some enlightenment upon the fact that all the crooked activities in the big cities are not confined to the recognized criminal class. It is being shown that those in whom trust is placed and upon whom reliance is put for protection are using their positions to practice extortion and getting rich off the results. Not only police, but lawyers, are giving more attention to that than to their legitimate work.

Inasmuch as it has been shown that a number of women were wrongfully convicted and sentenced to prison, the governor was called upon to see that they gained their freedom without delay. That doesn't eliminate the gross injustice that has been done in their cases, and no one knows how many others, but it ends their time-serving.

That the governor has expressed himself as greatly disturbed by the revelations in New York courts is no more than should be expected. It demonstrates to him that even though he was not much disposed to lend his influence to certain investigations in the big city some weeks ago the disclosures since then demonstrate that New York not only needed the investigations but a thorough housecleaning.

STANTON'S FAMED SPEECH ON EELS DISCUSSED PUTNAM AS A SEAPORT

The news, furnished by The Bulletin's Noank correspondent, that a giant eel has just been captured off Kirk island, has prompted a general discussion of eastern Connecticut eels that recalls to old-timers the famous remarks concerning this species of fish made before the general assembly of 1882 by the late Stiles T. Stanton. Mr. Stanton at the time was a representative from Stonington. He had been city editor of The Norwich Bulletin, in which position he had gained a country-wide reputation as a humorist. His remarks, made in discussing a proposed bill to restrict eel-fishing in state waters, are reported in The Bulletin of April 7, 1882, as follows:

A Slippery Subject

The debate on the bill de eels in Stonington harbor in the house Tuesday, was the occasion of some pleasantries. Chairman Fuller of the fisheries committee said:

"In speaking upon this bill I ask the indulgence of the house, as the question is a somewhat novel one. I am aware that this question is one in which the constituents of the gentleman from Stonington are very deeply interested and a question involving as it does, not only the interests of the people of that ancient and respectable town, but concerning directly the life and well being of these slippery denizens of the deep, deserves to be treated with the utmost carefulness and impartiality. Your committee has endeavored to so consider it, having given it the widest range in their examination into the merits of the question, and after a somewhat exhaustive hearing, decided to report adversely.

"A kindred petition was referred to us earlier in the session asking that the taking of eels in the waters of Long Island sound and the rivers of the state be prohibited between certain dates. In opposition to this the gentleman from Norwich appeared who told us that the eel was an article of commerce among the constituents and he did not want a legal protection thrown around them, and as the building of a bridge across the Thames would not probably at present interpose any obstacle to their free passage to and from the head of sloop navigation," we decided to report the bill adversely.

No Immunities to Stonington Eels

"And it seemed to us that it would be inconsistent with that action to grant any special privileges or immunities to the eels of Stonington. The people of Groton remonstrated against the passage of the bill and we thought that if there was any branch of the fish family that was capable by its nature, instincts or habits of eluding the vigilance of the fisherman, it was the wily, frolicsome eel.

"The eel by the way, is not a native of Stonington (as some may suppose) although he abounds there in large numbers and in all his pristine beauty and native excellence, and is a source of pride as well as profit to the people of that good old town, who are practically unanimous in invoking the strong arm of the law to protect these special objects of their solicitude.

"The origin of the eel is enveloped somewhat in obscurity. He belongs to the order of Murraenidae. For a long time he was supposed to be the product of the festive clam. Aristotle believed that he sprang from the mind; others less wise believed that he sprang from the hair of the tails of stallions when dropped in the water. And it is definitely known that he springs with great facility from the hands of the fisherman.

"For a long period he was supposed to be viviparous, but it is now claimed by scientists that all eels (including the Stonington variety) breed by means of eggs produced from roe like most other fishes, and that he is the product of the Silurian age. The culture of the eel may fairly be classed as among the industries of Stonington.

"I yield the floor to the gentleman from Stonington, who will, no doubt, explain this subject as well as the sinful and mysterious methods of wig-wazzing mentioned in the bill and practiced by the eel pirates of adjoining towns, and also I trust explain why the scales of the eel are of such a microscopic character as to be invisible to the naked eye, and the prospect of a general eel war in the near future between the partizans of the eel in that section and the anti eelers, providing this bill is not passed.

"I might say that the same method is employed in the pursuit and capture of the eel (viz, fire lighting) as is employed in the hunting of deer in the Adirondacks."

Putnam As A Seaport

In reply, Mr. Stanton of Stonington said that he was pleased that after the heated discussions of last week the house had at length come to the calm and peaceful contemplation of the eel. He had recognized with great profit the stores of information revealed by the gentleman from Putnam, the chairman of the fish committee.

He had not before been aware that Putnam was a seaport and had until then fallen into the error of believing that the only products of that town which partook in any degree of a marine character were mountain oysters and chairmen of the fish committee. But he was convinced by the remarks of that gentleman that the eel which infested the coast line and the harbors of the town of Putnam was totally different from the Stonington eel.

Tendency To Get In A Stew

He inferred from what had been said that the Putnam eel preyed upon society, that human life and property were unsafe in his neighborhood and that he was a kind of a marine nihilist. He had known the eel in some of the closest and tenderest relations of life—he had sat at the same breakfast table with him and he had taken him to his own bed with him—and though he had observed a tendency on his part to get into a stew, still as the gentleman from Woodbury had stated that to be a natural consequence of marriage upon man it might also be simply the consequence of marriage on the eel.

So far as his experience went, the eel was of good moral character and was an acquisition to the community with which he connected himself. The town of Stonington, although constantly cheered and encouraged by the presence and society of the eel, enjoyed also two great privileges—one by a visitation of Providence which placed it on the border of Rhode Island, and the other by the act of the general assembly which placed it on the borders of New York.

"Wigwozzing" vs. "Wigwazzing"

From The Bulletin of April 18, 1882—The following letter, which is signed "S. T. S.," and bears the date of Stonington, appeared in the Courant one day last week. No one will fail to recognize the style as well as the initials, The "J. H. T." referred to is probably J. Hammond Trumbull:

I have read with deep interest the communication published in the Courant from "J. H. T." on the taking of eels. The question appears to be whether the Indian name for eeling by firelight is "wigwozzing," or "wigwazzing," and I observe that while he expresses profound abhorrence of the latter orthography of the word, the other he urbanely and kindly says "is permissible in the local dialect of Stonington." I am not aware whether this gratifying concession is due simply to a warm and kindly nature or to motives of prudence or to the effect of a vigorous imagination upon the appetite, but I am inclined to infer the last, as he inquired with symptoms of disgust if the editor "could eat wigwazzed eel."

Subtle Philological Distinction

Leaving aside the question whether eels are received in payment of subscriptions to Hartford newspapers, and whether in consequence it becomes possible for Hartford editors to enjoy that luxury, I take the liberty of calling his attention to the fact that he has lost sight of one of those subtle and delicate philological distinctions which may be of little interest in Hartford, but which are the subject of careful discussion around the family tea-table and elsewhere in Stonington.

The simple and devout fisherman of the latter place, as he launches his boat and kindles his firelight, announces to the inquiring spectator that he is "goin' wigwazzing," but on his return, filled with success and eels, as he gathers his little family about him and takes down from its shelf his well-thumbed copy of that popular revision of Elliott's Indian Bible, he directs his wife to "have them wigwozzed eels for breakfast." It will be seen that with natural philological accuracy he makes the correct distinction between the wigwazzed or uncaught eel and the wigwozzed or captured or defunct eel.

Views Are "Eelementary"

I regret to see that your correspondent has fallen into the error common to the superficial students of the Indian dialects, and that his views may be very properly termed eelementary. The legislature which passed a bill forbidding wigwazzing (i. e., fishing for the uncaught eel) was right, and it would obviously be foolish and unwise legislation to prohibit fishing for eels already caught and probably eaten.

While this interesting question is under discussion, however, it is to be regretted that "J. H. T.," who extends his researches only over the comparatively trifling period of 250 years, did not attempt to discover the origin of the term. He quotes from Father Paul Le Jeune, who published in 1634, and Dr. Bartlett's "Dictionary of Americanisms," but I have conversed recently with several of the Indian chieftains now living on the Pequot and Mohegan reservations near the town of Stonington, who state emphatically that they never knew either of the persons mentioned and do not believe that they are entitled to credence.

What the Pequots Say

The Indians themselves have their simple oral traditions. The Pequots, as I learn, assert that "wazzing" means lighting (not fire lighting, as "J. H. T." says) and "wig" naturally means hair; that far prior to the visit of Father Paul there was an organization which met weekly during the season of the young maize and was called, so far as I can ascertain, the lodge. This association, tradition says, had a tendency to keep the members away from their own wigwams till late at night and that it not infrequently happened that the squaw met her lord on returning, by "lighting on his hair" or "wigwazzing" him—a curious practise which I am informed privately by a married friend prevails even at this day.

The Indians so treated, tradition says, invariably fled from the wigwam and passed the remainder of the night in eeling; so by a transition familiar to students the name of the cause became attached to the effect.

The Mohegans' Version

The Mohegans, however, claim that two Indians being necessary to successful wigwazzing, one to propel the canoe and the other to spear the elusive eel, in order to beguile the time consumed in reaching the fishing ground, they invented the game of wigwaz, very similar to if not identical with the present simple and popular pastime known as "Simon says wigwag."

There is not, however, in this place space for more than the merest allusion to these interesting traditions. In the words of good Mr. Barlow to the interesting lads under his charge, "It cannot be said that here is not a matter for profitable study." Not by a good eel.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24—If one could tour the national zoo with its director, Dr. William Mann, he would discover that Mann knows about all there is to know of the social groupings and such matters in the realm of birds, beasts, reptiles and fish.

He is a regular "Who's zoo" on that stuff.

Yet get him out of that environment and into mankind's social whirl, and he is not quite so "at home."

Fellow scientists laughingly tell of Mann's perturbation a year or so ago while on a European tour. He went to a dinner in London, where he was completely surrounded by Lord This and Sir That and other titled folk. He was bewildered over what to call them.

Calls 'Em "My Lord"

Finally he took to calling them all "my lord." It seemed the easiest way. And he got by all right until he spoke to a waiter as "my lord."

His titled table neighbor grinned: "I'll give you a tip, doctor. You can tell the lords from the waiters by their neckties. If he wears black, he's a waiter."

Dr. Mann presumably had no trouble with human social classifications on his recently completed trip to Central America in search of new specimens. He did, however, encounter a lot of mighty aristocratic snakes, reptiles, bugs and such.

He brought some of them back with him to go into residence in the new reptile house of the national zoo.

And when Dr. Mann says he brought them back, he means just that. As the Bystander hears the story, he and Mrs. Mann traveled vis-a-vis with these blue-bloods of the crawling world.

Watch Their Pets

They had snakes in sacks and cardboard boxes in their personal baggage on one steamship jump. The doctor himself thought that was a bit strong; but had no time to get proper boxes made. To prevent troublesome incidents, the Manns sat up all night watching their pets.

When they reached New York, Washington bound, their traveling companions had been adequately housed in nice new wire-meshed packing cases.

So Dr. Mann reserved a Pullman drawing room to Washington, had the station redcaps put away his bags, including the snake containers (unrecognized as such by the redcaps), and rode calmly down that way.

To make assurance sure, however, as Dr. Mann told the incident casually to a friend of the Bystander's, he sat on one side of the heap of cases and Mrs. Mann on the other, ready to turn back any adventurous crawler that showed a head.

It's all in the day's job to the Manns.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Jumper Finds a Footprint

A footprint made is out of mind,
Yet we a record leave behind.
—Little Joe Otter.

Jumper the Hare travels about considerably in the Green Forest. He has to in winter in order to get enough to eat. That is one reason Old Mother Nature has given him snowshoes. Of course, they are not real snowshoes, but they answer the purpose of snowshoes and make it possible for Jumper to move about on soft snow in which little people much smaller and lighter than he would flounder about. What Old Mother Nature has done for him is to give him very big feet with long toes and cover these in winter with a heavy coat of hair. This makes broad pads of the feet and Jumper does not sink in the snow as others do.

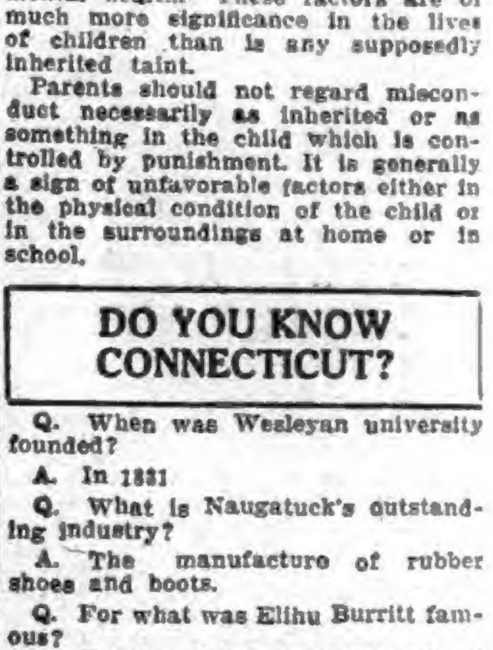
It was a moonlight night. Jumper likes the moonlight. He likes to travel about then. This night he had followed the Laughing Brook deep in the Green Forest. He wanted some willow bark and young willow twigs and he remembered that there were some young willows growing around the pond of Paddy the Beaver. Jumper is fond of willow and having thought of it he couldn't get it out of his mind. I guess you know how that is. So now he was on his way up the Laughing Brook. He was keeping a sharp watch for danger, knowing full well that on a night like this there would be hungry folks abroad—Hooty the Great Horned Owl, Yowler the Bob Cat, Old Man Coyote, Reddy Fox, Billy Mink and Shadow the Weasel. Any or all of these might be hunting in this part of the Green Forest. Particularly did he watch for signs of Yowler the Bob Cat, who is very fond of Hare. Also, he was all the time looking for a moving shadow which might be Hooty the Owl.

He reached the pond of Paddy the Beaver without mishap. Once as he peeped out from beneath an overhanging, snow-covered hemlock branch, he saw a swiftly moving shadow, but heard no sound. "That was made by Hooty the Owl," said he to himself. "Hooty was flying just over the tops of the trees and made that shadow on the snow. I'll stay right here for a while to give him a chance to go to another part of the Green Forest."

Some time later from far away toward the edge of the Green Forest there came the sound he had been hoping to hear. It was the hunting call of Hooty the Owl. At once Jumper then hopped out and started on his way again. You see, he knew now where Hooty was and that there was nothing to fear from him at present. So at last Jumper reached the pond of Paddy the Beaver. Like the Smiling Pool, it was frozen over and the ice was covered with snow. He could see Paddy's big house, a big white mound, standing above the ice.

Paddy did not venture out on the pond, but kept to the brush around it. He crossed Paddy's dam and presently was in a thicket of young willows. How good that bark and the buds and tender twigs tasted! In the enjoyment of that feast he almost forgot to keep watch for danger. He hopped about, eating some bark here, standing up to bite off a tender twig there, and feeling well satisfied with life in general and with his present occupation in particular.

At last he had satisfied his appetite and decided to rest and perhaps take a little nap. He hopped over to one end of Paddy's dam and squatted under a little hemlock tree, a little to one side where he could look out across Paddy's pond, but where he would not be likely to be seen by any who might come along that way. Hardly had he settled himself comfortably when his glance fell on something that caused his eyes to fly wide open. He sat up abruptly. Just in front of his hiding place was a footprint in the snow. It was of good size and it was very odd. Looking to left and right he saw more such prints. It was plain to see that the maker of those prints had passed that way not long before.



Just in front of his hiding place was a footprint in the snow

Jumper stared at that print right in front of him. It was a queer print. It was not unlike such a print as Honker the Goose might have made had he been there. That is to say, it was a print that showed toe nails, but hardly any signs of toes, the kind of a print that would be made by a foot the toes of which were joined by a web.

"So," said Jumper to himself, "Little Joe Otter has returned and is to be looked out for."

Do Children Inherit Bad Conduct

By Sanger Brown, II, M. D.
Assistant Commissioner of Mental Hygiene, Albany.
From Gorgas Memorial Institute.

Do children inherit the mental characteristics of their parents? Will a child grow up to just like his father? When we hear these questions, they usually apply to unfavorable traits in the child's father. He may have been a ne'er-do-well, a drunkard, possibly a criminal, or perhaps has suffered from mental disease. The question is less often asked where the father is a brilliant man or has many virtues. Parents do not seem to expect that good qualities are necessarily passed on, yet they are much concerned lest unfavorable traits be transmitted. It is chiefly in respect to the inheritance of unfavorable traits, therefore, that the following discussion applies.

It may be said at once that it is very improbable that a child will inherit all of the unfavorable traits of a parent and be just like him. In fact, the chances are all against it. If the child is given average opportunities, he will develop his own personality and be himself and no one else. What a child becomes depends as a rule upon his home, his opportunities, his education and various other influences—more so than upon his inheritance. If he grows up in unfortunate surroundings, influenced by shiftless, undependable parents, he is apt to be like them.

This fear of bad heritity may cause much mischief. Often the mother watches the boy too carefully. She is on the lookout for unfavorable traits and she half expects him to steal or lie. The result is that she is far too strict with him, too free with warnings and admonitions. The child is tempted to try the very things she urges him to avoid. Unfavorable traits are often brought out in children by this kind of mismanagement.

Misbehaving children generally acquire their bad behaviour from influences in their surroundings rather than through inheritance, and bad behaviour, as a rule, does not develop suddenly. It is the result of a long series of unfavorable influences. In bringing up children it is fairly safe to assume that they have more than an even chance of developing into useful and capable men and women if they are given the proper opportunity. Some are more intelligent and more ambitious than others, but these traits may exist regardless of what the parents are.

When there has been mental disease in the family, parents often fear that the children will inherit the disorder. There are very few families in which there has not been a case of mental disease of one form or another. Children from families where such cases have existed are not much more likely to develop mental troubles than other children. Unnecessary worry and unhappiness have come because this fact has not been understood. Many mental diseases occur as a result of faulty mental hygiene regardless of how good the inheritance may be. Healthy, normal surroundings contribute greatly to mental health. These factors are of much more significance in the lives of children than is any supposedly inherited taint.

Parents should not regard misconduct necessarily as inherited or as something in the child which is controlled by punishment. It is generally a sign of unfavorable factors either in the physical condition of the child or in the surroundings at home or in school.

TO SEEK STRICTER FOREST FIRE LAWS IN STATE

Recommending legislation to strengthen the forest fire laws of the state and to encourage cooperative forest owners' associations, the acquisition of more state park frontage on salt water, and estimating the needs of the department for the next biennium at more than $800,000, the biennial report of the state park and forest commission was submitted to Governor Trumbull.

The estimated attendance at state parks from December 1, 1928, to November 30, 1930, is 2,634,212 visitors and 139,882 campers, the report states, an increase of nearly a million visitors over the two year period covered by the last previous report of the commission.

Pointing out that the forest fire season of 1930 was the most disastrous since 1922 and listing seven big fires in the first six months of 1930 which damaged more than 16,000 acres of woodland, State Forester Austin F. Hawes, in his section of the report urges that legislation aimed at the prevention of forest fires be strengthened.

Mr. Hawes recommends that the governor be empowered to close the woods in dangerous periods to all people except land owners and their agents; that it be made unlawful to throw down a lighted match, cigar, cigarette, pipe ash or other burning substance in dry grass, dead leaves, brush or other inflammable material; that the state forester or authorized agent be given same authority to serve criminal processes as that enjoyed by grand jurors, constables, etc.; that the state forester be given authority to order local fire wardens, to maintain patrols during dangerous periods, to be paid by the state; and to grant the state forester the power to determine the rate of pay of patrolmen according to circumstances rather than the present established 40 cents an hour payment.

In support of his request for more stringent laws against throwing away of burning substances, the report of the state forester discloses that careless smokers caused 664 fires in 1929 and the first six months of 1930, more than double the number from this cause in the previous biennium. He reports that the section of the statute most difficult to enforce is that which now covers this offense, only one arrest being made in the biennium under the law although this arrest resulted in conviction.

Forester Hawes points out that Massachusetts and several other states permit the governor to close the woods to all persons in times of danger from forest fires.

Damage from forest fires reported in 1928 was $6,056, and in 1929, an unusually light year, was $80,531. Brush burning accounted for 352 fires in 1929 and the first six months of 1930, according to the report of the forester, and more rigid penalties as well as stricter enforcement of the provisions of the statute prohibiting unauthorized brush burning is requested.

The budget of the commission, according to the report of the commission, will amount to $826,000, including: State forester, prevention and control of forest fires, $105,000; expenses of state forester's department, $191,000, including administration of the state forests, state parks, $230,000, maintenance and recurring expenses; capital outlay, $150,000; purchase of land, $50,000; development of parks, $100,000. No new major projects, either of acquisition or development, are covered by the $150,000 for capital outlay, which will cover proposed extensions and improvements of existing parks only. The total appropriations granted by the 1929 legislature to the department totaled $578,144, as compared with budget requests to the present biennium of approximately $700,000.

Pointing out that several of the parks are approaching an overcrowded condition, Field Secretary Albert M. Turner, makes several suggestions for capital outlay to prepare the parks for future use. With further development, he points out, Hammonasset beach may have its capacity doubled, but at Lake Waramaug, Mount Tom and Black Rock additional land is the essential need Kent Falls park use is in excess of present capacity, but recent additions to Housatonic meadows suggest the possibility of diverting a part of the use of Kent Falls to this site. Further acquisition of land at Squantz Pond is regarded as advisable, while Devil's Hopyard needs considerable development including acquisition of land.

URGE CONN. LABOR IN C. G. ACADEMY CONSTRUCTION

Whether or not the contract for the new Coast Guard academy is awarded to the lowest bidder—Murch Bros. Construction Co. of St. Louis—the opinion in official circles at Washington is that Connecticut labor will be largely employed.

The St. Louis concern's bid was $1,818,000. Sixteen bids were submitted, with the Merritt, Chapman & Scott corporation being second low. The bids are now before the board of awards, which, following research, will announce the award of the contract.

Belief at Washington is that the Murch interests will receive the contract. The government is expected to request the successful bidder to pay New London wages and to hire as much Connecticut labor as possible.

While no legal means exists to make the hiring of Connecticut labor mandatory, it is believed that no matter which bidder is awarded the contract the hiring of Connecticut help will be carried out in the interest of harmony. The St. Louis concern has done considerable government work.

The academy project is one of $2,500,000, that much being called for in various appropriations, and the employing of Connecticut workmen will mean much to tradesmen of the state now out of work.

When the Murch interests were making a preliminary survey of the academy site preparatory to submitting bids, a representative of the company indicated that considerable Connecticut labor would be used in the event the company was awarded the contract.

POLICE DRIVE AGAINST PUNCH BOARD FRAUDS

A drive against punch board frauds is being made by the state police. Recently officers of the Groton state police barracks arrested Emmett O'Connell of Springfield and William S. Quinn of Hartford charged with conspiring to defraud an East Haddam merchant.

According to Captain Walter F. Stiles, in charge of State Police fraud investigations, one man leaves a punchboard with a merchant. Soon after two "traveling salesmen" come in, perhaps buy a sandwich, talk a little business and then start to play the board. In each case they profit highly. The merchant, the captain, pointed out, is afraid to complain to police lest he be held for possession of a gambling device. And so it goes.

In the East Haddam case, police say, Quinn left the board in an East Haddam store. The board gave money prizes with the odds varying from even money to 20 to 1. Players could put down any amount from five cents to a dollar. A dollar bet on the "lucky number" with 20 to 1 odds would pay $20.

Shortly after Quinn made his visit, police say, two candy salesmen arrived and played the board. The first laid down a dollar, punched and lost. He tried again and won $20. The third punch brought him another $20 on a $1 bet and his companion punched the board once for $20 more. The storekeeper, suspicious, attempted to learn what connection, if any, they had with the man who left the board, but consented in the end to their demand for payment of the $60 they had won.

He gave police the registration number of the car and a state police broadcast of the information led to the arrest of Quinn and O'Connor in Norwich. They were identified by East Haddam officials. O'Connor was one of the two "salesmen," police say. The other is still sought.

GEO. T. MEECH CELEBRATES HIS 87TH BIRTHDAY

George T. Meech, former commander of the department of Connecticut, Grand Army of the Republic, and most active member of Mansfield post, of Middletown, of which he was elected commander in 1927, celebrated his 87th birthday Monday by appearing at his desk in the office of Meech & Stoddard as usual. Despite the hardships he underwent in the Civil war, he is still in excellent health.

Mr. Meech enlisted at Gales Ferry on August 14, 1862, in what was known as the Groton company which later made up Company C of the Twenty-first Connecticut Volunteers. He served in the battles of Fredericksburg and Drury's Bluff and in the last few months of his enlistment as private secretary to a field surgeon at a hospital at Point of Woods, Va. He was discharged June 10, 1865, and always has been proud that his entire service was as a private. A private sees all there is to be seen of war. Mr. Meech believes, and knows just how disagreeable it is, but learns to endure it cheerfully.

OVERHEATED STOVE CAUSED BOSWELL AVENUE FIRE

A bell alarm rung in from Box No. 21 at 7:52 o'clock Tuesday morning called out four pieces of fire apparatus for a blaze in the apartment occupied by Mrs. Edith Rudd at No. 98 Boswell avenue. The blaze, caused by an overheated stove, was located in the kitchen and did damage to the extent of about $100. Mrs. Rudd and her daughter were forced to vacate the building on account of the dense smoke.

A telephone call was first received by the department when the fire was discovered and a short time later the bell alarm was rung in by Thomas Allegretti, 13 years old. The firemen found a lively blaze in the kitchen and a two-inch line of hose was immediately laid, but this was not needed as the blaze was squelched by chemical. It was found that the drafts on the stove had not been closed Monday evening and the overheated stove ignited articles on a mantle nearby. Mrs. Rudd occupies one of six tenements in the building, which is owned by John Hawkins.

NORWICH NIGHT SCHOOLS CLOSE FALL TERM

Tuesday evening the five night schools of the town closed for the holidays. Christmas parties and entertainments were held in four centers, Occum, Taftville, Pearl street and Broadway. The students in the Greeneville school joined with those in Broadway in carrying out the following program: Christmas carols, by the school, It Came Upon the Midnight Clear, Oh, Little Town of Bethlehem, Hark, the Herald Angels Sing, Adestes Fideles; reading, Christmas Carols, Around the World, Peter Santos; reading, Christmas in Other Lands, George Reggopolis; songs, school.

This program was interspersed with selections on a radio lent by the Hanover-Curland Co. This generosity was very much appreciated by both students and teachers. Following the program refreshments were served by the committee composed of the teachers, Miss Gladys Holmes, chairman, Miss Agnes Looby, Mrs. Theresa McMahon, Miss Veronica Roberts of Broadway school and Miss Isabelle Leonard of Greeneville. The teachers were recipients of gold pieces from their students.

At the Pearl street school the two classes taught by Miss Abigail Murphy and Miss Catherine Driscoll spent a social hour together. Songs were sung by the class members and solos were sung by Mrs. Annie Seder. Mrs. Seder's little daughter, Sylvia, delighted the students by her clever dancing. She was accompanied on the piano by Miss Bruckner whose mother is also a member of the class. Miss Bruckner gave piano solos and songs. Refreshments were served by the teachers and the members of the classes presented each teacher with gifts.

At Taftville, both classes taught by the Misses Lillian and Lena O'Brien joined in singing Christmas carols around a Christmas tree. Gifts were exchanged and several sets of old fashioned square dances were enjoyed. Conrad Tessier furnished violin music. The prompting was done by Ferdinand Moreau. Both teachers were presented with gold pieces by the students. Refreshments were served after the dancing by the teachers.

The students of the general class at Occum spent a social evening at cards and other games. After several spirited rounds, refreshments were served by the teacher, Miss Celine Bowen.

At the closing of the fall term of the evening schools the active membership stands at 150, and the total enrollment for the term, 179. The school will re-open for the winter term on Monday, January 5th.

ENTERTAINED PIANO PUPILS AT CHRISTMAS SOCIAL

At her home, Lucier Heights, Baltic, Miss Blanche Lucier recently held a Christmas party for her piano pupils. After enjoying games, gifts were distributed by Santa Claus who, dressed in full regalia, delighted the young guests by his timely arrival and cheery disposition. After finding something in the pretty lighted Christmas tree for everybody, old Nick departed with the well wishes of all present.

Later musical selections, rendered by the pupils, were played with credit to their efforts. Refreshments were served by the hostess assisted by her mother, Mrs. Alfred Lucier.

The musical programme follows: Christmas Bells March, Estelle Cote; Yuletide, Rolande Gauvin; Under the Mistletoe, Gertrude Cardin; Chimes at Christmas, Mae Stefon; Santa Claus March, Alice Deslandes; The Arrival of Santa Claus, Rita Breault; Adeste Fideles, Isabel Townson; The Floral Parade, Celia Beauchemin; Adeste Fideles March, Lucille Blain; Dollie Waltz, Irene Douville.

ENGLISH LEGHORNS LEAD IN STORRS EGG CONTEST

In the seventh week of the Storrs contest the hens practically held their own in spite of sub-zero temperatures and the coldest mid-December for more than a dozen years.

The total output for all pens was 4,494 eggs, or only 30 less than for the previous week. This is a yield of 64.2 per cent and is 240 eggs better than the corresponding week of last year.

The pen of English Leghorns owned by Tom Barron of Catforth repeated last week's performance by leading the procession. These birds came through with 62 full sized 24-ounce eggs to score 62 points. Jerseyland Farm's pen of Australorps from Point Pleasant, N. J., and Donald I. Goodenough's pen of Reds from Torrington, Conn., tied for second place with 59 points each.

Two pens of Reds, owned by Homestead Farms, Newtown, Conn., and Scott Poultry Farm at Groton, Mass., tied for third place with 58 points each. Toivonen Leghorn Farm at Girard, Pa., last year's more or less spectacular winner, has apparently struck its stride. These pullets finished in fourth place with a tally of 57 points.

A pen of Reds from New Hampshire and four pens of Leghorns, representing Connecticut, New Jersey, New York state and Missouri, all tied for fifth place with 56 points each. This does not mean that they all laid the same number of eggs, but that the total weight was the same in each case.

In the White Rock class Kalerok Farm of West Concord, Mass., has moved up into first place for total production from Nov. 1 to date. This pen's margin of only six points means that it must keep plugging or it will be shortly supplanted. There was no actual change in the Barred Rock alley except that the two pens competing for first honors are closer together. They are now separated by barely three points or less than one per cent.

Among the Reds a Massachusetts pen tumbled from second to fourth place, and in the Leghorn row there was still more of a mixup. A Pacific coast pen dropped from third place to fifth and an English pen moved up to take its place.

By breeds, Leghorns outlaid all the others. Rhode Island Reds ranked second, while Australorps, Jersey Giants, White Rocks and Barred Rocks all ran about neck and neck. White Wyandottes, although lagging behind the others, improved their production a bit durin gthe past week.

The leading pens to date in each of the principal varieties are as follows:

White Wyandottes—Ebenwood Fm., W. Bridgewater, Mass., 259 eggs, 236 points; Jack Wrennall, Preston, Eng., 216 eggs, 206 points.

White Rocks—Kalerok Farm, Westford, Mass., 333 eggs, 329 points; E. A. Hirt, So. Weymouth, Mass., 364 eggs, 328 points; Davidson Bros., Upton, Mass., 277 eggs, 276 points.

Barred Rocks—James Dryden, Modesto, Cal., 384 eggs, 344 points; R. Walter Bishop, Guilford, Conn., 369 eggs, 341 points; Lewis Farms, Davisville, R. I., 352 eggs, 327 points.

Rhode Island Reds—Donald I. Goodenough, Torrington, Conn., 429 eggs, 424 points; Scott Poultry Farm, Groton, Mass., 383 eggs, 368 points; Homestead Farms, Newtown, Conn., 396 eggs, 365 points; Globus P. Farm, Attleboro, Mass., 394 eggs, 364 points.

White Leghorns—Alfred J. O'Donovan, Katonah, N. Y., 406 eggs, 377 points; Mt. Hope Farm, Williamstown, Mass., 419 eggs, 371 points; Tom Barron, Preston, England, 367 eggs, 353 points; St. John's P. Farm, Oronogo, Mo., 391 eggs, 350 points; J. A. Hanson, Corvallis, Ore., 378 eggs, 344 points.

GIRL CARRIES POINT BY "FAKING" A KIDNAPING

NEWARK, N. J., Dec. 23.—(AP)— A young woman, who, police said, preferred to live with her mother in Springfield, Mass., than with her uncle in Newark, arranged it by "faking" a kidnaping.

Police said May Dadowich had been identified in Massachusetts as May Davis, 21, of Newark. Her uncle said the girl received several long distance telephone calls and spoke of "four Italians." Shortly afterward she disappeared. Located, she insisted four men, armed, kidnaped her but she escaped and rode to Springfield on a train. Police said they did not credit the story.

The camp counselor was explaining the rules of a new game.

"If the enemy calls your number from his side of the battlefield," she said, "you must be a 'dead man' immediately. Drop just where you are and lie still."

Ten minutes later, came an agonized whisper from the youngest camper:

"Please may I move now? I'm a dead man, but I'm on an ant hill!"—Parent's Magazine.

STOCKS CLOSED SLIGHTLY HIGHER IN AN ACTIVE, IRREGULAR MARKET

NEW YORK, Dec. 23—(AP)—The stock market had trouble deciding which way to go today, but finally caught the Christmas spirit and closed slightly higher after a session of wide irregularity. Trading was active, in view of the holiday's nearness and sales totaled 2,543,183 shares.

Three distinct selling movements were disposed of. The second, coming just before noon, was the severest, but the subsequent rally was also the best of the day. That recovery saw a number of stocks up 3 to 5 points, only to lose their gains when pressure was reapplied in the middle of the afternoon. The market again rallied at the close however, when many of the rails were strong. Pivotal industrials were slightly changed.

The better tone of copper, which was advanced 1-4 of a cent for export delivery, and the good demand for domestic metal, was a helpful influence. Firmness of wheat at Chicago, partly in sympathy with Premier Bennett's announcement that arrangements had been made for an orderly marketing of Canada's western crop, and the importance placed by the weekly steel reviews on the continued improvement in forward demand, were other aids. Much of the market's support on the declines appeared to come from investment buying, but was at least the suggestion of more influential buying in the final recovery.

Strength of the railroad shares, which gained roughly 1 to 5 points, had no assistance from the November earnings statements, but may have been based on hope of a definite announcement on the results of the day's consolidation conferences. Last month's net operating income reported by about a dozen carriers showed large declines from a year ago and even larger losses in comparison with October. It was expected, however, that the unfavorable percentages would be reduced when more complete returns came in.

The cut in the New York Federal Reserve bank's rediscount rate offered confirmation of reports that the easy money policy was to be maintained and that credit was to be made even cheaper as an encouragement to business. Outstanding credit was somewhat reduced in the week covered by the weekly consolidated member bank report appearing today, for security loans were down $28,000,000, and commercial loans dropped $139,000,000.

The day's movement in stock prices was broad. The last flurry of selling, quickly checked, coincided with the closing of a small New York bank that had no connection with the financial district, but the shorts who sold on that news had to be content with a small turn. U. S. Steel, American Can, Westinghouse and other favorites moved in a range of 3 points or more and closed firm. American Telephone traveled a 4 point path, finishing 1 1-2 higher. Auburn Auto's ten point move was exceptional. It gained about 7 points net.

The stronger rails included Atchison, up 5, New York Central, up 4, Nickel Plate, up 8, and Pennsylvania, Baltimore and Ohio and Illinois Central, up 1 to 2.

Corn's reaction was fractional, averaging half a cent. Wheat, however, closed 3-8 to 3-4 of a cent higher. Cotton lost 3 to 7 points.

There was little of interest in foreign exchanges. Far Easterns eased with another sag in bar silver.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Dec. 23—(AP)—Upturns in grain values formed the rule most of the time today, but corn toward the last backslid to fresh bottom levels. Influenced by profit-taking, old May corn dropped to 68 5-8c per bushel, outdoing the season's previous low. Earlier, corn had scored brisk gains owing largely to curtailment of receipts, with wheat advancing as a result of unlooked for rallies in Liverpool quotations and because of official statement that domestic old crop wheat prices would be maintained and at perhaps higher figures.

Wheat closed unsettled, 3-8 at 7-8c per bushel above yesterday, corn 1-8 at 1c down; oats unchanged to 1-2c off, and provisions unchanged to a setback of 25c.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Dec. 23—(AP)—The bond market softened today, although it was the foreign section and the speculative domestics that showed the largest degree of weakness.

There was, however, enough selling of high grade issues, especially rails, to carry prices down fractionally in this department. U. S. governments also sagged.

Action of the federal reserve bank of New York, in reducing the rediscount rate was of special interest in bond circles. It was pointed out that the extension of the easy money policy would doubtless make corporate issues more attractive to member banks and that switching from government securities, which the banks have been buying in substantial amounts, might be expected.

Some of the selling today reflected the unsettlement of the share market, and prices firmed considerably in the late trading, when stocks improved. Many of the declines in foreign bonds, although amounting to several points in numerous German and Latin American obligations, were made in thin trading, and sellers encountered low bids.

In the high grade rails, there were declines of half a point or more in Atchison general 4s, Louisville and Nashville 4s, Union Pacific 4 1-2s and Chesapeake and Ohio 4 1-2s, among others, while issues of lesser grade, such as the Eries, Missouri Pacifics and St. Pauls lost more extensively. New York Central and Pennsylvania listings were steady.

Utilities and industrials were erratic. Thus losses of a point or more in International Hydro-Electric 6s, Hudson Coal 5s, Armour 5 1-2s, Consolidated Coal of Maryland 5s, and Shell Union Oil 5s were offset by firmer prices for International Cement 5s, International Telephone 5s, American Smelting 4s, B. F. Goodrich 6s and American Water Works 6s.

Berlin City Electric issues, the Chile 6s, the Bolivians, Leipsig 6s, Saxon Public Works 7s, Uruguay 6s of 1964 and others were off 2 to 6 points. German government 5 1-2s, lost nearly a point net.

Of the U. S. governments, only the Liberty fourth, 4 1-2s, turned over in much volume. That issue dropped an eighth of a point. Losses elsewhere in the group ranged from one to eight-thirty seconds.

NEW YORK, Dec. 23—(AP)—Security and commodity exchanges, banks and other financial institutions throughout the country, will close all day Thursday in observance of Christmas. Tomorrow the Los Angeles Stock exchange will close at 11 a. m., and the Los Angeles Curb exchange will close at 12 o'clock noon, to coincide with the closing of the New York Stock exchange because of the number of eastern stocks listed in Los Angeles. The various markets in Chicago will close at noon tomorrow, but the New York stock, curb and other local exchanges will remain open for the full trading day.

Auburn Auto has resumed operations in two plants following the annual inventory period and is expected to have its 1931 lines ready for the New York automobile show in January.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Dec. 23—(AP)—The curb market closed with about an even mixture of net gains and losses after making uncertain recovery from a substantial drop during the morning.

The list as a whole maintained a fairly good undertone, although selling was active at times, and the day's transactions aggregated 618,600 shares, or 114,400 more than yesterday's.

In the utilities, American Gas and Electric gained a point, net, and American and Foreign Power 5-8. Electric Bond and Share and Middle West Utilities closed off only 1-2, after extreme declines of about a point. Standard Power and Light, a lightly traded issue, declined 2 1-2 to a new low. New England Telephone sold at 126 1-2, a new low, off 5 1-2, but the market in this rarely traded issue is thin and price changes wide on odd-lot transactions.

Oils were under pressure, but showed some comeback. Cities Service actually closed up 1-8, and Indiana finished only 1-4 lower. Gulf declined 1 1-4, then rallied 3-4. Humble and Vacuum lost more than a point each. Mines were sluggish, Newmont rallying a fraction, while Noranda sagged.

In the industrials, Swift International, South American and Australian subsidiary of Swift and Company gained 2 points in response to an increased dividend. Deere dropped to 31, then closed at 34 1-2, up 1 1-2. Aluminium company tumbled to 147 1-2, a new low, then rallied to 153, where it was off 7 net. Atlantic Coast Fisheries and Fred T. Ley sagged moderately to new ground.

HOLIDAY MAIL IS VERY HEAVY AT POST OFFICE IN NEW LONDON

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Dec. 23—Christmas business at the post office started in in such a manner that the activity there is at its height and to handle the vast accumulation of mail matter a force of many additional hands is being employed. The holiday rush started later than usual, but beginning Sunday the influx of mail matter was such that the added hands were assigned to work. The office has been deluged with mail matter, letters, post cards as well as parcel post packages. The substation, corner of Division and Woodbridge streets is also overflowing with mail matter while the transfer room at the union station is flooded with an accumulation of mail bags and packages awaiting forwarding.

SNOWPLOW KEEPS TRACKS CLEAR FOLLOWING STORM

New London had its first snowfall of the season today and a covering of several inches was the result. After several hours of rain, snow started falling and during the forenoon the Connecticut company had its big snow plow in operation, to keep the tracks free. The plow was continued in operation until this afternoon when the snowfall subsided and but little interruption was occasioned to traffic. It was the first time this winter that the plow was used, but it had been held in reserve for an emergency for several weeks.

RAILROAD PREPARES FOR BIG HOLIDAY CROWDS

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Dec. 23—In order to handle the great number of passengers that will come to New England to spend the holiday, the New Haven railroad has arranged for the operation of numerous special trains, while several of the regular trains will be run in sections. Throughout Monday night hundreds of cars were hauled to New York for the purpose of being used in accommodating the holiday crowds who will proceed eastward to enjoy the holiday with relatives and friends. The railroad anticipates handling one of the largest crowds in its history.

Miss Constance Quandt, student at Seton Hill college, Greensburgh, Pa., will spend the holidays with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Quandt of Vauxhall street.

Mrs. George S. Palmer of Florida, formerly of Norwich, is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Leonard B. Couch and Mr. Couch in Hartford. Mrs. Palmer will spend a few days during the holidays with her eldest daughter, Mrs. J. Reid Johnson, of Gardner avenue, New London.

But two prisoners were locked up at police headquarters tonight. The men engaged in a brawl on lower Bank street and were arrested by Patrolman Henry Sylvia and Automobile Patrol Officer George Cockell and will be presented in the police court tomorrow morning.

Arlen Ball, of 227 Pequot avenue; Bennie Overton, United States Coast Guard; Richard Boutelle, Mystic; John Hart, 98 Howard street and Josephine May, 11 Moore court, patients at Lawrence-Memorial hospital, were discharged today.

Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Walker, proprietress of a beauty shop, 311 State street, was in the police court today charged with violation of the natureopathy law, upon complaint of the state board of health. The case was continued to Saturday next and Mrs. Walker was released upon her own recognizance. Mrs. Walker was arrested several days ago when Prosecuting Attorney Max Boyer issued a warrant as a result of complaint having been made to him that Mrs. Walker was conducting the business of natureopathy without having been granted a license. She has been in business in New London several years.

Mrs. Walker has retained counsel in Attorney Edward Moran of Norwich. The latter said today that his client is the victim of persecution and requested that Dr. Osborne, of the state health commission, produce in court the complaining witness against Mrs. Walker. The attorney said that Dr. Osborne had never inspected the beauty shop and that whatever information he possessed regarding the shop and its equipment has been furnished by outsiders. Prosecuting Attorney Max Boyer informed Attorney Moran that he would request of the state health commissioner that the complainant be in court when Mrs. Walker's trial is scheduled to be held the latter part of the week.

William Heyna, United States coast guard, was charged with breach of the peace. His case was continued until March 2. Heyna, who has been arrested before, was arrested this morning by Automobile Patrol Officer William Corcoran upon complaint of Mrs. Heyna.

A baker, residing at 96 Main street, charged with intoxication, was fined $10 and costs, for it was his 16th presentation in court.

They failed to appear in court and their respective bonds of $10 were forfeited.

Freighter Put Back

Bronx Auto Burned

An automobile owned and driven by John Patterson of the Bronx, New York, with his daughter, Miss Mary E. Patterson, 28, a passenger, was totally destroyed by fire late yesterday and Patterson and his daughter had a miraculous escape from being burned to death. The automobile, overturning on Fort Hill, Groton, burst into flames. The father and daughter were pinned beneath the burning auto and were rescued by George Young and F. L. Merritt, residents of Fort Hill. The automobile was traveling in an easterly direction when Patterson suddenly lost control of the steering wheel with the result that the car plunged off the highway and entered a lot owned by Merritt. Young and Merritt heard the crash of the auto overturning and hastened to the lot. Young arrived first and attempted to rescue Patterson and his daughter from beneath the blazing auto but was unable to do so until Merritt arrived. Young and Merritt were successful in lifting one end of the auto to a sufficient height to permit the father and daughter to free themselves and escape the flames. When the fire burned itself out the only part of the auto that remained was the metal frame-work and this was given to Merritt. Patterson and his daughter went to Mystic where their bruises and scratches were treated at the office of a physician, after which they continued to their destination by train.

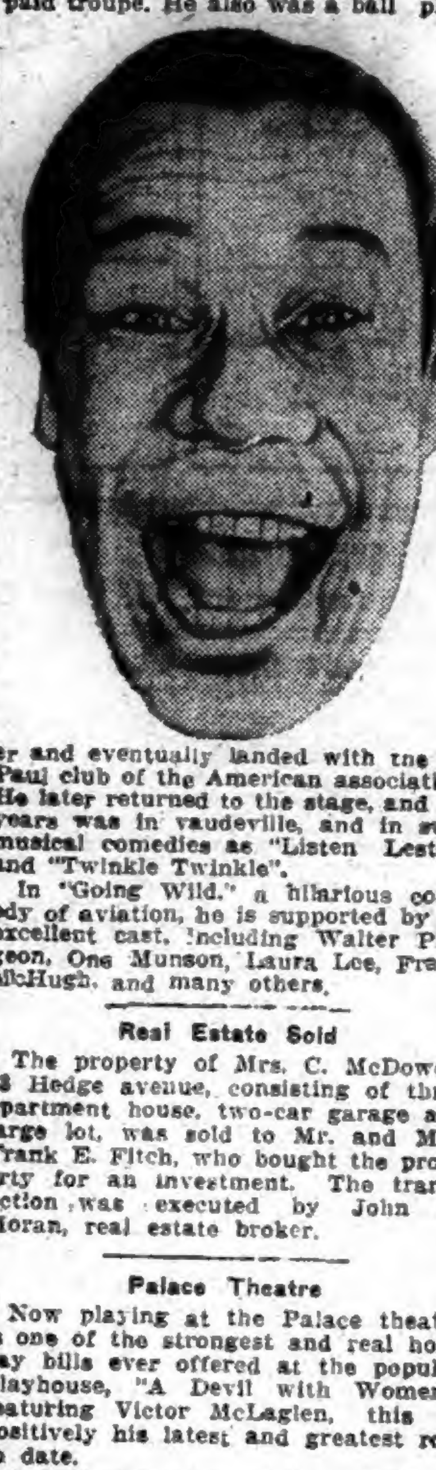
ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theatre.

Joe E. Brown, star of "Going Wild," which is now showing at the Broadway theatre, is not only the leading comedian of the talking screen, and one of the best known comics of the stage, but has many other talents. For one thing, he is an accomplished acrobat. His first stage work was as a boy acrobat in a small and very [illegible] paid troupe. He also was a ball player and eventually landed with the St. Paul club of the American association. He later returned to the stage, and for years was in vaudeville, and in such musical comedies as "Listen Lester" and "Twinkle Twinkle".



In "Going Wild," a hilarious comedy of aviation, he is supported by an excellent cast, including Walter Pidgeon, Ona Munson, Laura Lee, Frank McHugh, and many others.

Real Estate Sold

The property of Mrs. C. McDowell, 28 Hedge avenue, consisting of three apartment house, two-car garage and large lot, was sold to Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Fitch, who bought the property for an investment. The transaction was executed by John A. Moran, real estate broker.

Palace Theatre

Now playing at the Palace theatre is one of the strongest and real holiday bills ever offered at the popular playhouse, "A Devil with Women," featuring Victor McLaglen, this is positively his latest and greatest role to date.

One dark-eyed senorita should be enough to keep two men busy fighting over her, but in "A Devil with Women," Victor McLaglen's latest offering, the noted actor and his rival buddy successfully come to blows over three charmers.

Mona Maris, Luana Alcaniz and Mona Rico have the roles of the trio of heartbreakers in this exciting story of the tropics. McLaglen inaugurates a new type of role, that of a captain in the army of a little Central American republic who is assigned to capture a notorious bandit leader. His encounters with the outlaw, and his serio-comic rivalry with Humphrey Bogart over the aforesaid damsels, together with a fast moving and thrilling story, make this picture a unique one in the long list of McLaglen successes.

And on the same bill is "The Storm," a story of the wilds of the northland. Lupe Velez is the popular star in the feature. Lupe Velez is ideally cast as the naive and impulsive little French-Canadian girl. Her performance is appealing in the extreme. Paul Cavanagh and William Boyd are excellent in their roles as the two male angles of the triangle. Alphonz Ethier and Ernie S. Adams also have strong parts.

POSTOFFICE CLERKS HANDLING GREATEST RUSH IN HISTORY

handled in Chicago. The previous record for one day in New York was 14,000,000 in 1928, while that of Chicago was 12,000,000 also in 1928.

In Louisville, more than 1,000,000 pieces were mailed yesterday, exceeding last year's high mark by more than 200,000. In Syracuse, N. Y., it was estimated more than 2,000,000 pieces of mail were dispatched in the last four days, reaching the peak yesterday with 840,000. Similar reports are received from virtually all sections of the country.

While yesterday was the biggest mailing day in the history of the Cleveland post office, expectations were the present Christmas season would not equal the business of former years. At Detroit, the postmaster reported this year's bulk a little below that of last year.

Postmaster Thomas McLeister of Philadelphia said 6,331,796 packages and letters were collected yesterday from city boxes—about 665,000 pieces above the previous peak of 1929 — and the mail trains brought in about 7,000,000 more pieces.

All records fell at the Montgomery, Ala., post office yesterday, 145,000 letters and cards going through.

Indianapolis cleared 1,350,000 pieces of mail in 24 hours, a record, and sold 1,400,000 two-cent stamps. More than 1,000,000 pieces passed through the Louisville, Ky., office, exceeding the former record by 200,000.

All Christmas rush figures were broken in Providence, R. I. The new mark exceeded the previous top by 350,000 pieces.

The Atlanta post office hung up a new mark with $38,000 for the day's receipts, a gain of $8,000 over Christmas, 1928, and handled 1,217,368 pieces. Charlotte, N. C., distributed 350,000 pieces of first class mail, a new high.

Columbus, O., made a striking gain over last Christmas for the period Dec. 15-20 with receipts of $85,715 against $82,662. Incoming and outgoing parcel post moved up to 316,260 packages from 267,350 in the previous corresponding period.

Outgoing first class mail from Cincinnati soared to 2,205,000 a record. A year ago it was 1,500,000.

Stamps cancelled yesterday in Pittsburgh totaled $1,460,000 with prospects of higher figures. Harrisburg, Pa., and Scranton, Pa., also had record days.

Cleveland's peak day was 5,000,000 pieces, about a million less than a year ago. Stamp sales, however, reached $72,000 for that day, a new record for any day.

Postal receipts in Los Angeles touched $70,000 yesterday against $57,000 the same day last year. Denver had its biggest day, 1,075,000 outgoing letters, while parcel post business was 10 per cent larger this Christmas.

Kansas City handled more than 2,000,000 pieces, a record, and San Francisco increased its figure to 2,800,000, for its biggest day, and today was even busier. Stamp sales in Sacramento were 30 per cent higher, a new record. Portland, Ore., also had a new high with 2,000,000 pieces.

Christmas cards were more abundant in Boston. The mail as a whole in that city was lighter. All larger cities in Connecticut reported record handlings. New Haven moved 620,000 pieces, a gain of 80,000.

First class mail handled in Albany exceeded 600,000, greater by 65,000 pieces than any other day on the records.

New Jersey's largest city, Newark, had its biggest Christmas mailing. Business was four times heavier than on any previous day.

Baltimore's Christmas card distribution was larger, but parcel post dropped slightly. Parcel post in St. Louis also was smaller, but letter mail was a record.

In New Orleans, parcel post fell off, but Christmas cards made a new high. Memphis showed a material decrease in parcel post but a gain in Christmas cards. Jacksonville handled 475,000 pieces, 175,000 more than a year ago.

B. A. Thaxter, superintendent of nature study in Portland, Ore., schools, found 88 varieties of birds living in Yosemite valley.

was a democrat, accepting office as a democrat. He remained a democrat until the republicans came in power and when he accepted office under the republicans he automatically became a republican.

"I have never found fault with that. I concede his right to change his political affiliation every time he changes office if he wants to, but I haven't found it necessary myself."

Wood, the first of the republican regulars in congress to speak out in the party quarrel, was just as severe.

"We have been palliating and petting these fellows like Norris entirely too long," he told newspaper men, "and if there is to be a republican party we must have republicans in it. The senate is no longer republican as people think. It has reached the point where its political makeup is entirely nondescript. And Senator Norris, one of its members, is not a republican. He's not even a democrat—he is a consummate demagogue."

Wood is chairman of the house appropriations committee and chairman of the republican congressional commiteee. His statement, after he had discussed the Norris row with the president, was regarded in some quarters as notice that the administration does not care for control of the next congress if it depends on republican independent votes. Both the senate and house of the new congress are now republican by just one vote.

The senate republican regulars are keeping silent, insisting that the issue is not now before them and is one between the national organization and Norris.

Norris again denounced the campaign made by Lucas against him in the recent Nebraska election which Norris won as a republican.

Lucas issued another statement tonight through the republican national committee making clear that he spent only $850 against Senator Norris and again insisting "no one else has any responsibility in the matter whatsoever."

"Senator Norris can not understand why I would personally spend that much money for the republican party," continued Lucas. "Of course, Senator Norris would not understand why anybody would spend that much for the republican party.

"Mr. John J. Raskob and the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment were throwing thousands of dollars into the campaign against our republican senatorial and congressional candidates in a number of states. There was no money being spent by any counter organization to combat it.

"Prohibition was not an issue throughout the country but was confined to certain states and districts, and the republican national committee was not at liberty to take a hand in the wet and dry fight. I undertook to make an effort to offset the hurtful effect of the hundreds of thousands of dollars spent by Mr. Raskob and the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment by using a cartoon which called attention to the evils of the barroom and giving publicity to Mr. Raskob's slogan adopted by him when he said 'I am accepting the chairmanship of the democratic national committee to help Al Smith rid the country of this damnable prohibition.'

"The cartoons were used in states where Mr. Raskob and the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment were spending thousands of dollars against our republican candidates."

Lucas formally offered the records of the republican national committee to the senate campaign funds committee for examination and also demanded that the committee inspect the books of the democratic national committee, the democratic senatorial committee, John J. Raskob and the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment.

Henry H. Curran, president of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, tonight issued statement asserting that his organization "did not spend a single dollar in the Nebraska senatorial campaign, either for or against Senator Norris or anybody else."

"I am beginning to wonder how much Lucas and Fess are helping the republican party," he said. "I have done a good deal of campaigning in my time but the secret circulation of barroom cartoons is a new one on me."

Senator Norris asserted the opposition to himself "comes mostly, if not entirely, because I have refused to follow President Hoover when I thought he was wrong."

"His opposition is not because I am not a good republican," continued the Nebraskan. "That is only a subterfuge. His opposition is because on fundamental issues like farm relief and conservation of national resources I have not agreed with him."

Norris reiterated he had no complaint against any one who opposed him "but I do condemn the cowardly, underhanded, dishonest means they have descended to in fighting me."

"The fact that Mr. Wood makes this outburst just after talking with the president," he continued, "is another indication that the president himself is willing to lend his name to assisting the conspirators in their disreputable methods of controlling the party."

Senator Watson, of Indiana, the republican leader in his first discussion of the Lucas case, asserted tonight that the question was one confronting the president and the national committee.

"The issue of Senator Norris' regularity is not before the senate," he said. "A year ago when the senate organized after Senator Norris had opposed the candidacy of Mr. Hoover the republicans took no action against him. In the last election Senator Norris was elected as a republican and I do not see now how we can take any action. However, that is not before us and will not be before us until next year, when the new senate organizes.

"As for Mr. Lucas, the selection of officers for the national committee is one belonging to the president. If he wants to keep Lucas I will support him to the limit."

POETRY

Work—Not Alms

WHAT! charity! No, thank you, sir!
I haven't come to that!
I'm poor—in want—but I'm not here
A-holding out my hat.
I've two good arms, a willing strength,
I'm not the man to shirk.
I don't ask alms, sir. All I want
Is just a chance to work.

I'm not a beggar, sir, thank God!
I only ask my right—
A chance to earn what I and mine
Require, and in the sight
Of fellow men to be a man,
And hold my head up straight,
Whose child your child, sir, could not scorn
As an associate.

My wife and child need food and warmth—
And I can give them all
They need, with work—and help, as well
At any neighbor's call.
But idle hands are helpless, sir,
And so I ask of you
A chance to show what mine are worth
Some honest work to do.

I'm only one of thousands—and
We are not beggars, sir!
We're just as willing now to work
As good men ever were.
Don't treat us, sir, like mendicants
Whom you would fain avoid,
But give, for God's sake, if you can,
Work for the unemployed!

At Christmas Time

This is the time of year when children love
To tread the aisleways of the Christmas stores,
To gaze at all the hoard of lovely things,
Children with lessons learned and well done chores,
With visions of the gifts that Santa brings.

This is the time of year that small tots love,
There's so much talk of Christmas and its joys,
Of Santa with his reindeer and his sleigh,
Of toys and candy for good girls and boys
And of a dazzling tree on Christmas Day.

This is the time of year that grown folks love,
The spirit of the Yuletide stirs each heart,
When earth is rife with friendliness and cheer,
A time for love and kindness set apart
From all the other times of all the year.

N. Y. COMMISION POSTPONES ACTION ON SCHMELING UNTIL NEXT TUESDAY

By EDWARD J. NEIL

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—(AP)—The big showdown among the heavyweights, scheduled for today, has been postponed, either by accident or design, until the mellowing influences of the Christmas season have got in their deadly work.

Peace and good will toward man ruled the offices of the New York state athletic commission where the duel of words and wits was scheduled between doughty old William Muldoon, James A. Farley, and General John Phelan on one side and Joseph Fussell Jacobs, manager of Max Schmeling, on the other. But the battle that involves the Teuton's standing as heavyweight champion, and his naive attitude toward a commission ultimatum to sign within 15 days for a title defense against Jack Sharkey, never took place.

To Be Received "Firmly But Kindly"

Jacobs will visit the commission as a private citizen next Tuesday, when the "Merry Christmases" and best wishes of the season have died away. Under the benign influences of the holiday, Commissioner Farley said today he would be happy to receive Jacobs, though he questioned whether the latter was Schmeling's manager, and would deal with him "firmly but kindly."

There seems to be a general softening of the flinty attitudes of the commission toward Schmeling, and Schmeling toward the commission. The fistic fathers have decreed that Der Maxie must fulfill next June the promise he made the day after he won the commission's recognition as heavyweight titleholder on a foul last spring in the Yankee stadium—a promise of a return match with Sharkey.

The commission has ruled that Sharkey does not need to qualify for the match by winning his way through an elimination tournament involving the sensational southerner, Young Stribling, and the gawky gaucho from the Argentine, Victorio Campolo, although promoters insist that without this "build-up" a match between Sharkey and Schmeling would be a total financial loss. The Chicago stadium has further complicated matters by offering Schmeling $500,000 for a title go with Young Stribling in June.

It seems likely that compromises on both sides will bring the title duel to New York, however. Jacobs, under suspension by the commission as a result of the sidetracking of Arthur Buelow, Schmeling's original manager, will tell the fistic fathers that his gladiator is willing to fight the outstanding contender in June, be he Sharkey, Stribling or Campolo. The commission probably will accept this statement, restore Jacobs to good standing and permit Sharkey to engage in a fight he needs after his long layoff—either against Stribling in Miami in February, or against Campolo here. Thus tender dignities on all sides will be safeguarded and another heavy financial loss may be saved the Garden.

Al Brown Ready to Fight

Ultimatums delivered to two other champions Friday brought one response that was expected and one deep silence that was also anticipated. Al Brown, bantamweight titleholder, replied to the commission demand that he sign for a title fight within 15 days with the response that only an offer from a promoter was necessary to swing him into action. Pete Sanstol, of Norway, was accepted as his challenger.

The commission explained with a blush that it had been slightly misinformed regarding Brown's last previous title defense and that the six-month period of grace allowed a titleholder had not expired in the case of the Panama Negro. Brown defended his crown in a 15-round match with Eugene Huat in Paris Oct. 5.

Mickey Walker, middleweight champion, who also was ordered to fight at the weight or lose recognition here as the titleholder, failed to answer the ultimatum. He has been in the bad graces of the local board for almost two years.

Maxie Rosenbloom, light-heavyweight champion, who has been having trouble finding work, will get a chance to defend his title against Jimmy Slattery in Buffalo, during January or February.

ROCKNE WARNED TO LIMIT HIS ACTIVITIES

ROCHESTER, Minn., Dec. 23—(AP)—His physician's warning to limit his strenuous activities or face the possibility of a complete breakdown tonight confronted Knute Rockne, famous football coach of Notre Dame.

Dr. C. J. Barborka, of the Mayo clinic, gave his verdict after an exhaustive examination of the coach who came here last week for a physical inventory, fearing a return of phlebitis of the leg, an ailment that once before sent him to bed.

Rockne, the physician said, shows no immediate signs of further trouble in the leg, but is suffering from fatigue which closely approaches the line of exhaustion, and must limit his activities or face grave consequences.

Immediately after the outcome of the physician's examination was announced, the Notre Dame coach returned to his room at a hotel here and denied himself to all inquirers.

Dr. Barborka explained his findings do not mean that Rockne must cease coaching but he must place a curb on his other activities, including speech making, writing for magazines and other tasks, which coupled with the coaching tasks.

PITTSBURGH WINS FROM DARTMOUTH QUINTET

PITTSBURGH, Dec. 23—(AP)—With a pair of guards, Arture and Smith, showing the way, the University of Pittsburgh basketball team defeated Dartmouth here tonight, 39 to 24. The two accounted for 19 Panther points, each snaring four field goals, but with Smith capturing individual honors by netting two free throws to Arture's one.

Mages was one of Dartmouth's stars, rallying his teammates until they crowded Pitt, 13-14, midway in the first period upon being inserted at a moment when the Panthers were threatening to make it a walkaway. Pitt pulled away, however, and led at halftime, 39 to 24.

BERG AND HARVEY HERE LOOKING FOR BOUTS

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—(AP)—Two English boxing stars, Jack (Kid) Berg, lightweight, and Len Harvey, British middleweight champion, arrived here today aboard the S. S. Olympic.

Berg hopes to get a match with Tony Canzoneri, lightweight champion. Harvey has no definite plans but expects to make at least one ring appearance in Madison Square Garden before he returns to England.

LOOS SHOOTS PAR GOLF TO LEAD AT AGUA CALIENTE

AGUA, CALIENTE, Mexico, Dec 23—(AP)—Eddie Loos, professional of Pasadena, Cal., and Chicago, led the field for the first 18 holes of the qualifying round in the second annual Agua Caliente $25,000 open golf championship here today. Loos had a 71, even par.

The score topped the field of 97 professionals and amateurs who teed off in the first half of the qualifying round. Not another golfer equalled par or came near it except Dewey Longworth of Oakland, Cal., who shot a 72, one stroke over par, for second place. A high wind wrecked the scores of early starters.

Loos played under adverse conditions, a high wind sweeping down from the upper reaches of the Tijuana river valley to stem the efforts of most of the field.

The wind and the mental hazard of the new ball combined to send most of the scores skyrocketing, indicating a total of about 165 for the 36 holes would make the cherished circle of 50 which will be admitted to the Agua Caliente $25,000 open tournament January 13 to 16.

Some 40 professionals were eligible through having been amoung the first 30 in the national open, the 32 qualifiers in the 1930 P. G. A. championship, entered from a foreign country, or a prize winner in the initial Agua Caliente event last January. The rest of the field is being selected through the qualifying round.

Third in the big field today was Jim Heaney of New York with a 74, three over par.

Scores of the leaders:

71—Eddie Loos, Pasadena, Calif.

72—Dewey Longworth, Oakland, Calif.

74—Jim Heaney, New York.

76—Roy Tufts, San Diego; Fred Morrison, Los Angeles; Willard Hutchison, unattached; Willie Coggin, San Francisco; (x) F. Byerley, Portland.

77—Al Cameron, Agua Caliente; J. Thompson, Colorado Springs; Oscar Oman, Minnesota; Jack Tarrant, Los Angeles; Tom Rakletts, Akron; R. Guldahl, Dallas; M. E. Nagell, Buffalo.

78—Dallas Jeffers, Long Beach, Cal.; Al Zimmerman, Portland, Ore.; Chick Fraser, Los Angeles.

79—Chet Beer, Bakersfield, Cal.; Art Bell, Honolulu; Ivan Johnson, Portland, Ore.; Louis Nevy, San Francisco.

80—Bill Foley, Coronado, Cal.; Ray Mangrum, Texas; Tony Manero, New York; Ed. Stokes, Denver; Cecil Smith, Denver; Clarence Clark, Tulsa; J. Percell, Feather River, Cal.; Clark Spiers, Los Angeles; Art Roux, La Habra, Cal.; Frank Williams, Chicago.

CONNIE MACK CELEBRATES 68TH BIRTHDAY QUIETLY

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 23. — (AP)—Connie Mack, entering the 69th year of his colorful career, spent his birthday on the job.

High up in Shibe park tower, overlooking the snow-covered field of many a hard-fought baseball battle, Connie received the well wishes of his many friends.

Other baseball managers may be off taking things easy during the Yuletide season and players may be attending the meetings of the Stove league, telling of their prowess in by-gone days, but Connie Mack is busy with the future.

Mack was discovered today all alone in his tower office autographing baseballs—Christmas presents to crippled children. Placing his name on baseballs, programs, menus and what not to please admirers, is not new to the tall tutor of the world champion Athletics, and the thing becomes an irksome task sometimes.

But today was his birthday and Christmas was at hand, so the autographing became pleasant. How many of the American league balls Connie was sending to the crippled youngsters he would not say, for while he will talk of baseball he keeps his charitable acts to himself.

On his desk was a pile of balls and scattered about were piles of telegrams and letters, all wishing him well. Frequently there was a ring of the telephone, and then: "Oh, fine. Thank you very much. Merry Christmas to you."

The manager of the A.'s said he could not realize that he was 68. "I don't feel that old," he said. "I get tired earlier than I used to, but that is all."

As to the prospects for next season, the manager of the world champions said he was hopeful. No one ever catches Mack predicting what his teams will do.

Mack spiked a rumor that the Athletics were about to trade George (Mule) Haas and Jimmy Moore, outfielders, to the St. Louis Browns for Leon (Goose) Goslin, slugging outfielder, and George Blaeholder, a pitcher.

"You'll hear reports of all kinds of trades from now until the middle of June," said Mack, "but they are only rumors."

"We'd like to have Goslin and Blaeholder, but St. Louis most certainly would not part with them. And as far as Haas and Moore are concerned, I'm satisfied with both boys. They certainly have played well for the Athletics."

Connie will go south about January 15, preceding his players to Florida about a month. He will spend much of his time there before the spring practice begins playing golf.

SPORTSMANSHIP DINNER AT NEW YORK MONDAY

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—(AP)—Exemplars of sportsmanship will gather Monday at the luncheon at Town Hall club of the Sportsmanship Brotherhood.

Bill Roper, former Princeton coach; Devereux Milburn, a vice-president of the Brotherhood and international polo-ist; Gustavus T. Kirby, president of the Public Schools Athletic league; Dr. William Mather Lewis, president of Lafayette college; William J. Bingham, Harvard's athletic director; Dr. Charles W. Kennedy, N. C. A. A. president, and Commander F. G. Reinicke of the Naval academy, are a few of the well known names being written on the place cards for the luncheon.

The luncheon serves as the annual meeting of the Brotherhood, organized "to foster and spread the spirit of sportsmanship throughout the world."

Dr. Lewis and Mr. Kirby will be the principal speakers, and James E. Rogers, director of the National Physical Education service, will lead a round table discussion on the theme of sportsmanship.

For Charity's Sake.

The first sporting event for charity in Norwich is slated for the evening of Friday of this week and the proceeds will be given to some local welfare organization for the relief of the unemployed. J. Howard Demarest, physical director of the local Y. M. C. A. is the sponsor of the benefit games of which there will be three. In practically every town throughout the country promoters of sport are coming forward with offers to help those who have been made destitute by lack of employment. Sporting event after sporting event is being held and the proceeds being turned over to charity. You hear lots about the sport racket, the hard-hearted promoter and the money-grabbing athlete, but when there is a cry for assistance it is these some promoters and athletes who come forward with assistance. The promoters put in hours and hours of hard work to put their charity event over; the athlete gives his services gladly which all goes to show that those in the sport racket are not so heartless after all. It is sincerely hoped that the people of Norwich will turn out for this charity event. The basketball games will be well worth seeing.

Innovation In Basketball.

At Plainfield last night in the Southern New England Basketball league an innovation was tried and worked out to perfection. LeRoy A. Dissinger, who has been instrumental in promoting basketball in eastern Connecticut and who has been experimenting with ways to speed up the game put a plan into operation in last night's games. Instead of the regular tap-off the team's tossed for the privilege to out the ball into play. The ball under Dissinger's plan is put into play from the end zone by the team defending that goal. When a goal has been made the team against whom the goal has been scored puts the ball into play from under its own basket. This method saves the time that it takes for players to take their positions and have the ball tossed up in the center of the floor. It also discounts the advantage of the tall and rangy center. A team with a tall center has a distinct advantage over the other team as is obvious. The new system of play evens matters considerably. The system as it was tried out last night met with instant favor and in all probability will be used during the remainder of the season.

ARMY-NAVY GAME NETS HALF MILLION FOR CHARITY

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.— (AP) — The Army-Navy football game at the Yankee stadium December 13 earned more than half a million dollars for unemployment relief, an auditor's report revealed today.

Gross receipts from all sources were $632,577.26 but expenses of $25,164.81 incurred by Grover Whalen's Salvation Army citizens committee reduced this total to $607,412.45. From this still must be deducted the cost of transporting the Midshipmen and Cadet football teams and students from Annapolis and West Point to New York and return and other expenses incidental to the participation of the two academies.

Sale of 57,003 tickets produced $501,870.00. The general public paid $390,245 for 34,678 tickets; the Military academy $46,835 for 9,367; and the Naval academy $64,790 for 12,958. Free tickets to the press, radio men and other workers totalled 13,994, leaving 7,241 of the total of 78,238 tickets unsold.

Sale of programs and broadcasting contracts brought in $102,500; radio listeners contributed $5,373.68 and the sale of an autographed football added $5,000 more.

The rental of the committee's headquarters in the Hotel Biltmore was contributed by John McE. Bowman, president of the Bowman-Biltmore Hotel corporation, and Jacob Ruppert turned over without cost the Yankee stadium.

TORONTO BATTLES TO TIE WITH MONTREAL

MONTREAL, Dec. 23.—(AP)—With only three spares on the bench, the Toronto Maple Leaves fought the big squad of the Montreal Maroons to a standstill tonight winding up with a 4-4 tie. The one point gained by the draw put the Leafs on even terms with the New York Americans, in third place in the Canadian division standing of the National Hockey league, and left the Maroons one point behind the division-leading Montreal Canadiens.

Five of the eight goals were scored in the third period after the Maroons had taken a 2-1 lead in the second frame. Torono sank three goals in rapid succession only to have the Maroons come back with two counters to tie. Bill Phillips scored the final goal with only a minute to go.

Andy Blair scored first for Toronto while Ace Bailey, Harvey Jackson and Happy Day made the third period counters. King Clancy assisted in two of them. Nels Stewart tallied twice for the Maroons and Al Huggins and Phillips made the tieing goals. Stewart and Red Horner received major penalties in the final period.

NORTH-SOUTH BENEFIT GAME TEAMS NAMED

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—(AP)—Lineups were virtually decided on today during workouts for the football stars of the North and the South who meet in the name of charity at Ebbets field Sunday.

In the northern backfield, as the squads lined up in practice, were Swede Hanson, of Temple; French, of Penn State; John Karcis, of Carnegie Tech; Margolis, of St. John's, Brooklyn; and Antos, of Boston college. They worked behind a line comprised of Obst, of Syracuse; Dornoff and Andrews, of Marquette; Tully, of Pittsburgh; Kaplan and Shawley, of Penn State; and Red Stickles, of St. Lawrence.

The southern backfield comprised Bethea, of Florida; Williams, of Kentucky; Buddy Hackman, of Tennessee; Davidson, of Georgia; Bell, of Oglethorpe; and Phipps, of Kentucky. In the line were Bodenger and Holland, of Tulane; Magner, of North Carolina; Speer, of Georgia Tech; Brandt and Thayer, of Tennessee; Church and Fulton, of Oglethorpe; and Forquer and Rose, of Kentucky.

SHYMAS FACE FAST OPPOSITION IN BELAIR'S STARS CHRISTMAS DAY

LINEUP

Shymas	Belair's All-Stars
Yerrington, rf	rf, Burnam
Dugas, Wilke, lf	lf, Foote
Coleman, c	c, Long
Lamieux, Adams, rg	rg, Taylor, Brown
Pingree, Capt., lg	lg, Belair

A holiday basketball attraction which should pack Parish hall to the door will take place Christmas afternoon at 3 o'clock when Joe Belair, former local boy, leads his All-Stars team in battle against the Shymas in what should be the banner game of the season. All basketball lovers in the state for the past twenty years will remember Joe as he performed with the leading teams in the state and has always been one of the main cogs in any team that he has performed with. Among the teams that Joe has performed with are Willimantic Emeralds, Plainfield, Taftville Crescents when that team was rated as the New England champs about ten years ago and later appearing with the Army-Navy team. The appearance of Joe Belair alone should prove to be a big attraction amongst the old timers but he will have in his lineup several college stars and the leading players in the New London City league. This team is without a doubt one of the best attractions to appear in this vicinity in the past few seasons. In the Stars' lineup will be Charles Burnam of Duke college in Carolina at left forward, Foote of N. H. college playing right, Long formerly of St. John's Prep, Brooklyn, and now with the Ockford, center, Huck Taylor, star of the Socony team at left guard, with Joe Belair at the other guard position. Brown will be held in reserve.

The Shymas after their win over the Southbridge five last week have been practicing hard for the game and feel sure that they will come out on the long end of the score, thus showing Joe Blair that Taftville can still boast of pretty good basketball players. Manager Sullivan of the Shymas will send the following players into the fray: Ray Yerrington of Springfield college, Lefty Dugas, Taftville's contribution to big league baseball and young Lefty Wilke at the forward position, Tom Coleman, center with Lemieux, Adams and Capt. Lee Pingree in the back court. This team is putting up a good brand of basketball holding its own against the fastest teams in this part of New England and are deserving of the patronage of the local sport followers.

In the preliminary game the Shymas will meet a fast Norwich team which will consist of most of the Y Emps. and a fast game is expected thus keeping the fans on edge for the big game between the Shymas and the local favorite Joe Belair and his All-Stars.

ALABAMA HAS FIRST WORKOUT IN CALIFORNIA

PASADENA, Cal., Dec. 23—(AP)—Alabama's Crimson Tide poured into southern California late today and though darkness was fast setting in, Coach Wallace Wade whisked his football squad to Patterson field for a brief workout for the New Year's game with Washington State.

These southern gentlemen and the accompanying party which detrained at Alhambra, near here, were given a rousing reception both by Washington State officials and Californians.

Fresh from a victorious season but a bit weary of the long cross-country jaunt, the giant Alabama players radiated confidence. They are here for a third Tournament of Roses game and see no reason why the record of one victory and a tie should not be improved.

Coach Orin "Babe" Hollingbery called for another light workout for his Washington State Cougars at Tournament park, satisfied with the way his team was rounding into top form.

When told Wade is talking of using Freddie Sington at guard, both on the offense and defense, Hollingbery smiled.

"Let him," he said. "I'll wager he doesn't get away under punts like he did against Georgia. We'll stop him in the line."

Hellingberry has unbounded faith in his linemen, and doesn't care who knows it. Mel Hein, a rangy center, has never taken time out in varsity competition. George Hurley and Jack Parodi are a powerful pair of guards, while many think Harold Ahlskog, tackle is better than Glenn Edwards, the 235 pound giant All-American tackle.

There are four ends about on a par—John Hurley, brother of George; Sas Hansen, George Hill and Tyle Maskell. Maskell is a placement kicker.

Since the Northwesterners arrived yesterday, their Cougar mascot, "Butch" Meeker has been in a surly mood in his cage at the Huntington hotel. Washington State followers say this is an ill omen for the boys from Alabama.

ZUPPKE DENIES HE WILL LEAVE ILLINOIS

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., Dec. 23—(AP)—Bob Zuppke, football coach at the University of Illinois for the past 18 years, today brushed aside rumors that he would resign to take up his work in other football fields by announcing he would not leave Illinois under any consideration.

Coach Zuppke's name had been linked with reports that he had been planning to accept coaching jobs at either California or Pennsylvania.

"Understand that I do not want to be put in the position of declining offers which have not been made," he said just before his departure for Dallas, Texas, where he will coach the Middle-Western team in the Dixie classic New Year's day. "So far as California is concerned, I have not been approached. But to settle the gossip which has connected my name with several positions, I want to say that I shall not leave Illinois under any consideration.

Director of Athletics George Huff revealed that Zuppke had turned down many attractive offers.

Goldstein Beats Garafola

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—(AP)— Ruby Goldstein, former lightweight contender, hammered out a six-round decision over Willie Garafola, of New York, at the Broadway arena tonight. Although Goldstein won every round he was "rusty" after his long layoff from the ring and revealed little of the punching power that once made him one of the most feared battlers in the business. He weighed 148 pounds; Garafola 147 1-4.

THREE TEAMS TIED FOR LEAD IN S. N. E. LEAGUE

(Special to The Bulletin)

PLAINFIELD, Dec. 23.—When Putnam, considered one of the weak teams of the league, displayed a brilliant attack against the league-leading Danielson team here tonight in the Southern New England league, they surprised everyone present by trampling on Danielson 66 to 32. Putnam's victory threw the league into a triple tie between Danielson, Willimantic and Plainfield, and was one of the upsets of the league season. Putnam played inspired basketball and ran rings around the league leaders, who had won six straight games. Leo of the Putnam team, former high school star, shot ten baskets from the floor and two fouls, to lead his teammates in the scoring with 22 points.

In the other two games Stafford Springs swamped New London Tel and Tel, 39 to 11, and New London Boys' club defeated Jewett City, 37 to 24.

One of the features of the game was the using of the new system of play which does away with the tap off after each goal. Instead of the tap off the team which has just been scored on is given the ball in the end zone and play starts from there. This saves considerable time and makes the play much more even and the scores much closer. If this style of play is favored it will be used during the rest of the season. GEORGIA TECH LETS FIVE COACHES GO

ATLANTA, Ga., Dec. 23—(AP)—The Atlanta Journal said today five Georgia Tech assistant coaches would not be retained next year.

Bill Fincher, line coach, said in an interview his contract had been cancelled, and that Oliver Miles, backfield; Captain Henry W Robinson, end coach; Mack Tharpe, coach of the reserves, and Kenneth Thrash, assistant freshman coach, would not be retained.

In a later statement the Georgia Tech Athletic association said Fincher was the only one of the five under contract, which had been cancelled for "good and sufficient reasons."

The athletic association announced Miles, who was not under contract, would not return next year, and that Thrash and Tharpe may or may not be asked to serve again.

Captain Robinson, attached to the R. O. T. C. unit at the school, probably will be transferred by the war department, as his stay at Georgia Tech expires this year, the statement said.

Head Coach Bill Alexander, Roy Mundorff, basketball, Kid Clay, baseball, and Mike Chambers, trainer, will be retained.

Tharpe, Thrash and Fincher are former Tech players. Miles is a former Princeton backfield star.

Fincher said he was certainly surprised when he learned he would not be kept at Tech.

"I had heard no word from any source, even the authorities, themselves, as to my inefficiency or lack of capability," he said. "I had always done my best and had cause to think that was good enough."

Coach W. A. Alexander leaves here Christmas day for a coaches' meeting in New York. He said assistants might be signed at that time.

Bernal Still Champion

In the final game of the pool tournament at the Totoket club at Occum Frank Bernal defeated Arthur Chabotte 100 to 97. The match was close and well played, Bernal running out on Chabotte when the latter needed only three counters for a win and the title. Chabotte and Bernal will play again early in the spring for the village title.

HAWKES GLOBE TROTTERS ARE FAST BASKETBALL STARS

Johnny Hawkes' Globe Trotters who clash with the Plainfield Pros on Christmas night are reputed to be one of the fastest basketball teams in the country today. Hawkes, himself, is a brilliant star although handicapped by having only one arm. In an exhibition recently Hawkes shot 23 consecutive foul baskets which is some record even for a two-handed player. Hawkes plays a forward position and has as his running mate Turk Jones, former Penn State league star. Joe Fogarty who plays center is another star from the metropolitan district. Colgan and Clough, the two guards, have played with such teams as the Lithuanians, Passaic Russians, Rochester and New York Nationals.

The team will play 110 games while on tour this winter. The early season record is as follows:

Coach Demarest announced that Dud Burr, former Trinity star would be with the Seniors for the remainder of the season. Another player who will join the Seniors is Ernie Stevens who was with the Academy team two years ago but who is graduating at the mid-winter recess.

The bleacher seats will be brought out for the games and it is anticipated that they will be filled. Every cent of the proceeds of the games will go to charity for the relief of the unemployed.

BLACK HAWKS TAKE ROUGH GAME FROM QUAKERS

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 23.—(AP)—The Chicago Black Hawks defeated the Philadelphia Quakers in a rough and hard-fought National Hockey league match at the Arena tonight, 3 to 2.

The Quakers counted first when Hib Milks dashed through the Chicago team in the opening session to count, but before the period was over, Johnny Gottselig had equalized the count with a low shot from 15 feet out.

Tommy Cook scored the next two goals, although he had nothing to do with one of them. In the second chapter, Peaches Lyons, of the home side, knocked the puck into the net and since Cook was the nearest man to the play he received credit for the goal.

In the third period, Cook drove down alone and beat Wilf Cude, young goal tender, with a flip shot. Before the game ended, Barton, on a pass from Lowery, counted for the Quakers.

RANGERS PLAY BRILLIANT GAME TO BEAT CANADIENS

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—(AP)—Reaching their finest form of the National Hockey league season in a dazzling display of speed and skill, the New York Rangers trounced the Montreal Canadiens, 5 to 1, tonight, and advanced to third place in the American division.

The Rangers had all the better of the play in a furiously fought game that frequently was as rough as it was fast.

Bill Cook scored three Ranger goals, two of them on brilliant unassisted attempts. Frank Boucher scored once and passed to Bill for another counter while Bun Cook made the final goal.

Howie Morenz made the only Canadien goal with Albert Leduc getting the assist.

GREENEVILLE

Mr. and Mrs. Reid McIntyre, of South Manchester, were week-end visitors with relatives in Greeneville.

Many of the local residents are decorating their homes for the Christmas holidays. The most prettily decorated street is the homes on Prospect street. Electric lights of all descriptions are seen in the homes. Electric candles are taking the place of the real ornaments and they are much safer and are a less fire hazard. Beautiful Christmas trees are quite prominent throughout the decorations, while one resident has a huge silver star which is illuminated with an electric light. St. Mary's church and rectory are very prettily decorated. Two large trees are on both sides of the front entrance of the church, while in the front of the rectory are two strings of blue lights. The sight is a very pleasing one.

The Greeneville H club held its regular meeting Monday evening in their club rooms on Fourth street, regular business being transacted with President Wallace Atterbury presiding. The committee in charge of the Christmas carol singing reported progress and that a large turnout would be present for the midnight singing.

George Swanton has returned to his home at Providence, after spending the week-end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Swanton, on North Main street.

Miss Delia Shea and John O. Shea have returned to their home at Jewett City, after spending the week-end at the home of their cousin, Mrs. Michael Shea, on North Main street.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Michaels have returned to their home at Perth Amboy, N. J., after being the guests of relatives in Greeneville.

Stephen Shegoda and Henry Mileski, of Fifth street, spent the week-end with relatives at Providence.

Jacob Goldblatt has returned to his home on Central avenue, after spending a few days with relatives at Worcester.

Many local Sunday schools plan to hold their annual Christmas exercises in the schools this week. The annual Christmas tree party of the Third Baptist church will be held Friday evening, while St. Andrew's church is planning to have its party next Monday evening in the Guild room.

TAFTVILLE

Joseph E. Benac of Pratte avenue, has with him for the Christmas holidays, his son Theodore J. Benac of St. Michael's college, Winooski, Vermont, and his daughter, Miss Yvonne Benac of the Academy of the Holy Family at Baltic.

The memorial park at the corner of South B street and Norwich avenue has been festooned with colored lights.

Curtis A. Hedler of the Worcester Polytechnic Institute is at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Gustave Hedler of Terrace avenue for the holiday recess.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Michaud have given up their house on South B street.

Rene Mathieu, U. S. N. is at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Mathieu and family of Pratte avenue for Christmas.

We are notifying the public that there will be 4 barbers at your service at Garry's Barber shop, 30 Hunters avenue.—adv.

Postmaster Edward Adams states that there is no depression in the post-office business. With three assistants he has had the busiest Christmas season since he took office. Packages piled up almost to the ceiling and sacks mail covering almost the entire floor space make the local office look like Santa Claus' workshop. Over 10,000 letters went out on the outgoing mail Saturday evening, and they have been increasing ever since. Monday morning over 8,000 letters came in addressed to local people.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Robb and son Jackie of South Manchester are guests of Mrs. Robb's parents, Mr. and Mrs Thomas Crowe of South A street.

Austin LeMoine, Jr., a student at St. John's school, Danvers, Mass., is spending the Christmas vacation at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs Austin LeMoine of Norwich avenue.

The Rocknook Well Child's conference is to be omitted this week because of the holiday.

HOLIDAY GREETINGS TO BOY SCOUT COMMITTEE

President H. D. Larrabee of the Eastern Connecticut Council of Boy Scouts has sent hearty Christmas greetings to the members of the executive committee. The greetings read:

After a difficult twelve-month we come upon another Christmas season and with it we find a new "Peace on earth good will to men."

The Eastern Connecticut council, as never before has applied the test to scouting, and scouting has emerged even stronger and more vital to the social order.

The road immediately ahead is far from smooth. Hidden from view, its dangers are magnified. Clear thinking, cautious steps and eyes alert to opportunities will bring us safely to the next milestone, serving boys along the way and preserving for generations yet unborn the ideals and manly attributes of Scouting's program of character building and citizenship training.

May we be granted the vision, the strength and the courage to carry forward the banner of boyhood!

NORWICH TOWN

ALL IS IN READINESS FOR TREE EXERCISES

The snow storm of Monday night and Tuesday has afforded an attractive setting for the community Christmas tree exercises this (Wednesday) evening, on Norwich Town Green, at 7:45. It is expected that a large delegation of Norwich and suburban residents will congregate around the gaily lighted tree to sing Christmas carols, under direction of Joseph C. Worth, song leader. This December, 1930, marks the eighth celebration of this kind, originated and promoted each year by the Norwich Rural association. For a community affair it seems most fitting for a large company of people to contribute their voices at this time, in honor due the King of Kings. The program of Christmas carols usually lasts about one-half hour. There is plenty of parking space near the green for motorists. The tree makes a very beautiful effect, with a star of 20 white lights at the tip. The residents around the green on East Town street, Elm avenue, and a part of Town street, greatly enjoy its brilliancy each year, as the lights are turned on nightly through the Christmas season. Especially interested are the members of the Johnson Home family and the kiddies at Rock Nook Children's home.

Visited Riverside

Following a custom for several years, Ever Ready circle of the King's Daughters connected with the First Congregational church paid its annual visit to the Riverside Home on Asylum street, Sunday afternoon, and conducted a Christmas service. The 67 members at this home heard carol singing by the 16 visitors, as well as a brief talk by Rev. Wilfred M. Wilton, pastor of this church, who brought a friendly greeting to the home. The circle conducted the responsive reading and the Bible quotations were by Clyde M. Beebe. Miss Doris Estelle Rose played a piano selection, also accompanied for the carol singing. A feature was the cornet solos, two Christmas carols, by Master Ellis Bentley. The members of Ever Ready circle presented each one at the home a small gift and a box of candy. Among those present from Norwich Town were three young girls from the Intermediate C. E. society of the Congregational church, Elizabeth Browning, Alma Wilton and Edith Seaman, who presented to each a card. These cards were made by the Intermediate society during its last few meetings in the chapel.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Thomas Wildowsky

After an illness of two weeks with heart trouble, Mary Novak Wildowsky, 49, wife of Thomas Wildowsky, died Tuesday morning at her home on Scotland road. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs John Novak, of Austria, in which country she was born, in October, 1881. She had been in this country for the past 35 years. At St. Mary's church, Greeneville, April, 1899, she was married to Thomas Wildowsky, who survives her with the following children: Mrs. Henry King, Medford Hills, N. Y.; Misses Victoria, Anna and May Wildowsky, Peter, Stanley and Andrew Wildowsky, all of Norwich. There are five grandchildren, Grace Elizabeth, Lucille Anna, Prudence Helen, Doris Gertrude and Eugene Andrew Wildowsky, all of Norwich. There are two sisters, Mrs. Madaline Gryzwacz, of Ware, Mass., Mrs. Sophia Wildowsky, of Mechanicsville, N. Y., and two brothers, John Novak, of Ware, Mass, and Walter Novak, of Valley Falls, R. I. Mrs. Wildowsky was a member of St. Patrick's parish. Prior to the family moving to Scotland road ten years ago, for the same number of years the home was on Wauwecus Hill, near the Leffingwell section. She was a faithful wife and mother and her chief interests were centered in the home, where she will be greatly missed.

In anticipation of Christmas, Norwich Town residents were never so enthusiastic in the matter of decorations of homes, interior and exterior, as well as adorning lawns, etc. In many sections nearly every street has conspicuous red and green, either in the form of porch or window boxes, or window decorations inside of colored light bulbs. Christmas trees brilliantly lighted in some places are on the lawn, while in many locations a tree, lighted, stands in front of a window on the inside. Large wreaths on front doors are lighted and some of the window boxes contain lights. In some places ropes of ground pine are twined around veranda posts and in other places front doors are either arched with ground pine or laurel roping. Something emblematic of the Yuletide season attracts the eye to the numerous decorated homes on the principal streets.

May You Have a Real New England Christmas

Somehow we of New England can't imagine any other Christmas but our own.

We want our Christmas decorated with snow, garnished with a little finger-biting cold, and served up with just a dash of sleigh bells, holly and tinsel. And indoors we want comfort, warmth, and friendly good cheer.

This is just the kind of Christmas that the Edward Chappell Company hopes everyone in Norwich will enjoy.

LUCAS REBUKES NORRIS FOR ATTACK ON THE PRESIDENT

Assuming Sole Responsibility For His Anti-Drive on Norris, Lucas Brands the Norris Tirade as a Malicious Attempt to Embarrass President Hoover—Asserts That as a Renegade Republican Norris is in a Class by Himself—Representative Wood Calls Norris a Crawfish

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24—(AP)—The republican attack on Senator Norris of Nebraska sharpened tonight in bristling statements that came from two party leaders.

Robert H. Lucas, executive director of the republican national committee, described as "malicious" the Nebraska independent's statement indicating President Hoover was back of Lucas' anti-Norris drive.

A little later Representative Wood of Indiana, chairman of the republican congressional committee, repeated that Norris was a "demagogue" and asserted that he made his recent attack on the Nebraskan after a white house call about another matter and the president did not know he intended making it.

Meanwhile, Senator Howell, Norris' republican colleague, renewed his demand that Lucas either be dismissed or that he resign.

In a statement through the national committee, Wood asserted that Norris proved he was a "demagogue" when he repeats old campaign calumnies of the president which were worn threadbare and proven false a number of years ago.

"Senator Norris insists he is not a democrat, but is a progressive. A crawfish also is progressive, but he always progresses backwards."

Both Wood and Lucas said they had no quarrel with any other independent republicans, because they had supported the party's president nominees. Norris campaigned for Alfred E. Smith in 1928.

"In view of Senator Norris' malicious statement attempting to embarrass the president by fastening upon him responsibility for my actions," Lucas said in a statement dictated to republican national headquarters from his home in Louisville, "I wish to say again that neither the president nor anyone in the white house ever had any knowledge, or were even consulted about, my action in connection with Senator Norris."

"What I did," he added, "was solely and emphatically upon my own responsibility and I was appointed by and am solely responsible to the republican national committee."

A similar view was held by republican leaders in the senate. However, they were maintaining the strictest silence.

Lucas issued two statements during the day. The first coming from republican headquarters was that he had no quarrel with Senators Cutting, New Mexico, Howell, Nebraska, Nye, North Dakota, all identified with the independent wing, or any other senator "who affiliated himself with the republican party."

"With the exception of Norris, they all supported the republican party and its nominees in 1928," he said, adding:

"Senator Norris, on the other hand, is in a class by himself. He denounced the nominee of the republican convention at Kansas City in 1928. He threw his support to and made speeches for Gov. Alfred E. Smith, the democratic nominee. No other republican senator did this, whether he be called a progressive, regular or member of the farm-labor party.

"In the recent campaign I supported with all my heart every national republican candidate except Senator Norris, because those candidates had remained loyal to the party in the campaign of 1928 and were entitled to my support and the support of all republicans. I assisted the anti-Norris republicans of Nebraska because Senator Norris had deserted them in 1928 and supported the democratic party.

"I shall not engage in any controversy with any senator, irrespective of his political views, who remained in the party and supported its nominees in 1928, and consequently I am not disposed to reply to the cricitism made of me by them."

CAPT. HAWKS ADVOCATES MORE SPEED FOR PLANES

NEW YORK, Dec. 24. — (AP) — Speed, speed, more speed. That's the dish Captain Frank Hawks would serve aviation for Christmas.

"I'd like to see all schedules speed up to at least 150 miles an hour cruising speed," he said today to the Associated Press in commenting on the year which lies ahead of aviation.

"We've got the plush interiors, the heated planes, the ash trays," he said. "What we need is more speed."

Captain Hawks has flown during 1930 the fastest commercial plane in the world—his little low winged Travelair, the so-called "Mystery Ship."

He holds the transcontinental record, at less than 12 hours flying time. He has made the trip between New York and Washington, between New York and Boston, between New York and a lot of other places faster than any aviator ever flew those distances before.

At 250 miles an hour he has dashed around the country telling manufacturers, pilots, flying executives: Speed up, speed up." That's where the real value of airplanes lies, he believes—in their ability to get you somewhere in a hurry.

MIDNIGHT MASS IN THE CHURCH OF THE NATIVITY

BETHLEHEM, Palestine, Christmas morn—(AP)—This little city of David which is called Bethlehem rang again today with sounds of exceeding joy in adoration of the newborn king.

In the Church of the Nativity which, according to tradition, stands on the site of Christ's humble birthplace, midnight mass was celebrated with ritualistic pomp and splendor. Hundreds filled the great edifice which replaces the little shed where Mary and Joseph sought shelter after they had been turned away from the inn. Others overflowed in the surrounding fields where shepherds still abide, tending their flocks by night.

Time has passed lightly over Bethlehem and in the dusk before this Christmas morning it was easy to imagine it still the little city of Judea as it was in the days of Herod the king, when Joseph and Mary came out of Gallilee to pay the tax that Caesar Augustus levied on all the world.

Craigie has been employed with the American Smelting and Refining company since 1924. He is a graduate of Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

The kidnaping was the first activity by bandits in that district since the revolutionary days of 1916.

NEW YORK, Dec. 24—(AP)—A brother and sister were killed and three other members of their family were injured today at Southold, Long Island, when a train hit their automobile in a whirling snowstorm on a crossing.

The dead were Joseph Savage, Jr., driver of the car, and Anna Savage, 16, his sister. Joseph Savage, the father; Bertha, 14, daughter and John, a son, were hurt.

Snow so obscured the young motorist's vision that he did not see the train approaching on the Long Island railroad tracks at Laurel Lane crossing. The Savages live on a farm north of the rail line. They were on their way to make Christmas purchases in New York.

The engineer of the train, Charles Seaman and Fred Baldwin, conductor, both live not far from the Savages, in Freeport.

CHILDREN AT WHITE HOUSE CHRISTMAS EVE

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24—(AP)—For the first time in almost a decade, there were children inside the august mansion which shelters the first family of the nation, tonight.

And the president and his wife went to great pains to make the event a notable one. The children of the official family were invited to join in the merrymaking and listen to the Christmas carols sung by schoolchildren on the white house lawn.

The president and the first lady went out into a cold north wind to help make Christmas a reality in the United States. Braving the coldest weather that has struck the national capital this winter they took part in ceremonies inaugurating community Christmas trees throughout the land.

High Power Brandy For Industrial Use

Contemplated in New Set of Regulations—Would Benefit Cal. Grape Interests

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24.—(AP)—The return of a powerful variety of brandy to the industrial market — with California the principal beneficiary—appeared in prospect tonight as federal prohibition and industrial alcohol chiefs contemplated a new set of regulations to this end.

Under the plan, high-proof fruit spirits, would be distilled in considerable quantity to be placed in direct competition with industrial alcohol It would be obtainable only by the holders of alcohol permits.

Dr. James M. Doran, commissioner of industrial alcohol, indicated tonight there was little possibility that the new regulations would fail of approval. They have been "going through the mill" for several weeks, he said, but must bear the signatures of Secretary Mellon, Attorney General Mitchell and Prohibition Director Woodcock, as well as himself, before being put into effect.

If approved, benefit would accrue not only to the California grape interests, Dr. Doran said, but also to other interests there, since a number of idle brandy plants in the state would be opened.

California grape cooperatives already have received considerable federal aid in the form of a sizeable loan by the farm board. Certain interests in that group, represented in the capital by Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, former assistant attorney general in charge of prohibition, are now marketing a form of grape concentrate fermentable into wine. The brandy plan would further reduce the grape surplus.

The Edisons plan to make it a regular family Christmas party too. There will be a tree and presents for the children.

Flames broke through a wall surrounding a defective chimney in the house at 50 River street, at 3 o'clock as the mother was sorting out Christmas gifts. Smoke filled the place immediately and she had barely time to rush the children, ranging in age from two to ten years, out of doors, when the fire spread to the entire first floor. Braving danger, Mrs. Searles groped her way through the suffocating clouds and came back with an armful of toys. Firemen prevented her from making a second trip into the house.

COORDINATING EFFORTS TO PROVIDE WORK FOR JOBLESS

Federal Government, State Commissions and City Committees Are Pushing Spring Work Ahead For Winter Labor —Construction Under Way is Estimated at More Than $4,700,000,000—America in General is Showing Considerable Zest in Facilitating Relief Measures

NEW YORK, Dec. 24.—(AP)—Five billion dollars worth of construction defies America's unemployment.

Year-end reports compiled from all sections of the country show spring roads and building being pushed ahead for winter labor, public works getting underway with increasing volume, new rails and pipe lines creating swelled payrolls and ready aid being extended everywhere to persons who cannot be put to work.

Basing his figures on contracts let during the year, L. Seth Schnitman, chief statistician for the F. W. Dodge corporation, estimated the cost of construction now under way at more than $4,700,000,000.

Besides the $116,000,000 appropriated for immediate use, the federal government plans to spend $724,000,000 for building in the next 12 months. Another $80,000,000 has just been made available for federal aid roads, which, matched by the states, rolls into a total of $160,000,000.

State commissions and county and city committees, coordinated by the president's emergency commission, are pushing public work, encouraging private work and devising means of relief. States and cities are appropriating treasury funds and raising public funds. Civic bodies and private individuals are contributing in a hundred different ways.

Many workers are contributing a portion of their pay to relief. Persons of means and leisure are producing benefits and serving on relief committees. Several cities are serving free meals to the payless. One state game and fish commission is permitting the wholesale seining of fish from a river that the poor might be fed.

Some blue law states are permitting Sunday movies with the proceeds going to relief. Throughout the land odd jobs are being created by intensive cleanup campaigns in which unsightly vacant lots are receiving the care of parks and points of pride.

Several cities are allowing the unemployed to sell apples or other staples on street corners without license. At least one ice-covered state is for the first time sprinkling sand on its roads that heads of families might win their bread.

A few states find existing charity agencies can care for the idle. Some others are registering unemployed individuals and finding them work or furnishing them relief. Others are using labor on a part time basis in road work and by this means adding thousands to the payrolls.

From at least one state—Oklahoma—comes news that development alone necessitates one of the greatest building programs in its history, and Texas, sending forth pipe lines to the middle west and rails toward the Rockies finds itself in similar position.

MAN KILLED IN PAYROLL ROBBERY IN NEW HAVEN

NEW HAVEN, Dec. 24—(AP)—A bandit escaped with the payroll of the Allingtown branch of the American Mills company, in West Haven today after killing one of the company's employes and critically wounding another.

Only one bandit, described by Kern as about 24 years old, participated in the actual robbery. Police believe, however, that he had an accomplice.

The gunmen fled after the shooting in the payroll machine. Later police found the car abandoned about a quarter of a mile away where it is believed the bandit transferred into another automobile driven by an accomplice.

DANIELSON

HEAVY SNOWFALL SLOWS CHRISTMAS TRAFFIC

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Dec. 24.—The Snow Man is much like the postoffice force—working overtime these days. After many paths had been cleared yesterday afternoon and last night, another snowfall set in and dumped between three and four inches more of "the beautiful" over the landscape, and many other things hereabouts, today. Close to a foot of snow has fallen on the level in the storms of the past few days. There were few drifts, state highway crews plugged persistently along the trunk lines with their big motor driven plows and traffic was slowed up largely by reason of the fact that visibility was poor and the highways slippery in some places. They were open to traffic, though, and one could drive a car as fast as he dared. There were many calls for the garage road crews, to help out some stalled car whose driver had no chains for his machine and to pick up some cars that had skidded off the roads and had become disabled. Up to late afternoon no accidents of a serious nature had been reported.

Two Cars In Crash

When a north-bound sedan operated by Benjamin Kolbus of Jewett City started to skid on the slippery highway surface near Bishop's crossing in the town of Plainfield about 2 o'clock this afternoon, there was almost immediately thereafter a crash of that car with a Ford driven by Wesley M. Arbucle of Boston, the Kolbus car striking the smaller machine near the left front wheel. Arbucle's car promptly rolled over. There were no personal injuries. The accident was checked up by State Officer James Carmody of the Danielson barracks.

A most Merry Christmas and a very Happy New Year is our wish for all our patrons. The Modern Laundry, Danielson; George Gendron, Prop.—adv.

After a visit here with Miss Marion D. Chollar of Broad street, Professor Leavitt O. Wright of Eugene, Ore., has gone to Washington, D. C., where he will attend a conference of university professors engaged in the same field of educational work as himself. He is a member of the faculty of the State university of Oregon, in the department of romance languages. Mrs. Wright, prior to her marriage to Professor Wright 13 years ago, was Miss Marion R. Howland, a niece of Miss Chollar's. Prof. and Mrs. Wright have two children.

All Christmas club checks deposited in our savings department during the month of December will draw interest from the first of December. The Windham County National bank.—adv.

Several of the state officers stationed at the Danielson barracks on North Main street will have leave of absence over Christmas and will visit at their homes in various sections of Connecticut.

Throughout the borough homes were ablaze with light tonight as families foregathered for the great festival. There were many Christmas tree parties, delightful affairs at which families were wholly reunited for the first time since a year ago.

Distribution of baskets of good things for feasts on Christmas in the homes of needy families in Danielson was completed today. If any such family has been overlooked, it is unfortunate. Organizations and individuals engaged in this laudable work have done their best to see that all deserving families be remembered. The givers have been generous this year. Few names, few details, appear in this chronicle as to who is doing the good work or for whom they are doing it, and that is as it should be if the wishes of the good-hearted people concerned are to have their way, and they shall.

Mrs. Rene Buteau of North Main street was hostess to the members of the Entre Nous club at a Christmas party. Bridge was played and refreshments were served. Winners of honors at bridge were Mrs. Earl Wood of Cottage street, Mrs. L. E. Kennedy and Mrs. Frank J. Gorman.

At 11:30 this Christmas eve there was a service at St. Alban's church conducted by the rector, Rev. J. Rees Jones, and with numbers in attendance. There will be no service at this church on Christmas day, but one at 11 a. m. at Trinity church, Brooklyn, Rev. Mr. Jones officiating.

Mrs. Mary F. Taylor of Webster is spending Christmas with her sister, Miss Katherine D. Aylward of Academy street, and other relatives here.

Long after usual closing hours tonight the postal force at the Danielson office had cleared up the accumulation of Christmas mail, insofar as sending out matter and distributing incoming letters, cards and packages was concerned. There will be late arrivals of holiday mail, unless all records of the past fall, but the grand rush was largely over when the tired force went home tonight.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard D. Banigan of North Main street will be with relatives in Providence over Christmas.

Crowded motor coaches were the rule in this territory today. Extra service was supplied by the various lines as needed, and the business offered handled with despatch, the delays incident to the storm and highway conditions considered.

First Selectman Charles A. Tillinghast said at noon today that the snowfall of the last two days, though heavy, has not set down in a manner to cause any expense to the town for removal. There are few, if any, drifts of consequence, despite the fact that there is about a foot of snow on the level throughout the town.

The Bulletin wishes all readers of this column a merry, fruitful Christmas—the joys of a happy holiday period.

FAMILY OF SEVEN LEFT DESTITUTE WHEN FIRE DESTROYS THIER HOME

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Dec. 24.—The spirit of Christmas in one of its most exalted forms was manifest in Danielson this afternoon as a quickly organized effort to bring prompt and generous relief to Mr. and Mrs. George Sarantopoulos and their seven children got underway. The family lost everything but the clothing they were wearing when fire destroyed their newly-built home in the Riverview section during the early hours of this morning.

By what may be considered the grace of God, the members of this family were living today, though father and mother were in tears as they contemplated their plight and the depth of their despair in this holiday period of exultation throughout the Christian world.

A pre-Christmas service, starting at 2 o'clock this morning at Trinity Greek Orthodox church on Water street, was attended by Mr. and Mrs. Sarantopoulos and all the children, including a babe in arms. They were engaged in reverent contemplation of the mystery of the Nativity at 4:30 a. m., when flames shot forth from the home they have occupied only since last fall and an hour later nothing remained of the new house but smouldering ruins. Not a thing was salvaged, and what represented the effort and savings for years of Mr. and Mrs. Sarantopoulos was swept away. The house had a value of between $4,500 and $5,000, and the contents possibly of $1,000 more.

The shrill sounding of the railroad men's fire call on the whistle of a locomotive of a freight train standing on a siding in the yards here awaiting the passing of one of the fast night expresses was the first general alarm for the fire. Later a "33" call was sounded on the fire alarm system and shortly thereafter Box 45, corner of Mechanic street and Westfield avenue, was pulled in.

Responding firemen were unable to go into action on arriving close to where the burning house had become like a raging furnace because of the distance of the structure from the nearest hydrant, and there was little else to do but watch the flames complete their work of destruction.

It was regarded as possible this afternoon that the fire may have been caused by an overheated pipeless furnace. It was learned that the registers to distribute the heat were built into the walls of the house, instead of in the floors, as in the usual manner. This change was made at the suggestion of Mr. Sarantopoulos, it was said, so as to guard against his children burning their feet if they happened to be going about the house barefooted. About the registers what was described as tin "boxes" had been built, as a precaution against just such a disaster as occurred when the house was destroyed. The heater may not have had anything to do with the start of the fire, but the opinion that it may have figured in the matter, together with the unusual construction, was rather general. Loss of life almost certainly would have taken place had the family been present at the time of the fire.

Mr. Sarantopoulos had built the house almost alone during the past year. Working in the mill nights, he gave most of the day to working on the home for his wife and children, while Mrs. Sarantopoulos also worked in a mill during the day.

Since occupying the house last fall they have purchased new furniture and seemed to be in a fair way to reap the rewards of their labors when the flaming hand of disaster swept all these bright prospects aside. Included in the loss was about 150 bushels of potatoes that Mr. Sarantopoulos had raised in his garden the past growing season and had stored in the cellar. There was insurance of $3,000 on the property, which was mortgaged to about half its value, it is understood.

Various agencies were at work today to bring some measure of relief to the unfortunate family, some of the members of which were at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George P. Berris on Spring street and others at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alex Kasaris, in the White Row.

Principal Ernest R. Warren of Killingly high school was one of the most active in furthering relief measures. By noon today food had been provided for the family and an effort started to obtain clothing for the members, especially for the children. There are four boys and three girls, ranging from 12 years of age down to a little baby. Principal Warren requested that the people of Danielson be urged to contribute clothing and shoes for the children, to give foodstuffs, and to make donations of money to help out in one of the most distressing experiences Danielson has known at Christmas time in many years. Clothing and other donations may be left with Miss Miriam Boomhower, visiting nurse of the Civic federation. Gifts of money may be sent to the Danielson Trust company, which has agreed to act, or to Mr. Warren. To share in this particular relief work will be a privilege to a great many people of Danielson, a community that gives from the heart.

JEWETT CITY

UNITED EFFORT TO CHEER ALL FAMILIES IN NEED

Not within the memory of the oldest resident in Griswold has organized relief been carried out to the extent that has marked this holiday time. Not only have societies and churches taken over their part, but individuals have caught the spirit, and in quiet ways and by contributions to the distributing centers have given evidence that the community lend-a-hand idea is a sure live issue. The Order of Elks distributed 58 baskets in Griswold and Voluntown, the work being done by George Tormey and Earl Hiscox. To each basket a peck of apples was added through the generosity of one woman. The Catholic Women's council not only sent out baskets here, but remembered patients at Uncas-on-Thames. The Baptist church distributed 18 baskets of vegetables, groceries and apples to a list of names obtained from the selectmen. The King's Daughters, Red Cross, Legion auxiliary, Hose company and large numbers of individuals, all had a part in the good work, the Congregational Sunday school sending toys to the children.

Have your eyes examined by Dr. C. A. Spear, optometrist, hours 7 to 9, Friday evening. Anthony block.—Adv.

Dazzled By Sign

The other night, late, a man was driving into the town from the south. Approaching the bridge entrance he spotted the big hotel sign. Thinking there was a fire and while giving the light too much attention, his machine straddled a handy length of curbstone and he had to rout out a man with a derrick to hoist his car free from his pick-up.

Snowfall 14 Inches

At sundown, all through this section the snowfall was recorded as fully 14 inches, which is two inches more than came during the whole of last winter. The present storm arrived in two sections, and was of two sorts, on account of the difference in temperature. The first eight inches were wet and heavy, while the second edition was light and fluffy. Reports from the outlying districts off to the south and east of the borough, tell of roads being full, with considerable drifting.

The postoffice will not be open at any time this (Christmas) day. Everything was cleaned up long before closing time Wednesday evening, with an appreciable falling off during the day of both incoming and outgoing dispatches. The dispatching force reports less 11th-hour mailing than ever before, with packages wrapped securely and addressed plainly.

Caucus notices are posted for nominations for the January borough election. Burgesses John McDermott, dem., and Felix Guillette, rep., go off this year. The warden has another year to run. The only competitive offices to be filled are those of clerk and treasurer, tax collector and bailiff.

A local man, returning from Norwich one day recently, reported that a market down there was selling oranges by the peck. A bit of coin was placed by an unbeliever. An investigating member of the skeptics found that, sure enough, a Franklin square store was retailing nice oranges by the peck.

NOVEL EEL-FISHING HUNT IN THE YEARS THAT ARE GONE

Around 50 years ago, a man named Maryott had an eel weir, (it is there today), a few hundred feet below the lower railroad bridge. The fishes were running great, and every night the pots set at the converging angles of the long stone guide walls, would yield a bushel or more of long, slimy wigglers. Mr. Maryott, Tootliotty his nickname was, now and then took a little liquid stimulant when he went to pull his pots, to ward off possible colds he might get while wading around in the water. One night, pretty well corned, he managed to get out to the pot to find it gone. Someone had stolen it, fish and all. Tootliotty could see eels anywhere wiggling around among the stones, so he finally sat down in the breach where the pot had been. The night was warm, the water trickled cool down into his high rubber boots. Presently he lifted in a couple more swigs from the bottle and, feeling comfortable-like, he fell asleep. At daybreak, the railroad handcar men saw him out in the middle of the stream. Supposing him to be drowned, two of them waded out to tow him ashore. While attempting to pull him out of the break in the weir, the men found that his pantaloons and boots, besides accommodating Tootliotty's lower extremities, also contained more than a half bushel of eels, some of which Brother Maryotte helped to eat next day.

At St. Philip's Church

The Christmas day services at St. Philip's Episcopal church announced today by Rev. Edwin P. Wright, rector of the church, will begin at 9:15 o'clock with a communion service. At midnight, Wednesday, the Christmas service was largely attended. Christmas Business Heavy

"Twas the night before Christmas and all thru the city——", crowds were scurrying hither and thither through the stores of the business section in a last minute effort to complete that seemingly unfilable shopping list which has been a subject harrassing hundreds during the past week. In a commercial sense the holiday season this year has been an unusually good one. Despite prevailing hard times and business depression business during the past month locally has been riding on the crest of a tidal wave which plunged shoreward with the release by banks of a Christmas savings fund totalling almost a $100,000.

While many were lumbering their way through the shopping area tonight thinking of intimate friends, charity workers of fraternal organizations cooperating with the Salvation Army corps were working at top speed dispensing Christmas baskets that will dispell gloom in many a home through the town. The baskets contained food enough for a dinner Thursday noon time and where clothes and shoes were the chief needs of poverty stricken, welcome relief along this line was furnished in a timely manner by the charity workers.

All in all, it looks as though Putnam will experience a merry and happy Christmas. Everywhere varied colored lights on outdoor, snow covered trees are radiating the glad tidings, which at dusk tonight had completely overshadowed everything that sported a pessimistic touch.

FUNERAL

James A. McGarry Jr.

A solemn high mass of requiem was celebrated this morning at St. Mary's church for the funeral of James A. McGarry Jr., which was held at 9 o'clock. Rev. U. O. Bellerose, who was celebrant at the service was assisted by Rev. Joseph D. Casey as deacon and by Rev. Father Normand, serving as sub-deacon. A special service of music was rendered by members of the 9:15 o'clock choir under the direction of Miss Rose Metras, church organist. Burial was in the family lot in St. Mary's cemetery. The committal service at the grave was conducted by Rev. Fr. Bellerose. The bearers were Aloysious Light, Francis Ryan, William Ryan, John J. McGarry, William Reid and John Welch, all of this city. There was a large and beautiful array of floral remembrances which were from the numerous friends of Mr. McGarry, who was widely known throughout the city.

OBITUARY

Francois Brodeur

Francois Brodeur, father of Aldehemar A. Brodeur, Putnam business man, died at 1:30 o'clock this morning at his home on Maynard street, following a brief illness. He was 87 years of age and had been a resident of this city for 45 years, coming here from Belle Island, Canada, where he was born on April 30, 1843. Surviving him besides the widow are two daughters, Mrs. E. Auger and Mrs. Trottier, both of Central Falls, R. I., and five sons, Emile, Joseph, Eugene, Arthur and Aldehemar Brodeur, all of Putnam.

After Dame Nature had transposed the city Tuesday, from the barrenness of autumn to the immaculate still white setting of winter, scenes that an artist could never depict on canvas, were viewed at random in every nook and corner of the out of doors by admiring observers. Cargill park on Pomfret street, afforded passersby something to look at. The giant elms in the park were attired in their coats of soft clinging snow that sufficed in beauty for the long since fallen leaves. Tuesday's storm brought more snow than this section of the county has seen in many winters. After two days of plowing and sanding, crews of the city and state highway departments still have plenty of work left before it will be smooth going for automobiles.

So great was the snowfall that old Dobbin and the romantic sleigh took advantage of the wintry landscape and came to town to create a scene that has not been witnessed in recent years. The jingling set of bells attracted much attention as the keen runnered winter vehicle of the passed decade glided swiftly over the hard snow-packed streets this afternoon, making many a mouth "water" just for a ride in that "one horse open sleigh", which now rides only in storybooks.

Committal services for Mrs. Abbie Park Ingalls, of Mineola, Long Island, who died at her home there Monday, were held this afternoon at two o'clock at Grove street cemetery. Rev. Joseph Vasey, pastor of the Congregational church conducted the service. Mrs. Ingalls was the widow of Dr. James W. Ingalls, who lived in this city as a young man. His death occurred 12 years ago.

State's Attorney Howard C. Bradford was the speaker at the weekly meeting of the Putnam Rotary club, held at noon today at the Putnam Inn. The Sixth Object of Rotary, was the subject of Mr. Bradford's interesting address in which he portrayed Rotary's part in the fostering of good fellowship among the various nations and different peoples of the world. President Alex Gilman, presided at the brief executive session that preceded the talk by Mr. Bradford.

Michael L. Hannifan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Timothy J. Hannifan of South Main street, arrived at his home today after being discharged from St. Vincent's hospital in Worcester, where he recently underwent an operation.

Miss Elsie Gallant of Church street, left today for Hartford, where on Friday she is to take examinations for admittance to the Connecticut bar. Miss Gallant has been preparing for the strenuous exam for several months.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Durand of Smith street are spending Christmas with relatives in Easthampton, Mass.

Miss Grace R. Murphy of Northampton, Mass., is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Bulger of Farrows street ofr the holidays.

Valmore Laplerre of Boston, Mass., is spending Christmas at his home in this city.

Several minor automobile mishaps occurred at various places in the city today as cars skidded on hills and curves. No accidents of a serious nature were reported, police said tonight.

The meeting of the Y. P. S. C. E. was omitted on account of the community service held in the parish house at 7:30. Christmas carols were sung under the leadership of William G. The society will hold a Christmas party in the vestry Friday evening.

The school children and the church school are cooperating in a Christmas program for all of the children of the parish. The children themselves have entire charge of the program, and are inviting all to attend. A variety is anticipated from 6:30 on.

POETRY

A Christmas Prayer

O make my soul a Christmas tree,
Shining with lights of love,
Bright as the stars above,
I pray the God of grace so free.

O make my soul a Christmas tree,
Gleaming with heavenly joys,
Greater than earthly toys,
I pray the God of grace so free.

O make my soul a Christmas tree,
Bending with gifts from Christ,
Only my God has priced,
I pray the God of grace so free.

O make my soul a Christmas tree,
Gleaming with gifts of love
All for the Christ above,
I pray the God of grace so free.

O make my soul a Christmas tree,
Shining with golden deed,
Offered to souls in need,
I pray the God of grace so free.

—By C. Norman Bartlett.

Christmas Here

What!
Christmas here!
How surprised I am!
Just as I always am when I realize
That I'm nowhere near ready.
My husband was a descendant o.
Ethelred the Unready
And I reckon I've caught the disease.
Still, my name is Hope—
Perhaps I'll reform.
Perhaps next year I'll be ahead of the game
And write nice Christmas letters
To all my friends,
Especially
Those who forgive me this year's failure
And forget about last year
And the years before that.
For that will show that they love me
Even as I love them, although I fail so often.
It is Christmastide—
Shall we turn a leaf and begin again?
I may do better.
Anyway—
Here's Hope-ing.

"No?"

"Even if there was a bull in the field at the same time, that wouldn't be a phenomenon."

"Eh—no."

CHRISTMAS

Today throughout the world there will be celebration and rejoicing because it is the anniversary of the birth of Jesus Christ. Christmas is one of the great feast days of the year and brings a review of the events leading up to the Nativity and those which have followed. That birth brought love and hope to the world.

But as we are observing Christmas day there is occasion for reflecting on the thought that is advanced by Dr. Henry Van Dyke, who says that there is a "better thing than observance of Christmas day and that is keeping Christmas." He says:

"Are you willing to forget what you have done for other people, and remember what other people have done for you; to ignore what the world owes to you, and to think what you owe the world; to put your rights in the background, and your duties in the middle distance and your chances to do a little more than your duty in the foreground; to see that your fellowmen are just as real as you are, and try to look behind their faces to their hearts, hungry for joy; to own that probably the only good reason for your existence is not what you are going to get out of life, but what you are going to give to life; to close your book of complaints against the management of the universe, and look around you for a place where you can sow a few seeds of happiness—are you willing to try these things even for a day? Then you can keep Christmas.

"Are you willing to stoop down and consider the needs and desires of little children, to remember the weakness and loneliness of people who are growing old; to stop asking how much your friends love you, and ask yourself whether you love them enough; to bear in mind the things that other people have to bear on their hearts; to try to understand what those who live in the same house with you really want, without waiting for them to tell you; to trim your lamp so that it will give more light and less smoke, and to carry it in front so that your shadow will fall behind you; to make a grave for your ugly thoughts, and a garden for your kindly feelings, with the gates open—are you willing to do these things even for a day? Then you can keep Christmas."

There is real food for thought in the words of Dr. Van Dyke, especially at this time when the Christmas spirit is being displayed. If you can answer in the affirmative the questions he asks in regard to one day, can you also answer "yes" if they are applied to every day in the year? If it is good for a day, why not for the whole year?

THE TOUCHY INSURGENTS

It doesn't take much to get the insurgent crowd aroused. It is always on its tiptoes when anything concerning the federal power commission is at stake. It did a lot of arm swinging concerning the nominations that were made by President Hoover for the new commission but confirmation was secured without any great difficulty.

But with the commission assuming its duties it is once more up in the air. This time it is because of what the commission has done. When there was a hearing upon the nominations, efforts were made by the insurgents to get certain of the appointees to agree to fire the executive secretary of the commission. No such promises could be exacted. The commissioners would not make any promises beyond taking the oath of office. They were not willing to put themselves at the command of any group. It was regarded as the only attitude for them to take and they were confirmed.

Having taken office the commissioners have notified all the employes that their terms of employment are subject to the control of the commission and while all but three of them have been retained for the present, dismissal has been given to those three, and thus is provided the reason for the insurgent demands for a reconsideration of the confirmation of the commissioners.

In the federal power commission there has been much friction in the past. This was known on the outside. It was known to the new commissioners. Instead of being willing to try to carry out their duties under such a handicap it was their view that there should be a complete housecleaning, not a taking of sides among the trouble-makers, but cleaning the slate and giving them a chance to put forth their own policies. That, in fact, is only what they should be expected to do.

The insurgents wanted one man removed, but they did not want the other two disturbed. In other words, they wanted to tell the commission what it must do and now they are disposed to fire the commission because of the manner in which it deems it best to do its work. It is characteristic insurgent reaction, but what a howl they would put up if any other group undertook to control the actions of such a commission.

INTERNATIONAL PEACE

There are those who profess to have difficulty in understanding just what was meant by Foreign Secretary Henderson of the British cabinet in his recent statement. He certainly stresses the importance of peace and the responsibility that rests upon the leading nations in keeping it.

When he directs attention to the fact that the peace of the world is not necessarily insured by the treaties that have been signed he is but voicing sentiment which many have felt and expressed. Those treaties pave the way and make it easier for the nations to deal with problems which have often led to war in a different manner. They set forth the wisdom of securing adjustments through such a method rather than entering into conflict where there is no certainty that right will prevail. Too often it is a case in war that might rather than right rules in the end. And at what a sacrifice!

Through the Locarno treaties, the Kellogg-Briand pact which outlaws war, the Washington treaty and the treaty concluded at London which increases the scope of naval limitation, the nations of the world in some instances and the leaders in particular have acknowledged the desirability of avoiding international strife. They have given their approval to the idea of peaceful consideration, a real effort to obtain adjustments in accord with the facts and the elimination of war. They favor the use of common sense instead of plunging into bloody conflict with the needless and deplorable loss of human life and the devastation from which it takes generations to recover. They have admitted through these conferences that there is a better way.

Because of such admission it does not follow that it will always be followed. It is human to backslide. Because of the force of bad habit, conditions which call for the application of peaceful adjustment may easily bring on a conflict. What Foreign Secretary Henderson seems to be driving at is that there must be no relaxation in regard to the efforts for international peace. Reliance cannot be put entirely upon the treaties. They must be backed up but further efforts in that same direction are needed. That Great Britain and the United States can contribute powerful influences in that direction cannot be questioned. The need of such continuing efforts is apparent.

PAYROLL ROBBERIES

The manner in which the payroll robber held up and shot those who had the payroll of a New Haven concern in their custody and got away with nearly $5,000 shows that it was done by those who knew how the payroll was transported, when it could be expected and what to do to obtain it.

Either the fellow who handled the gun knew of these conditions through study or had been informed by those who knew what to expect.

The manner in which the payroll of the New Haven concern was transported is not so different from the practice of many other concerns. Some have changed their methods because of rather bitter experiences of their own or because of a recognition of the encouragement which their practices gave to those of a criminal turn of mind. There have been those who have profited from the losses suffered by others and have taken steps to prevent them in their own cases.

But it is quite evident, as the New Haven case shows, that bringing the money with which to pay off the help to a factory or plant at a certain time every week on foot, by trolley or in an auto is still continued. And the holdup shows that it continues to be the object of study by those who are ready to kill and rob.

The killer and robber, and any of his accomplices, deserves to be caught and fully penalized for his act. But there cannot be overlooked the importance of preventing just such distressing affairs by eliminating the temptation. Every case of that kind stresses the importance of paying by check and giving up the old-time and dangerous practice of bringing thousands of dollars every week at a fixed hour to a mill office.

WINTER ACCIDENTS

Everybody knows it and there have been plenty of warnings in addition, but the number of accidents which have resulted with the coming of the snow give the impression that too little heed is given to the advice concerning careful driving during snowy, icy and slippery periods.

Making due allowance for those who may be caught out in a storm and find it necessary to get home, and giving consideration to the fact that there are conditions which make the avoidance of accidents almost impossible there are still too many cases where drivers persist in trying to drive with the same speed and recklessness under icy and stormy conditions that they do when the roadbed is perfect. They may get away with it in many instances but in doing so they furnish capital illustration of the cause of too many accidents.

The fact that they escape trouble in certain instances is due to good fortune rather than safe and sound driving. They give no thought to what might happen to the other fellow had he tried to pass at a time when they were showing off, at a time when their car was swinging from one side of the road to the other because of the manner in which they were driving.

Wintry weather with the treacherous roadbed calls for the exercise of more than ordinary care. It means that cars should be kept under control, that chance-taking should be abandoned and that real efforts to protect other drivers as well as themselves should be made. Slippery roads call for more caution than ever but some drivers seem to handle the wheel as if they considered it required less, so much so that there is little wonder that the accident list gets such a large boost.

CHRISTMAS AT "MIS' MILLY'S"

Twilight wrapped the little house in a soft gray blanket bordered, all at once, with deep rose color as a winter sunset flooded the western sky.

"Certainly does 'mind me of down home when the sun drops down behin' them big oaks," Anastasia declared as she patted the last white Christmas package affectionately and gave its cheery red bow a final jaunty twist. "Down home on Crissmus eve we mos' allus had a scrumptious red sunset like that there one. Onliest difference war that things allus managed to look white an' Crissmussy under foot like the ole-fashioned picter cards that Mis' Milly's folks in England—her Pa's kin, you know—ust to send her every year. Mis' Milly set a store by them cards, an' oncet she give me an ole one what had got some of its pink silk fringe tore off of it."

"What was it like, Anastasia, any different from the cards we have now?"

"Yes 'm, it war different, that card war. It war a real interestin' card with a little brown church a settin' on a hill of snow what looked all crisp and sparkly like the frostin' on my Mammy's sugar cakes. There was a great big red sun settin' right back of the church, an' some people (some of Mis' Milly's kin, I guess, tho' I couldn't rightly say) walkin' along a little footpath. I loved to look at that card, Mis' Elner."

"You must have had great times down there in Virginia when Christmas came around," I ventured, feeling confident that a very little effort upon my part would send Anastasia back to the "Old Dominion" along well-trodden trails of Memory.

"Down home," she said at last, "come Crissmus time, we all got so perlite an' pleasant it war sort o' tiresome keepin' up to our 'greement. Mis' Milly's Pa allus got powerful scrutinizin' 'round 'bout Crissmus time, an' if one of us folks on his plantation got grumpy an' quare we couldn't get in to the Crissmus tree, night befo' Crissmus."

"Tell me all about it, Anatasia," I begged, "I never saw a real southern Christmas."

"Plenty things you never saw, pore lamb," Anastasia commiserated, "reckon you never heard the carols 'bout fo' 'clock Crissmus mawnin, the mos' loveliest music floatin' ovah the frosty air—laws, honey, I'se got to tell you-all 'bout it straight from the beginnin'!"

I settled myself in the big chair by the fireplace and waited expectantly.

"First real Crissmus I reccomember," Anastasia began in her best story-telling voice, "I warn't no bigger then knee-high to a gyrass-hopper, an' my mammy gets us chillen all lined up for a wholesale scrubbin' Crissmus eve mawnin' befo' Pappy war out o' bed. That there clenin' up party lasted all day.

"Laws, Mis' Elner, that war some 'pressive clenin' up! I hardly knowed my-self time Mammy had me all scoured up with yaller kitchen soap an' dressed in my bes' pin'fore what b'longed to Lucile Sarina 'fore it ever saw me. Every pigtail I had (an' they was numerous, honey) stuck straight out from my haid like thorns on the moss-rose bush when Mammy got throuh plattin' 'em, an' right on top, same as if 'twar Sunday, I had the cherry bow what come off Mis' Milly's Ma's second bes' watered silk sash."

Anastasia paused for the wonder of it to sink into my consciousness, then she went on in her soft, melodious voice.

"Jes' 'bout this here time o' day, when the darkness sort o' shet us in, bells started ringin' sof' an' coaxin'-like an' Mammy took hole my han' an' tole the res' of us (twelve counting Caesar, what Pappy done 'dopted) to foller 'long. We headed up to the 'Big House' with our eyes mos' poppin' out o' our haids in 'ticipation.

"Lights was a burnin' in the big parler, an' I never had seen lights burnin' there since Miss Milly's Ma's sister got married. My ole Mammy kep' tight hole o' my han' an' tell you I stayed real close when we turned in at the front do' same's as if we was quality, an' all at once I stood stock-still, jes' lookin'—"

"What was it, Anastasia?" I questioned eagerly.

"traighSt up to the ceelin' clum a giant cedar tree all sparklin' with tinsel an' lights an' color an' right on top, brighter than all the res,' aswingin' back an' forth, was a big silver star. All at once we started singin'—

Here's Crissmus gif' fo Marster,
Here's Crissmus gif' fo Lady
Han' 'em out, Brother,
Han' 'em out, Sister,
Han' 'em out—

Anastasia's face was aglow with happy recollections. Well I knew that the little house had ceased to exist for her. In one swift flash of memory she was transported to the big parlor at "Mis' Milly's," treading again the rosy pathway of childhood.

"Was that all, Anastasia?" I inquired, "just the big tree and the music?"

She looked at me reprovingly. "Mis' Elner," she said, "you certainly does 'sprise me some-times. As if Mis' Milly's folks ever done things halfway! That tree an' the music an' the hole performance war jus' the beginnin' of things."

"What happened next?" I questioned when the pause threatened to last some time.

"Presents," Anastasia declared impressively. "Presents, Mis' Elner, mittens an' oranges an' candy toys an' a bright penny down to'zard the end of the bag. Mis' Milly's Ma give me a doll-baby that Crissmus, a spic' an' span new doll-baby with a wax haid an' chiny blue eyes. I done kissed the blushes off its cheeks the very first day jus' lovin' it."

"Was it your first doll, Anastasia?"

"First one an' las' one an' whole conglomeration, Mis' Elner. I loved that doll-baby mos' to 'straction, an' Mis' Mary learned me how to make a blue an' red calico frock for it an' I done named it Josepheen after Miss Milly's Ma an' Mr. 'Poleon's fust wife—"

"Who ever told you about Napoleon, Anastasia?" I inquired with determinedly preserved gravity.

"How'd I know 'bout Mr. 'Poleon? My sakes, Mis' Elner, he mus' a been one 'o' Mis' Milly's Pa's bes' friends cordin' to how he ust to talk about him. I jus' took it for granted, when Mis' Milly's Pa went over there to Paris like he did every now an' then, that he an' Mr. 'Poleon lived in the same penshun."

Light dawned on me slowly: "Do you mean, Anastasia, that Miss Milly's father stayed in a pension in Paris?"

"Maybe, that was it," Anastasia agreed, "I jus' dis remember, only I know we had to be awful savin'-like so's he could take his paint-brushes an' go over there whenever he got a hankerin' to. Penshun or no penshun, that cos' money! Didn't seem like his fren', Mr. 'Poleon, helped him out a bit."

"What you goin' to do 'bout yo' Crissmus cakes, Mis' Elner?" Anastasia inquired a little later.

"Must I do anything in particular, Anastasia?"

"T'ain't like it ust to be down at Mis' Milly's," Anastasia sighed in a tone of definite regret. "Down there, come Thanksgivin, we baked cakes every day 'til the pantry shelves war groanin'. Come Crissmus mawnin' Miss Milly's Ma got all fixed up in her sury silk dress with the jet beads sparklin' down the front an' started off in the sleigh with 'bout ten million baskets o' cakes an' goodies."

"Ten million, Anastasia?"

"Bout that," Anastasia agreed, "every-body 'roun' had to have one. She ust to 'low me to ride 'long an' hop out an' do the donatin' with her compliments attached. Seemed like I couldn't never forget some of the smilin' faces when I handed a little wicker basket in. Laws, Mis' Elner, I certainly am hankerin' to give you my Crissmus gif'!"

"Have you a present for me, Anastasia?" I questioned with surprise, "that was dear of you to remember me."

"I reckon I couldn't rightly forget you, Mis' Elner, seein' as how you're right under my feet, so to speak, day in an' day out. Folks don't forget things they get 'customed to—leastways I don't."

Christmas morning found a huge red-ribboned package at my place at the breakfast table. I picked up the gay card attached to it and read the inscription written with many flourishes strangely suggestive of the handwriting of Anastasia's adored pastor, the Rev. Silandus Washington Porter,

FROM ANASTASIA, A MERRY CHRISTMAS

For a moment I hesitated. Suppose, under the voluminous sheets of tissue paper some vivid atrocity awaited me, something that I would have to keep in prominent view in order to convince Anastasia of my appreciation.

"Ain't you gwine to open it, honey?"

I untied the gay red ribbons with fingers that refused to hurry, then I gave a cry of sheer delight! Before me stood a pale-blue Stiegel glass lamp of such rare and exquisite design that I could only gaze at it with hushed happiness.

"Anastasia," I cried at last, "it's beautiful, the loveliest old lamp I've ever seen. Wherever did you find it?"

Triumphantly, Anastasia spoke from the pantry door, her face wreathed in broad smiles, her voice a-quiver with joy—

"Maybe you'all won't care so much 'bout it, honey, when I tells you it come straight out of Clementina's lean-to, but 'riginally it b'longed to Miss Milly an 'her folks afore her. She done give it to Clementina when they got the Big House fixed up with 'lectricity. Clementina, she laf' at me when I took the ole thing, but I done tole her you didn't like none o' them fancy lamps with roses and cupids an' fountains on 'em like folks have down her way.

"I brung it 'long home with me, dus' an all, an' scoured it all up an set it down in the laundry cup-bo'd back o' the ole wash-biler, an' every time I pas' it I said, 'Lamp, you-all don't know it, but Mis' Elner's goin' to shine up to you somethin' wonderful She ain't carin' cause you're a pore ole cole-ile lamp what's seen better days. Soon's she sets her two eyes on you she's a goin' to call you an antick an' run right off an' have you 'lectrocuted. It's a long step from Clementina's lean-to to Mis' Elner's bes' table, but you sure is steppin' that way, Mr. Lamp.' Does you really relish it, honey?"

"If I could only tell you how I love your getting it for me, Anastasia, but I really can't."

"Well, Ian' knows I'se glad you has it—Crissmus gif', Mis' Elner!"

"Christmas gift, Anastasia," I called back as I bore my treasure off to its designated place—the "best table."

Hard to Beat

Mr. Editor: These happy Christmas days we certainly appreciate the wonderful illumination in the business district of Norwich. It certainly is the finest holiday feature to be found anywhere. Franklin square, especially, makes a fine appearance. It is a delight to stand there and behold the colorful garlands leap into space and twinkle for many blocks in all directions: East and west on Main street up on Broadway, circling Union square and out on Franklin street as far as the First Lutheran church. Then the fine wreaths on Chelsea bank and other business houses. All in all, the Norwich Christmas illumination is hard to beat.

Constructive Course Needed

Mr. Editor: Mr. E. Kent Hubbard in The Connecticut Industry states, "Finding a permanent solution for unemployment is the greatest challenge to American industry since the Civil war." Harrison Emerson, one of our leading exponents of industrial efficiency, recently stated in effect, "We industrial engineers have developed our industrial efficiency to the highest point in the history of civilization; but our greatest task, and that responsibility is ours, is creating work for the army of unemployed, yet unabsorbed in other tasks." Governor Trumbull, in a recent address, showed marked concern, "unless we solve the present distress of unemployment, I fear for our form of government." There is much evidence that the men in high places, industrial and political, are taking note of "the hand writing on the wall," are growing fearful of our apparent impotence to hasten the revival of business, and the so-called American genius for organization stands challenged for lack of vision. There is much speculating, evasiveness in acknowledging the cause or causes for our distress; many truths have been stated according to the attitude taken. Viewed from the European attitude, with its monetary problems, it is quite different from our own, with a sound financial structure. From our stand, over-production is the chief culprit, as but 10 per cent of our production is foreign trade, and this stands true in the light of our additional law of supply and demand, that demand created by the buying power of our peoples, coupled with a false sense of over-confidence, and a false complex on the soundness of speculative values. From another angle, the term over-production is misleading; a more applicable phrase is, under-purchasing power, coupled with a shaken confidence. American history and previous business cycles are not wholly applicable. An analysis of that period through which we passed, with which we are all familiar, we recognize the one basic cause as generous buying, and this developed through a high wage scale and labor's confidence. We can emphasize increased public works, railroad improvements, etc., which are excellent to help increase circulation, but we cannot becloud the issues contributory to business revival. If there is any one group which can be justly classed retarders of business and, incidentally, their own worst enemies, it is that group of greedy industrialists and dominating financiers, properly termed deflationists, who take advantage of the present situation, as opportune to depress labor. And what is labor, but their very meat and drink, and how utterly devoid of vision is the act of cutting wages in our factories. A school boy does not have to be told that if father's wages are cut 10 per cent, the household is deprived of 10 per cent of its spending power. Until industry recognizes the employes in their true capacities, as consumers as well as producers, umbalanced conditions will prevail. Employes very rightfully expect, so far as possible, continuity of employment, adequate wages, good working conditions, and it is neither necessary nor wise for industry to retrench from the humanitarian work, to say the least, of group insurance, retiring age pensions, etc., carried on in the prosperous period. Henry Ford's theory of high wage standards and shorter hours, have not been commonly accepted by management, largely due to their ingrained traditionalism and utter lack of vision for their own, as well as the country's welfare.

The post-war prosperity very definitely created within the people a love for luxuries and there is abundant evidence that if this group of deflationists persist in their evil ways disorders will develop without number. It will be argued, it is necessary to meet a proper balance, and while we recognize this in some remote cases, it is the exception and not the rule. It is, we claim, absolutely necessary that wage scales be maintained, for we must recognize, business cannot revive with a curtailed buying power; a general curtailment would prove disastrous to many of our new industries, whose product is basically of the luxury type. Is it reasonable, logical, for industry to pay excessive dividends, exorbitant managerial salaries and invest in excess plant betterments, and deprive labor of its just proportion? This may appear socialistic, but it is not my point, as will be noted. Must we point out, change that sin of gluttony to one of just reward for labor performed, and labor will not fail in its contribution to increased prosperity, as we know from recent experience, through increased buying, and thus contribute by increased production to the capital returns. It does not require an excess of reasoning power to recognize the truth of the foregoing, but it does require courage to impress an avaricious directorate and equally avaricious capital, that a concern has a responsibility toward its employes as well as its capital interests.

John E. Edgerton of the National Association of Manufacturers, places the tardy economic recovery on the consuming public, that they have retrenched too heavily their normal purchases of the ordinary things of life. We know there is a latent buying power in this country, sufficient to start the wheels of prosperity, which fact we learn from our savings banks deposits; but buying must be backed by confidence, and that group of deflationists can properly stand charged as the chief aggressors in the shaking of present confidence, and hence present tardy recovery.

The very grave question which confronts us is, will the conditions be shaped through voluntary acts of our industrialists, will they maintain wages, adopt shorter hours, stagger jobs when advisable, eliminate child labor and independent married women, cooperate in unemployment insurance and old age pensions, and other measures necessary to our necessary stability? Is American business equal to this challenge, or must we revert to legislative measures, or force? The first is highly preferable; the second, in a measure, necessary, but is slow of accomplishment; the third not impossible, when we recall measures taken in other countries, in this, our day, though surely not desirable. The skies are much beclouded, labor is nervous and much aggrieved; action must not be delayed, and industrialists should ponder the issue wisely and well. Of course, if high wages mean increased costs and high prices, with no gain for wage earners, as will be argued, results would be futile, but it is known that wages are but a small part of the costs in most commodities, hence savings must come, will come, from the efficiency program, which will recognize distribution as equally an important factor as production, and which in many instances has dissipated much profit. Add to this the all-important fact, capital must be satisfied with reasonable returns, but over a longer undisturbed period.

In the final analysis, this greed of power, increased profits and monopoly, which has perverted our business, must fall before the religious issue, the Christian standard. Will this very apparent challenge to American business, this Christian standard, be met, or is business so steeped with gluttony, so irresponsible, so disloyal, to encourage that ever-growing spectre, at so great a sacrifice as prevails in Russia? That is the alternative; has American business the backbone, the right vision, to meet it? When we view the World war, the destruction, the distress that resulted, and recognize it all due to failure to practice Christian precepts, is it not time for us, this Christian nation, individuals, industry, state and nation, to call a halt, put our houses in order and start on a right constructive course? To the writer this issue overshadows all else, and is the answer to our distress.

Ring, Bells! Sing, Hearts! Shine, Stars!

Ring Christmas bells, peal out your happy song,
And let it echo down the aisles of earth,
Ringing the message, fearlessly and strong,
That brotherhood may in our hearts know birth.

Shine, holy star, and shed your golden light
Upon our faces, lifted to your sky—
And lead us in the paths of truth and right,
That we may follow, as your rays go by.

Sing angel chorus, in the hearts of men,
Raising a paean to the Prince of Peace.
With prayer for gift bestowed upon us, then,
That wars and warring shall forever cease.

Joy to the world—proclaim it down the way,
And spread the tidings, sweeping near and far—
Awake, be glad, for this is Christmas Day!
Ring, bells! Sing, happy hearts! Shine, golden star!

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24—James J. "Puddler Jim" Davis is now Senator Davis of Pennsylvania, and it must be a great day in the life of the immigrant lad from Tredegar, South Wales.

Also for all the little Davises—James Junior, Jane, Jean, Joan and Jewel. With their father in the senate they are free at last of almost a decade of Washington life as junior cabinet family.

And it must be said for the ex-cabinet member that in dealing with his own employment problem he managed very neatly to avoid any appreciable moment of joblessness.

His actual time off Uncle Sam's payroll in making the transition from cabinet to senate is computed at 83 minutes.

A Trying Wait

Yet of all the minutes he may have spent waiting to be formally initiated into the various fraternal organizations to which he belongs that half hour of uncertainty on the senate doorstep must have been the most trying. He appeared anything but happy as he waited in the senate to be seated.

It looks as though he has Senator Robinson of Arkansas, democratic leader, to thank that his uncertainty was not prolonged for days.

Robinson engineered the democratic split that gave Davis the support of 19 democrats, while 17 senators of that party and nine republicans voted against him.

Up to the moment the roll-call was over almost anybody would have predicted that virtually all of those democrats would vote the other way.

Overwhelming Victory

Incidentally the credentials attesting Davis' election presented by Governor Fisher were a bit unusual in form.

They recapitulated the Pennsylvania senatorial ballot results to show that Davis had rolled up a margin of more than 800,000 votes over all his four opponents and 42 "scattering" combined.

That may have had something to do with the action of the pro-Davis democrats; that and those impressive organized labor affiliations of the former labor secretary. It obviously is a little hard to ignore the will of 800,000 voters.

Nye of North Dakota, who made the effort to slam the senate door for a moment anyhow on Davis' fingers, exhibited signs of pained surprise as so many democrats ran out on him.

By way of demonstrating his sportsmanship, however, he was the first senator to give Davis the lodge grip of welcome once the swearing-in was over.

No personal hard feelings involved.

YOUR HEALTH

The Scarlet Fever Scourge

By Roland Davison, M. D., Tucson, Arizona.

(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

No invasion is more rapid or more devastating than the invasion of our bodies by scarlet fever. Scarlet fever is the loiterer in crowded school rooms and public places which becomes more active in winter months when our natural resistance to diseases which reach us through the breathing apparatus is lessened by diminished sunlight and lessened body activity in the open air.

Scarlet fever is one of the germ diseases which can be prevented, yet takes a heavy toll in suffering and life long disabilities through the complications it induces. The disease is characterized by its sudden onset. In young children there is occasionally a convulsion, oftener there is a chill followed by fever, vomiting, and soon our patient complains of sore throat. The typical scarlet fiver rash comes later, perhaps later the same day, oftener the following day, sometimes not until the third day of the disease.

This picture is known well to the physician, who must be called early if the complications are to be prevented. His best weapon is scarlet fever antitoxin, which brings down the fever, shortens the period of illness and often prevents the complications. The complications more usually encountered are abscesses of the ears, and disease of the kidneys. If these complications occurred and only caused temporary suffering, we might be aroused only moderately, but much of the life long invalidism from diseased kidneys and discharging ears had its inception in an attack of scarlet fever. Early isolation of the scarlet fever patient is essential to prevent the infection from spreading to susceptible persons.

All of this suffering can be entirely prevented. Medical science has found the cause of scarlet fever, and has developed a test known as the Dick test which can be applied to any child without damage or pain to determine whether or not that child is susceptible to scarlet fever. The same Doctors Dick have also given us what is known as scarlet fever toxin for immunization, through which by 3 or 4 harmless hypodermic injections which can be given by any physician, any susceptible child can be protected against scarlet fever and all its evil consequences. Young children are particularly susceptible to scarlet fever. Any child who has not had scarlet fever should be given the Dick test, and every child who is found susceptible to scarlet fever should be given scarlet fever toxin. There is no better insurance.

Let us protect our children from scarlet fever, and make the world a better place in which to live happy, healthy lives.

TEN-INCH SNOW FALL
DURING LAST TWO DAYS

The two-day storm left in its wake 10 inches of snow on the level and assured Norwich a white Christmas. Tuesday and Wednesday snow plows and trucks, manned by 30 men from the street department, were engaged in removing the snow from the streets. Early this (Thursday) morning three plows were put into service and it is expected that during the day all of the principal streets will be cleared. Men were also engaged in sanding the sidewalks where it was needed.

The 10-inch fall of snow had some effect upon the schedule of the Connecticut Trolley Co., the trolleys running between 15 and 30 minutes late Wednesday. The heavy traffic and machines parked along the main streets impeded the progress of the trolleys to a certain extent.

POSTAL RUSH OVER—
OFFICE CLOSED TODAY

The entire force at the Norwich postoffice, with one or two exceptions, will enjoy their Christmas dinner at home, after one of the busiest Christmas seasons in the history of the department. Today (Thursday) the postoffice will be closed, there will be no delivery of mail with the exception of packages bearing special delivery stamps, nor any sorting. However, one or two men will be engaged in opening pouches and stacking the mail.

Early Wednesday evening the interior of the postoffice looked bare in comparison to its appearance for the past several days, when all available space was occupied with letters, postal cards and packages. Practically every piece of mail, excepting that which came on the evening trains, had been delivered. That mail that came in the evening pouches was not exceptionally heavy. Barely 50 parcel post packages had to be held on account of late arrival.

According to Postmaster Casper K. Bailey, the Christmas mail was not particularly heavy until Saturday, but on the following three days there was an avalanche, the peak being reached the first of this week. Seventeen extra clerk and carriers had to be rushed into service on Monday, so heavy was the mail. For the past few days the force of men with the extra men worked at top speed in an effort to deliver the mail to local residents before Christmas.

This was necessitated through the failure of local people as well as those in other cities in mailing early, as warned by postal authorities, pointed out Postmaster Bailey. The people, this year, waited until the "last minute" to send letters and packages and as a result the mail poured into the postoffice in large quantities later than in past years. In previous years the mail was distributed over a longer period.

Postmaster Bailey, and assistant employes are to be complimented upon the excellent showing they made this year.

FUNERALS

Harry M. Richmond

A military funeral for Harry M. Richmond, adjutant of Richard E. Hourigan post, No. 594, V. F. W., was held Wednesday afternoon with a large attendance. The funeral was conducted at his residence, No. 222 Franklin street, at 2:30 o'clock by Rev. Robert H. Parkes, rector of Grace Episcopal church, Yantic. There was a wealth of beautiful floral forms.

Burial was in the family plot in Maplewood cemetery, where the committal service of the Veterans of Foreign Wars was held. A firing squad from the submarine base fired a volley over the grave and Taps was sounded by Bugler Emil Lavigne of R. E. Hourigan post. The squad comprised Chief E. P. Mahan, C. C. Pillalas, E. L. Murphy, W. J. Parrow, R. L. Cox, J. H. Ciddester, R. Bocock, R. A. Foss and J. H. Weaver. The color bearers were Daniel Gaudet and August Vogelstein, guards.

RURAL ASSOCIATION HOLDS 8TH ANNUAL CHRISTMAS CELEBRATION

The eighth annual community Christmas tree celebration was held Christmas eve at Norwich Town Green, with a large attendance. Cold crisp winter air greeted the singers who participated in carrying out the programme of beautiful carols. The celebration, held under the auspices of Norwich Rural association, was greatly enjoyed by a throng of men, women and children, as in former years. Willard Haugh, president of the Rural association, left nothing undone to make the affair a success. He was ably assisted by Joseph C. Worth who was in charge of the music, also directed the singing; Walter T. Clark, chairman of the tree fund, and Mrs. Walter T. Clark, chairman on decorating the tree, and others.

Many automobiles were parked around the green, except on the Town street side which is the main state highway. The time was set for 7:45 and in all the celebration lasted less than an hour. It was estimated that there were about 100 present on the green, besides those who remained in automobiles, about fifty cars being parked around the green. The thought was expressed that the crowd was even larger than last year as there were several children present.

The tree was never more beautiful, in its raiment of snow, through which the ligts sparkled most brilliantly, in fact, all the trees on the green and around it were so decked out in nature's garb that the entire setting was gorgeous to look upon. Through the thoughtful consideration of President Haugh, large paths were cleared from the sidewalk to the green, on which covering a vast space the snow had been cleared away around the tree where the chorus of singers stood. From a small platform, Mr Worth led in the following carols: Come All Ye Faithful, was the opening song, the others included Holy Night, O Little Town of Bethlehem, Hark! the Hearald Angels Sing, Joy to the World, We Three Kings of Orient Are, It Came Upon a Midnight Clear and Away in a Manger, eight in all. The singers were accompanied by a trio of brass instruments, two cornets and one trombone, with John M. Swahn, leader.

Small leaflets were passed around on which were the stanzas to the carols. The children sang the first stanza of Away in a Manger, unaccompanied, the adults and musicians joining in for the remaining ones.

At the close of the celebration on the green, the entire crowd moved across to the Johnson home opposite, and serenaded its occupants, those who were able coming to the windows to enjoy this unexpected treat.

O Come All Ye Faithful and Holy Night were the carols here by the musicians and singers. A number of homes in Norwich Town were brilliantly lighted along the route, providing an introductory spectacle before arriving at the green, where they were greeted with a wonderful display. The tree will continue to be lighted for at least one more week, the electric current being generously contributed by the Norwich Gas and Electric company, through its courteous management. It has been the custom in past years that New Year's night is the last night for the tree to be lighted, after which it will be dismantled until another year.

BRING SUIT FOR PARTITION OF TAFTVILLE PROPERTY

Joseph and Alfred Pothier of Norwich have brought suit in the superior court against Agnes Proulx, Elzear Godeler, Rose Paradis, Raymond Benoit and Noe Godeler, of Norwich seeking a partition of property in Taftville. The plaintiffs allege that the Pothiers and Agnes Proulx are in possession as tenants in common of certain real estate located on Merchants avenue, Taftville. They are also the owners of household furniture located in the 11 rooms in the house on the premises occupied by them. Each has an undivided one-third interest in the household furniture excepting therefrom one electric washing machine, a vacuum cleaner and a desk which personal property belongs to and is the property of Joseph Pothier.

The plaintiffs ask the court for a partition of the real estate according to the respective rights of the parties.

GREENEVILLE SCHOOLS HAVE HOLIDAY EXERCISES

The increased registration at the Greeneville school which has necessitated the division of the one-time assembly hall into three class rooms thus robbing the pupils of a place to stage a united Christmas program, did not prevent programs in the various class rooms Wednesday. Songs, recitations, games and plays were features on every program. The costumes in the character parts were in many instances of an elaborate nature, parents, teachers and pupils uniting in the effort to make them perfect.

The youngsters in the kindergarten were the only ones to have a Christmas tree of any proportion and this was profusely decorated with articles made by the pupils and intended for presentation to parents and friends. In addition there were the regular Christmas tree decorations. At the close of the program, Santa Claus and his next of kin, Santason, paid a surprise visit to the kindergarten much to the delight and amazement of the little folks. Santa was fairly besieged with requests for toys to be delivered sometime Christmas eve.

STOCKS CLOSED 1 TO 2 POINTS UP IN ACTIVE SESSION OF STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Dec. 24.—(AP)—Although the financial markets were not particularly boisterous in their celebration of Christmas, there was nevertheless progress in all departments. Active stocks closed 1 to 3 points higher—a range that represented about half of the day's extreme gains—while bonds, grain and cotton showed more nominal improvement.

Considering the fact that Dec. 24 is frequently the dullest day of the year in the stock market, the turnover of 1,582,338 shares was fairly large. Not until the last hour, when only 211,000 shares changed hands, did the trading exhibit extreme lassitude.

The chief topic of conversation in financial circles, naturally, was the reduction in the rediscount rate of the New York Federal Reserve bank. This further step in the easy money policy that has been followed for more than a year stimulated considerable short covering in the early hours and it was this professional activity that accounted for much of the strength, although the coppers got help from the declaration of a regular dividend by Anaconda.

It was generally agreed that the new rediscount figure should have several important effects. Bankers believed it would serve to improve confidence by demonstrating that the enormous resources of the country's largest reserve bank were available at a record low rate. Its effect on the bond market, it was pointed out, should also be beneficial.

Although it was not generally expected that the amount of outstanding reserve credit would be measureably increased, at least for the present, the central bank's step was taken as a forerunner of lower commercial interest and acceptance rates, thereby assisting the recovery process in business. Furthermore, it should be of assistance to foreign exchanges, particularly sterling; cables on London immediately strengthened, rising 5-32.

One unusual aftermath of the rate cut was the virtual absence of any effect on the money markets. The federal cut its bill buying rate by 1-8 of 1 per cent and a few dealers reduced their bid and asked rates, but some of those who cut subsequently returned to the old figures, which resulted in considerable confusion. Call and time money were unchanged.

Because of the holiday, business news was flat and colorless. There were the usual mid-week statistics on carloadings and petroleum, the former showing a decrease that was larger than seasonal. Gasoline stocks in the week rose more than a million barrels, which was unfavorable, but crude oil output declined. There was no change in the copper situation, although demand was said to be good.

Farm board support and a bullish government forecast brought net advances running to a cent in wheat futures. Corn, which has been discouragingly weak, firmed to the extent of small fractions, reflecting an improved sales demand and smaller receipts in Chicago. Cotton closed 35 to 55 cents a bale higher.

The advances in stocks were well distributed. Anaconda, Kennecott, Phelps Dodge and Magma Coppers rallied a point or more and there were net advances of 1 to 3 in U. S. Steel, American Telephone, American Can, American Tobacco, DuPont, Eastman Kodak, North American, Consolidated Gas, General Electric, National Biscuit, Westinghouse, Johns Manville, Borden, Case and other miscellaneous shares. Air Reduction, Auburn Auto, American Water Works and Western Union were up 3 at the close. Union Pacific held 5 of an extreme advance of more than 6 but otherwise the rails were rather quiet.

The strength of sterling carried through the other European exchanges and the Canadian dollar reduced its discount by about half.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Dec. 24.—(AP)—A moderate buying demand exerted its influence to impart a cheery tone to the bond market today.

The price level was raised somewhat by inquiry for investment issues in the domestic list, where the advance more closely resembled the normal movement in times of easy money than the recent sharp rebound.

Investors, however, were not very active on the buying side and the turnover took a sharp drop such as traders usually expect on the eve of a holiday. The improved tone was partially attributed to the reduction in the federal reserve rediscount rate after the close of the market yesterday, but bond men generally expect that its influence on bond buying will not be very marked until after the turn of a new year. The final week of the year ordinarily is a quiet one.

Another factor which exerted a stabilizing influence was the Christmas buying spirit in the share market which helped second grade rails and stock privilege issues, that move in sympathy with stocks. Rails and other convertibles gained large fractions or more. There was a strong demand for Allegheny corporation bonds and the 5 per cent issues advanced 2 and 3 points each.

After some hesitancy in recent sessions, railroad obligations resumed their advance, but at a much slower pace. Chesapeake & Ohio 4 1-2s B, Chicago & Northwestern 3 1-2s, Rock Island 4 1-2s A, St. Paul 5s of 1975, Erie issues, International Great Northern 6s, Missouri Pacific 5s F, Frisco 4 1-2s, Wabash 5 1-2s, were in the vanguard. Closing prices of this group represented an average gain of about a point while other investment rails advanced fractionally.

Investment demand bolstered prices of the prime utility and industrial obligations although turnover in all but a small group was very light. American Telephone Co. issues were well bought. Niagara Falls Power 6s advanced more than a point. Trading in treasury obligations was confined principally to two issues—Liberty 4th 4 1-4s, which were firm and Treasury 3-8s, which were unchanged. Foreign bonds were irregularly higher. There was a good inquiry for some of the European governments. A half-point advance in German 5 1-2s stood out.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Dec. 24.—(AP)—Unusual buying orders that have lifted Chicago wheat prices during the last 48 hours received an apparent explanation just before the market closed today. Dispatches from Washington said Chairman Legge of the federal farm board had suggested that a temporary embargo had been forced against wheat imports into the United States. There were also London advices that the British government was preparing to establish quota purchasing of wheat for the British market.

Wheat closed unsettled 1-2a1 3-8c a bushel higher than yesterday; corn 1-8a3-4c advanced, oats 3-8c up, and provisions from 20 decline to a rise of 32c.

COTTON

NEW YORK, Dec. 24.—(AP)—Futures closed steady, 7 to 11 higher; spot steady, middling 9.85.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Dec. 24.—(AP)—Prices moved unevenly higher in a quiet session of the curb market today, as trading was restricted by pre-holiday influences.

Utilities and oils, in the main, worked higher. The day's transactions embraced a total of 487,200 shares; fully 131,400 less than in the preceding session.

Electric Bond & Share made an extreme gain of about 2 points, but yielded a fraction of it in late profit taking. American Gas sold up more than 2 points, closed with a net gain of 1 3-4. United Light "A" finished 3-4 of a point higher, and American Super Power and Associated Gas "A" closed fractionally higher. Standard of Kentucky was a firm feature of the oils, rising 2 1-2 points, and slipping back about a point from the top. The weekly oil statistics were not particularly favorable, showing a gain of more than 1,360,000 barrels in gasoline stocks, but these shares seemed to have been oversold. Vacuum and Gulf gained nearly a point, and Cities Service was up 1-4. Indiana and Humble closed about steady.

Industrials were quiet and irregular. Aluminum Co. declined 3, then rallied 2 from the bottom. Deere sagged for a time but closed up a fraction. Mapes Consolidated sold at 32, a new low, off 2 points. A. O. Smith, often a wide mover, gained 5.

Coppers were almost neglected, but Noranda closed nearly a point higher.

DR. GEORGE E. BITGOOD, NEW LONDON, TO WED DIVORCED ASSISTANT

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Dec. 24—Dr. George E. Bitgood, veterinarian, of 244 Willetts avenue, and his assistant, Mrs. Dorothy K. Parkhurst, of the same address, today applied for a marriage license at the office of the city clerk. Mrs. Parkhurst recently obtained a divorce. Dr. Bitgood and Mrs. Parkhurst were injured recently when the automobile in which they were riding in Marlboro collided with a truck. Since then Dr. Bitgood has been made the defendant in a suit for $10,000 damages brought by the owner of the truck because of damage to the truck and having been deprived of its use for a long time.

Fighters Are Fined

Alex Chaplinski and Andrew Pedro were in the police court this morning charged with breach of the peace. Each was fined $10 and costs. Chaplinski, who is regularly employed was given time to pay the penalty imposed, due to the fact that the man and his wife are estranged and that their three children are residing at the Chaplinski home, 118 Shaw street. Owing to the youth of all the children, Judge Daniel M. Cronin allowed Chaplinski a week to pay the fine and costs. Pedro paid his fine. The men engaged in a drinking party at the Chaplinski residence late yesterday afternoon and a fight started. The fighters were arrested by Patrolman Henry Sylvia and Automobile Patrol Officer George Cockell. The case was the only one tried at today's session of court.

Holiday visitors started arriving in New London this afternoon and continued tonight. As a result of the large crowd of passengers going to their homes or the homes of relatives the trains of the New Haven railroad, en route from New York to Boston, were crowded. All of the trains were composed of extra parlor cars and coaches and many of the trains were operated in sections. Because of the storm all of the afternoon and early evening trains were late in arriving at the union station.

Snow Gives Work to Many

The storm of today provided many of the city's unemployed with work, for the highway department assigned several gangs of shovelers and teamsters to the task of removing the snow from the business streets. As fast as the snow was loaded into dump cars or auto trucks, it was carted to the municipal pier and emptied into the Thames river. The work will probably be carried on for several days, until such time as the streets, State, Main and Bank streets, have been rid of snow. Another force of shovelers was provided work by being employed in cleaning snow from the sidewalks in front of the several schools, also from the walks at other city owned property.

Mrs. George Miner, of West Mystic; Edward Voelker, 83 Phillips street; Frank Baier, 24 Warren street; Mrs. Mary Johnson, 125 Jefferson avenue; Mrs. William Henderson and infant daughter, Fishers Island; George Battison, 24 Reed street, patients at Lawrence-Memorial hospital, were discharged today.

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Robbins B. Stoeckel today ordered the suspension of the drivers' licenses of Mrs. Violet Moore, 88 Jefferson avenue; Byron M. Wineke, United States coast guard and David Mulcahy, 145 Glenwood avenue. Commissioner Stoeckel also ordered the return of the licenses of Arthur Deimel, 239 Williams street and Gustav Larsen, 38 West Pleasant street.

A Nash automobile carrying Massachusetts markers, which had been parked on Union street two days, was taken in charge by the police this forenoon when it was taken to a garage and put in storage until such time as the owner claims it.

FUNERAL

Louis W. Eldridge

The funeral of Louis W. Eldridge, 18, son of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Eldridge, 10 Bulkeley place, was held this morning at 11:30 o'clock at the residence of the parents. The services were conducted by Rev. Elmer G. Page. Western Union messenger boys acted as bearers and burial was in Willington Hill cemetery, West Willington.

Jacob R. Slosberg Sues

Jacob R. Slosberg today brought suit for $1,500 damages against Edward L. Raymond and property owned by the defendant at 130 Thames street and 11 Morton street, was attached. The action is returnable before the next term of the superior court. The writ, which has been filed for record at the office of the city clerk, recites that the plaintiff has been unable to collect a loan made defendant several months ago.

Patrolman Clyde Murphy, who has been ill with a severe cold at his home, 74 Maple avenue, resumed duty today.

Miss Kathleen Sullivan, 83 Alger place, parked her automobile on Montauk avenue a half hour last night while she visited an acquaintance. Miss Sullivan remained away long enough to permit a thief to steal a woman's leather wrist bag, a child's leather wrist bag and a man's leather belt, the latter without buckle. Miss Sullivan reported the theft at police headquarters.

The New London police today were requested by the police of Springfield, Mass., to be on the lookout for a Dodge truck carrying Massachusetts markers, 6359, which was stolen from a garage last night, together with its load of 35 boxes of butter.

Recovering From Injuries

The condition of Louis Karp, New York, who was injured Sunday morning when the automobile in which he was riding and which was driven by K. I. Howell, also of New York, crashed against a tree, corner of Williams and Huntington streets, is reported as comfortable at Lawrence-Memorial hospital. Howell and Dr. J. M. Ganey, the latter a passenger in the auto and who was slightly injured, no longer suffer from the effects of the accident. Mrs. Howell and Mrs. Ganey, the other occupants of the automobile, which was wrecked, were not injured.

An attempt was made about 2 o'clock this morning to rob the barber shop of Edward S. Grandin, 6 Steward street, but the crook was scared away by the barking of a dog. As it was no loot was obtained. The thief gained entrance to the shop by means of a poorly secured rear window.

Fire threatened damage to the Lena hospital Broad street, late yesterday and a still alarm was sent to fire headquarters. Northeast Hose company and Chief Thomas Shipman responded, subduing the fire, which was in the chimney, with chemicals. The patients were not excited and only a few of them were aware of the existence of the fire.

Anna Mono, 15 months, of 11 Orchard street, has whooping cough, the case being the 20th reported within a fortnight.

W. J. Smith, formerly assistant superintendent of the Shore Line division of the New Haven railroad, now stationed at Putnam, visited in New London.

AGAIN WALTER BENEDICT IS CAUGHT SELLING BOOZE

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Dec. 24.— Walter Benedict, a former employe of the government, in the lighthouse service and who has been a resident at Ridgewood park, Waterford, for several months, was arrested this evening charged with violation of the liquor law. He was released upon providing a surety on his bond of $1000, furnished by Louis Elfenbein and will be given a hearing in the Waterford town court Monday next. Benedict has been arrested before on the same charge, for two months ago today he was apprehended on a charge of violation of the liquor law and when tried in the Waterford town court was fined $400 and costs. Benedict is the tenant of a cottage but a short distance from the new highway bridge spanning Alewife cove and leading from Westerly place to Ridgewood park, occupying the same cottage he did when arrested in October last. Within a few days the state police received information that the former federal service man was continuing his sale of liquor and tonight Officer John Smith was assigned to the case. The officer, who figured in the raid two months ago, went to the cottage and experienced no difficulty in entering the house. Conditions were the same as existed before and a quantity of liquor was found

There is but one occupant of a cell at police headquarters tonight. The lone man, who was found drunk in a snow bank and with a quart of liquor by his side tonight by Sergeant John Courtney, is scheduled for presentation in the police court tomorrow.

All of the occupants of the tramp room at police headquarters tonight have a surprise in store for them tomorrow and one they undoubtedly will appreciate for the unfortunates who have no place to sleep other than a bunk at the home of the violators of the law, will be provided with a bountiful holiday dinner. Every man occupying a bunk tonight will be given a turkey dinner tomorrow noon at the B. P. Learned mission lodging house, North Bank street. When the men are liberated tomorrow morning they will be informed of the dinner awaiting them. Tonight, there were but few in the tramp room, to be exact, only four; but during the early morning hours others may apply and obtain lodgings.

Mrs. Charles E. Foley of the Crocker house has returned, after a lengthy visit with friends and relatives in Baltimore, Philadelphia and Brooklyn.

Storm Delays Cars

The storm of today partially crippled trolley service, both on the city lines and on the New London-Norwich line. The Connecticut company's powerful plow was put into service early in the forenoon and continued until long after snow ceased falling. The plow kept the tracks as clear as possible, but automobile traffic carried snow back on the rails, making it impossible to operate the cars on time. Travel was heavy throughout the day and evening. Between 12:30 and 1:30 o'clock the cars on all the lines were at a standstill because of a mishap at the power station and as a result shoppers and employes in stores were greatly inconvenienced.

Barbara May Williams, two months old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Williams, of Lamphear road, Waterford, died today at Lawrence-Memorial hospital.

ELKS PROVIDE PARTY FOR OVER 2,000 CHILDREN

The annual Christmas party for poor children of the city was conducted by New London lodge of Elks this morning, when a motion picture performance was provided more than 2,000 boys and girls at the Garde theatre. A varied program was given and carol singing, led by Louis H. Shafer, of the Y. M. C. A., provided a part of the entertainment. A special committee, comprising members of the Elks gave the attendants a liberal supply of apples and candy.

The most dangerous sidewalk in the city tonight was in front of the municipal building, State street. The snow had been tracked so solidly that it was glare ice and several pedestrians fell, but did not sustain injury. Hundreds of other men and women had narrow escapes from falling; in fact it required a contortionist to remain in a vertical position while passing over the walk.

Generous Railroad Men

Employes at the freight house of the New Haven railroad contributed dinners to seven families today. The baskets were delivered by an employe and provided a bountiful repast to such families as it was known were in dire circumstances and would not enjoy a holiday feast but for the generosity of the railroaders.

Complains Against Hunters.

Many complaints are registered against hunters who travel our properties night and day and help themselves regardless of any rights which we might have to our own. Having fed the deer, and game as well as pheasants, partridges, etc., Hill farmers feel that they at least have the first right. This entire area seems like free plunder for all. They take game or trees, Christmas greens and berries. If they ask permission at all, they are careful not to ask the owners and reply when questioned that they had permission or they did not know who owned the land. This is no excuse in the sight of the law.

Property owners are selling out to the state and why shouldn't we? Between the tax collector and the plunderer, there is little if anything left for the owners. The state will patrol this region, protect its own and pay the taxes. Perhaps then we can live in peace.

George P. Gilmour has sold to the state the Greenfall tract as well as several other large tracts in area amounting to 1620 acres. Mr. Gilmour reserved about the same number of acres. This is a beautiful tract of country.

Myron Kinnie has sold a large tract of land, presumably his entire holdings of more than 200 acres to the state forest commission. Others are contemplating a similar disposition of their holdings for the reasons stated.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cottrell, Miss Kittie Palmer, George and Charles Cottrell, Jr., Mrs. Clifford Thompson, Mrs. Jennie Thompson, Miss Catherine Thompson and Sarah Thompson Palmer represented the Hill at Wheeler's final debate of the season Friday evening. This team should hold its own with any high school. Mr. Atwood, the principal, and his able assistants, as well as the team received emphatic praise. The vocal music also should come in for its full share of praise. With little or no training in the public school Mr. Atwood has worked wonders in this field.

Little Mildred Johnson, aged 10, can show several pages of gold stars in her music report book. Her teacher credits her with as good work as any one in the class. Her biscuits, cakes and gingerbread are excellent. Her garden work has been reported. She is spending $10 or more made in her garden for her Christmas gifts to friends and relatives. This little girl is only ten years old.

Mrs. Birdsey G. Palmer, Miss Carrie A. Ryder and Miss Emma Maine are ill.

The Hill church was beautifully decorated with wreaths and hemlock boughs for the Sunday morning service. Papers burned were in memory of Mr. and Mrs. Robert P. Palmer, Miss Julia Palmer, Mrs. Mary Palmer, Mrs. Elizabeth Thompson and Mrs. Fidelia Gallup.

Mr. and Mrs. Thompson and family will entertain at a luncheon in the evening honoring a larger party of friends.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theatre

A riot of fast-moving fun is "Going Wild," the First National and Vitaphone feature which opened yesterday at the Broadway theatre. The picture stars Joe E. Brown, the talking screen's most popular comedian, and the result is that there is scarcely a quiet minute in the house. "Going Wild," is an even funnier picture than Brown's two previous pictures, "Hold Everything" and "Top Speed," which set attendance records everywhere in the country and established Brown on the top rung of comedy.

"Going Wild" is a farce built around an airplane race. Brown is a newspaper reporter, broke and out of a job, who is en route to Florida with a companion, Lawrence Gray. Brown, because of similar initials, is mistaken for the author of a famous book on aviation, and the whole town is at the station to greet him.

As may be imagined, Brown takes it very big, the only fly in the ointment being that he is eventually challenged to a race by a real pilot (Walter Pidgeon) and because of a crush on a girl, Laura Lee, he is unable to back out. One of the funniest sequences in the picture is that in which Brown teaches himself how to fly in a hotel bedroom—if you want to know how to do it, see the picture.

Frank McHugh, as usual turns in a splendid performance as the drunken proprietor of the hotel. Ona Munson in the leading romantic role is not only beautiful, but has one of the best voices that have come to the screen. Lawrence Gray make a very effective hero and a good foil for Brown.

The picture is liberally interspersed with catchy songs. The airplane race at the finish will find the audience alternately gasping at the thrills and going into gales of laughter at Brown's antics in the sky. There is some very daring flying and a surprise finish which is a distinct novelty.

New Strand Theatre

Within an inch of his life, Harold Lloyd goes to great lengths, as well as small ones, to make "Feet First" his most thrilling picture in years.

In "Safety First," some years ago, Harold Lloyd made the whole world gasp at his daredevil stunts on the side of a building hundreds of feet above Broadway. And in his new picture he promises to do even better. In the first place, he has spent more time on it, to say nothing of money, and those closest to him say that he hasn't worked so hard in ten years. But not only is he determined to maintain his individual place among the few comedians who have survived time and the talkies, but he is equally determined to entertain with novelty and human appeal.

In "Feet First," Harold Lloyd plays a timid shoe clerk whose quiet life acquires speed when he finds himself an unwitting stowaway and hides in a mail sack to avoid discovery. He succeeds so well that when finally he cuts himself out of the sack he finds himself on a painters' scaffold, a hundred feet above the ground. His efforts to reach the street are shown in scenes in the picture with a suggestion of the accidents and obstacles that make his progress painfully slow to him and laughably exciting to the spectator.

Palace Theatre

A real Christmas bill is offered at the Palace today in a gigantic double feature bill, each of which is playing single in most of the theatres of the state. "A Devil With Women" features Victor McLaglen, who needs no introduction to the fans of this city, after his great work in "What Price Glory" and "The Cock-Eyed World."

The story, laid in an imaginary Central American country during a bandit uprising, brings a new McLaglen to the screen—a weather-beaten, sardonic, jovial, practical soldier of fortune, whose sword is at the service of whatever country offers the most excitement. It is an intensely human and appealing role and fits McLaglen like a glove.

On the same bill is beautiful Lupe Velez, in her finest role of the wild-untamed French-Canadian girl.

"The Storm" deals with the eternal triangle in a most unique setting. Two men and a girl are imprisoned by winter in a snowbound cabin in the wilderness of western Canada. The girl is a naive, impulsive French-Canadian, her natural impulses untempered by contact with civilization. The men are of widely different types. One is a city man, suave and polished, the other a stalwart frontiersman. Both love the girl—each in his own way.

Coming Saturday for four days Charles Farrell, in the Princess and the Plumber, with the youthful star Maureen O'Sullivan, and H. B. Warner, a love story that is old but always new.

Near Roanoke, Va., G. T. Robertson, truck driver, noticed an ordinary 1-cent match box lying in the underbrush while hauling cord wood. He saw the box as he passed each day. Finally, having motor trouble at this spot and wanting a match to clean the carburetor, he picked up the box. It continued $21 in bills.

TWO SLIGHTLY INJURED WHEN CAR SKIDS INTO TRUCK IN WESTERLY

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Dec. 24—Howard D. McFarland of Chestnut street received a severe rap on the head and Michael Terranova of George street, cuts and lacerations on his face, head and hand as the result of the collision of two automobiles about 10:00 a. m. Wednesday at the junction of West Broad and Moss streets. Both men, employed by the Whitall Electric company were proceeding on West Broad street in the company truck driven by McFarland when a Chrysler sedan, driven by Eino Salonem, 26, of 467 East 134th street, New York, came down West Broad street bound for Middleboro, Mass. The car of the New York man swerved on the slippery street surface to crash into the Whitall truck with such force as to wreck the front end of the sedan and to have Terranova cut by the windshield.

McFarland was stretched out on the West Broad street school embankment and Terranova had started for the office of Dr. William A. Hillard just as Fred W. Harvey of William street, came by in time to assist both men into the doctor's office for treatment.

Pawcatuck Police Patrolman Robert Robertson was called to the scene to investigate and gave Salonem a summons to appear in Stonington town court on Jan. 20th next to answer to a charge of reckless auto driving. Before Judge William A. Wilcox of the town court he was placed under a $50 bond for his court appearance and his auto was held for surety.

PASSENGERS GET JOLT WHEN TRAIN STOPS SUDDENLY

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Dec. 24—Westerly passengers along with others on the Florida Sunbeam express, due to leave the Westerly station on Tuesday at 5:06 p. m. for Providence and Boston, received a jolting as the train made a forced stop at the Kingston station. The express was over an hour late in leaving the Westerly station, it having been side-tracked to allow the Yankee Clipper express to pass it before reaching Westerly. As the train on the tangent stretch approaching the Kingston signal tower was near the distant signal it was suddenly flashed red in the engineer's face, and he began to apply brakes. At the Kingston grade crossing near the signal tower was reached a red fuzee was lighted and the engineer put on his emergency brakes "in the large hole" and passengers were jolted in their seats while a candy boy's wares were distributed in the aisle. Passengers in two rear cars who gathered at the rear end expecting to hear that some one had been struck learned from the towerman that the Yankee Clipper limited express had come to a sudden stop between the Kingston and Slocum stations when trouble developed with the locomotive. The Sunbeam express was backed over onto the westbound track and ran around the Clipper, back-tracking as far as the East Greenwich station. The Yankee Clipper was over two hours late in arriving in Boston. On the Merchants Limited express following the Clipper the "Trekkin" engine hauled this train 80 miles at such a rate as to make up for time lost.

MAP PATH OF 1,700 STARS FOR PLANETOIDS APPROACH

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. —(P)— Almost like laying a carpet for distinguished visitors, astronomers are mapping a path of 1,700 stars for the approach of Eros, the little planetoid.

Eros this winter will come within about 16,000,000 miles of the earth and be the basis of important astronomic measurements.

The light of the 1,700 stars has been checked, says the Harvard Observatory Bulletin for comparison with Eros. The 1,700 are strung out in a narrow line.

BELAIR TO SEND STRONG TEAM AGAINST SHYMAS THIS AFTERNOON

Fans who remember the days when Joe Belair, the black-haired flash of Taftville, was slicing and cutting through the strongest defenses of the leading basketball teams of New England and to score baskets for the Taftville Crescents, will have them vividly recalled to mind this afternoon when Joe Belair and his All Stars clash with the Shyma club at Parish hall. Ten to 15 years ago Joe Belair was rated as one of the best forwards in the east his playing attracting attention in Boston, New York, Hartford and the other big cities where he played with teams representing Taftville and Patterson, N. J. Joe has felt the advance of the years to a more or less degree but there is still plenty of life left in the old boy and those who doubt that statement should be on hand to see Joe in action this afternoon.

Belair is bringing up a real strong aggregation of basket-shooters with him today and will put a team on the floor that should be the equal of any club that has played at Parish hall in a number of years. This team of Belair's is largely composed of former high school stars who have played with various teams in the eastern part of the state.

The Shymas are to throw their strongest strength against the All Stars this afternoon with the result that a fast game is expected. The Shymas will have plenty to think about in today's game.

NEW ENGLAND COLLEGES FOLLOWING BUTLER PLAN

MIDDLETOWN, Dec. 24.—(AP)—Reforms in athletic administration at the smaller New England colleges have been in line with suggestions made by President Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia university, in the opinion of President James L. McConaughy of Wesleyan university, who gave expression to his approval of many of the former's proposals.

President McConaughy said that if football is to continue as a college sport, primarily for undergraduates, and not as a great money-making public spectacle, the proposals of President Butler must have general consideration.

"In the smaller colleges, particularly in New England," said President McConaughy, "most of these matters (reforms) have already been accomplished. At Amherst, Bowdoin, Hamilton, Haverford, Trinity, Williams and Wesleyan, football is a college matter with vastly less concern for the public attitude than is true of institutions like Yale, Harvard, Princeton and Columbia.

"The colleges mentioned above, and many others, have gone further than President Butler suggested and have done many things that have not been accomplished at Columbia. For example, in most of these colleges, as Coach Roper has urged, football practice begins only a few days before college opens and the season ends in early November. At Columbia, Yale and Harvard, the grind of practice and playing lasts three months and in some institutions even longer. These colleges have also made all their coaches year-round faculty appointees with salaries no greater than professors are paid.

"Unfortunately, in many of the bigger universities, which might be expected to set the example to the American college world, coaches are employed for the football season only at salaries twice or more than that of any professor. They frequently show very little interest in the academic side of college life, sometimes even opposing the high standards insisted upon by the faculty. Furthermore, in these colleges all the athletic funds are managed by the institutions themselves, with no element of outside control and vastly less concern about the income at the gate than is true with institutions with great stadiums and athletic plants to support.

"President Butler's suggestion that athletics be endowed is admirable. However, many colleges now make large appropriations to athletics, very much greater than the income from admissions. Unlike the situation in the big universities the gate is only a small part of the income for athletics in the older New England colleges.

"One concrete suggestion now being considered by two or three New England colleges of Wesleyan's type is that in the future football contests be confined to institutions of our own type, dropping the big universities. This has been urged by undergraduates and others at Wesleyan repeatedly during the last few years, and will, I think, have very serious consideration in the immediate future."

ROCKNE DECIDES TO FOLLOW DOCTOR'S ADVICE

ROCHESTER, Minn., Dec. 24.—(AP)—Still reticent as to his plans for the future, Knute Rockne of Notre Dame rested on advice of his physician tonight and prepared to celebrate Christmas day quietly with his family.

Mrs. Rockne and their four children, three boys and a girl, arrived here today to spend the holiday with the coach, who is under doctor's orders to "rest." Rockne is not ill: merely tired—almost to the point of exhaustion—and has been ordered to conserve his energy.

Although he declined to answer questions as to whether he would attend the football game Saturday at Los Angeles between Notre Dame Stars and a West-South eleven, he has made no plans for the trip. His physician advised against the journey.

LANNIGAN, U. OF VA. ATHLETIC COACH IS DEAD

UNIVERSITY, Va., Dec. 24.—(AP)—Henry Haden (Pop) Lannigan, grand old man of athletics at the University of Virginia, died here today. He was 65 and for more than a quarter of a century had coached basketball and track at this institution.

Pop Lannigan's last teams were coached in 1929 and since his retirement in June of that year he had been in poor health much of the time.

EDDIE LOOS AGAIN LEADS QUALIFYING FIELD

AGUA CALIENTE, Mexico, Dec. 24.—(AP)—With a 73, two strokes over par, again the low mark of the day, Eddie Loos, veteran professional of Chicago and Pasadena, led the field in the qualifying round of the second annual Agua Caliente $25,000 open golf championship tournament here today.

Loos had a total of 144 for the 36 holes, his opening round Tuesday being 71, even par.

Right behind Loos came Dewey Longworth, Oakland, with 146. He had rounds of 72 and 74. Fred Morrison, unattached professional of Los Angeles, was third with 76-73—149.

Four professionals divided the honor of the best round today, with 73. Besides Loos and Morrison were Tom Rakletts, Akron, Ohio, and Bill Foley, young professional of the Coronado Country club.

Fifty-one professionals and five amateurs out of the field of 95 which teed off in the qualifying round Tuesday came within the charmed circle and will be allowed to compete in the Agua Caliente open over the Border course Jan. 13, 14, 15 and 16.

A score 165 or better was needed to qualify. Fifty places were open for professionals and this was increased to 51, to take in the ties at 165.

Most of the favorites among the professionals came through in the qualifying round. Some who fell by the wayside were Sam Gayer, Chicago; Hayden Newton, Springfield; Al Collins, Kansas City; Frank Fogarty, Kirkwood, Mo.; Jim Costello, Downey, Calif., and George Martin, El Centro, Calif.

The high wind which sent scores skyrocketing the opening day of the qualifying round was absent today but still the money brigade in the main did not negotiate the course in much lower figures than the day previous.

The New London outfit scored no points in the first and last quarters, only one point in the third quarter while eight of their total was scored in the second quarter. Horwitz, local star left forward, featured for Colchester with 11 points. The two teams were poorly matched, the Colchester boys showing marked superiority in basket-shooting. The summary:

VANCE RELUCTANT ABOUT SIGNING BROOKLYN CONTRACT

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., Dec. 24—(AP)—Dazzy Vance, ace of the Brooklyn Robins' hurling staff, reported upon his arrival in Florida today he had failed to sign the contract offered him by the Brooklyn club.

Vance intimated, however, his conference with President Frank York in Brooklyn was a friendly one and that neither of them anticipated any trouble in reaching agreement in the spring.

BASEBALL FOOTBALL BASKETBALL BOXING

MERRY CHRISTMAS!

ALABAMA HAS TWO STIFF PRACTICE SESSIONS

PASADENA, Cal., Dec. 24.—(AP)—Alabama's football team may reign favorites to defeat Washington State in the New Year's day game here, but it received no favoritism from its coach, Wallace Wade, today.

The Crimson Tide mentor put his men through two hours of fundamentals at Tournament park. Not satisfied, he collected them together again this afternoon and meted out two more hours of practice at Patterson field.

The morning workout was even more surprising than the one instituted last night a few minutes after the southerners left their train. Freddie Sington, giant lineman, John "Flash" Suther, halfback, and John "Hurry" Cain, fullback, were the sources of greatest interest to those who watched the afternoon drill.

The surprising speed of Sington led to opinions by onlookers that if the rest of the line can function, as they expect this tackle guard to, the Cougars will be in for a long afternoon.

Coach Orin "Babe" Hollingbery was taking care of that problem at Tournament park this afternoon when he settled down to a serious session with his line while assistants took care of the backs.

Christmas will be only another day to both teams. Regular workouts are booked for the afternoon. Each aggregation will have its festivities with lighted trees and gifts and probably a show afterward.

LINEUPS FOR NORTH AND SOUTH CHARITY GAME

NEW YORK, Dec. 24.—(AP)—Starting lineups for the North and South in their charity football game at Ebbets field Sunday were named today.

The tentative lineups:

North	South
Flanagan, le	le, Brandt
Pitt	Tennessee
Dornoff, lt	lt, Spear
Marquette	Georgia Tech
Morelli, lg	lg, Bodenger
Boston College	Tulane
Stickles, c	c, Tassapoulos
St. Lawrence	Georgia
Obst, rg	rg, Church
Syracuse	Oglethorpe
Tully, rt	rt, Fulton
Pitt	Oglethorpe
Kaplan, re	re, Holland
Penn State	Tulane
French, qb	qb, Davidson
Penn State	Georgia
Antos, lhb	lhb, Bethea
Boston College	Florida
Hanson, rhb	rhb, Magner
Temple	North Carolina
Karcis, fb	fb, Hackman
Carnegie Tech	Tennessee

Jack McBride, coach of the North, is well satisfied with the work of French, Antos, Hanson and Karcis in the backfield. This quartet is working smoothly despite the short time it has had for practice. McBride has been shooting all his offensive moves out of the Warner double wing-back formation.

The southerners in all probability will have the best passing combination on the field in Hackman and Magner.

Dreams Come True

Just a short time ago, Grace P. Christ, 15, of Los Angeles, was wondering whether or not her mother, Mrs. Maude B. Christ, would be able to continue sending her to high school, with the money derived from taking in boarders. Those worries are over now for they have been willed $300,000 by Mrs. Christ's aunt, Mrs. Rosetta Baker, wealthy San Francisco widow, who was mysteriously murdered recently.

PLAINFIELD PROS AND HAWKE'S GLOBE TROTTERS CLASH TONIGHT

The feature basketball attraction this evening will be staged at the Plainfield Community house when the Plainfield Pros clash with Johnny Hawkes' Globe Trotters. This game should be one of the fastest yet played at the Community house this season. Besides being a fast attraction there is more or less of the unique about the game as Johnny Hawkes, who plays one of the forward positions is possessed of only one arm.

Faced with the possibility of going through life without ever competing in any of the more strenuous sports, Hawkes started early to try out basketball. He found that he was able to handle a ball pretty well and he set out to perfect himself in this sport. Keeping everlastingly at it Hawkes today stands as one of the greatest basketball players on the court and is the world's greatest one handed player. His uncanny eye for baskets has made him an outstanding scorer against teams of national repute. In an exhibition in New York city only a short time ago Hawkes shot 23 consecutive baskets from the foul line. He plays as hard and as fast as the two-handed boys, passes and shoots with this lone hand from all points of the court.

Besides Hawkes there is a brilliant array of basketball talent on his club which should give the Pros a mighty hard fight for the game. Manager Salisbury will put his regulars in the field with the expectation of winning, but not by any such one-sided score as last week. His lineup will be Marchinak, Kasper, Conway, Williams and Dissinger.

For the preliminary the Plainfield Buddies will clash with the Putnam team that gave Danielson such a drubbing in the S. N. E. league on Tuesday evening. Dancing follows the games.

EAST-WEST TEAMS NAME THEIR STARTING LINEUPS

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 24.—(AP)—Football stars who will compete in the annual East-West charity game here Saturday rushed through intensive workouts today while coaches announced probable starting lineups.

The westerners, coached by Percy Locey of the San Francisco Olympic club and Dana X. Bible of Nebraska, practiced mainly on a passing attack. The aerial game will be their chief offense because of an eight-pound weight advantage to the man held by the easterners.

At Stanford university, where the eastern squad is working out, Coaches Andy Kerr and Dick Hanley continued to concentrate on the Warner system of play, one of wing back formations.

A pair of guards, Ted Beckett of California and Barton Koch of Baylor university, were named yesterday as co-captains for the west. The eastern team will not name a leader until Friday.

The lineup:

East	West
Baker, le	le, McKallip
Northwestern	Oregon State
Ely, lt	lt, Christensen
Iowa	Oregon
Doyle, lg	lg, Heckett
Colgate	California
Siano, c	c, Atkins

Why don't you join our Christmas Club, too?

Daddy's Christmas Club check made this a real Christmas for the kiddies

Members of the Christmas Club declare that the weekly payments are so small they don't mind them at all. And at Christmas time, when there comes a fat Christmas Club check—enough to buy presents for everyone—they are surprised that they actually have so much.

Isn't it a wonderful plan?

If you didn't receive a check this year, join our Christmas Club now, and be among the lucky ones next holiday time.

GREENEVILLE

Month's mind masses of requiem offered at St. Mary's Memorial church this week were the following: On Monday morning at 7:30, for the late Mrs. Michael Coscoran and on Tuesday morning at 7 o'clock for the soul of Miss Susan V. Monahan. Both masses were offered by the pastor, Rev. George J. Donahue. Relatives and family friends were present at the services. The music was in charge of the organist, Mrs. Michael J. Farrell.

The Do One Another club met with Mr. and Mrs. Philip Marian on Convent avenue Friday evening for their weekly whist party, four tables of whist being in play. The prizes were won as follows: Ladies' first, Mrs. Aubrey; gents' first, George Gauthier; ladies' consolation, Miss Borden; gents' consolation, Louie Heller.

The president of the club, Doc. Allen, gave a three minute talk on the Christmas spirit that should prevail at this time of the year.

The president was grieved to inform the club that plans for the straw ride would have to be abandoned owing to unforseen circumstances.

The club quartette, consisting of first tenor, Joseph Tighe; second tenor, Dave Shahan; baritone, Hugh MacDonald; bass, Allan MacDonald, were then heard in well rendered numbers. In keeping with the Christmas spirit the quartette went to the different houses and sing Christmas carols under the windows Christmas eve.

Mr. Heller then entertained the guests with his skill in whistling, imitating the different calls of birds.

George Gauthier and Henry Cloutier were then heard in a delightful duet, "When the Organ Played at Twilight". The party broke up at a late hour, thanking Mr. and Mrs. Marian for a most delightful evening.

Maurice Goldblatt, a student at William and Mary college, is spending the Christmas recess at the home of his parents Mr. and Mrs. David Goldblatt on Central avenue.

Christmas Masses

The masses for Christmas day will be offered at 6, 7, 8, 9 and 10 o'clock at St. Mary's Memorial church.

William Bielecki of Fordham university, is spending the holiday at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bielecki on Prospect street.

The snowstorm was appreciated by the youths of this section. Many of them without a doubt will be trying out their new sleds on the hills in the vicinity today.

The homes that have been decorated for the holiday seasons were improved by nature's work. The trees that were placed on the outside of the homes were covered with snow and when the electric lights were lighted they were a very pretty sight.

A section of Greeneville was cut off Wednesday evening from the use of the power for nearly an hour. The business men in this section had to rely on the old fashioned oil lamps and candles which made it very difficult for their trade.

CREW OF ENGINE NO. 3 HAD NARROW ESCAPE

While responding to a call for a chimney fire at the residence of John Sauter, No. 473 Asylum street, at 11:50 o'clock Wednesday morning, Engine No. 3, of the Joseph Perkins road station, skidded into a fence near the old fire station on Sherman street and narrowly escaped plunging down the embankment, a drop of 25 feet. Slight damage was done to the fence and one of the front fenders on the engine was bent. The chimney fire was extinguished without damage resulting.

CHIEF H. R. TAFT ISSUES WARNING AGAINST HOLIDAY FIRE HAZARDS

Fire Chief Henry R. Taft Wednesday evening issued a warning against the use of Christmas decorations which burn readily and requests every resident and merchant to exercise exceptional care regarding the hazard of fire, since many homes are saddened and much suffering is caused during the holiday season.

The following are a few of the suggestions which everyone should heed, said the chief:

Fasten the tree securely, not only to a substantial base, but near the top, and keep it away fom heatirng devices. It should be taken down before it becomes so dry it is a fire menace. If set in water it will remain green longer and be less combustible.

Care should be observed with smoking materials in the room where the tree and wrapped gifts are located.

Try to avoid a crowded condition of furniture, gifts, toys and people in one room.

Do not use candles, or ornaments of paper, celluloid or other combustible materials.

If electric lights are used all connections should be soldered and properly insulated. Never pull electric light plugs from the socket by the cord.

Do not let children meddle with lights or ornaments.

Do not give toys which require the use of alcohol, naptha, kerosene or gasoline to heat or to operate.

The power for all lighted decorations should be disconnected when leaving the house or upon retiring. Hearth fires should also be thoroughly extinguished.

Store owners are requested to take special precautions during the holiday season by removing all fire hazards, thereby preventing possible injury or loss of life by fire.

Materials in stores which ignite readily should be collected every few hours and never placed near exits.

The employment of special guards to direct people and keep aisles and exits as clear as possible will prevent unnecessary crowding and facilitate clearing the premises quickly and in an orderly manner in case of emergency.

Intelligent preparation will reduce the fire danger to a minimum during the holiday season. Every business man and every resident is requested to cooperate.

ELEVEN YEAR OLD BOY KILLED WHILE SLIDING

Jason Henry Kingsley, 11, son of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Kingsley of Franklin, was almost instantly killed at 11 o'clock Wednesday morning in a coasting accident near his home. The sled which bore him was struck by an automobile operated by John Kahn, 20, also of Franklin, on the Crocker Hill road between Lebanon and Yantic. Kahn was arrested on a technical charge of manslaughter and is held under bonds of $2,500 for his appearance in the Franklin court.

In company with a younger brother the Kingsley boy was sliding in a lot near the highway. It was learned by Coroner Edward G. McKay, who made an investigation together with Dr. C. C. Gildersleeve, medical examiner, and Deputy Sheriff George H. Hoxie. The boy slid through a barway in the lot out into the highway and was not noticed by Kahn until his machine was within 10 feet of him, it is said. When the driver applied his brakes the machine skidded on the slippery highway and the right front wheel struck the boy and sled. It is believed that the wheel ran over the boy.

While being rushed to the W. W. Backus hospital by Mr. Kahn the boy died from a fractured skull, according to Medical Examiner Dr. Gildersleeve, who viewed the body at the hospital and gave Hourigan Bros., local undertakers, permission to remove the body. It is understood that Kingsley's brother, who was standing at the top of the grade on which they were sliding, shouted a warning to his brother of the approaching machine. Apparently he did not hear his brother or he was unable to stop the sled.

Besides his parents he is survived by four brothers and sisters, Wesley, Kingsbury, Lorraine and May. He would have been 12 years old in January.

Attorney Telley E. Babcock played the role of Santa Claus Wednesday at the court house and the editorial rooms of the Bulletin-Record, distributing delicious jars of honey. TAFTVILLE

The annual Christmas tree entertainment of the Taftville Congregational church school was held Tuesday evening in the church auditorium, with a full attendance of the scholars, their parents and friends. The edifice had been attractively decorated in holiday greens, and there was a gaily decorated Christmas tree from which later in the evening gifts and candy were distributed by Santa Claus who paid his annual visit.

The program was divided into two parts, one consisting of recitations and music by the pupils, and the other into a colorful pageant of The Nativity. The program follows: Recitation, A Little Child's Life, Doris Weller; song, The Clean Up, Margaret Emerson, Bertha Kendall and Doris Weller; recitation, Particular, Shirley Seidel; song, The Watches, beginners and primary departments.

In the religious pageant, Helen Troeger had the role of the Blessed Virgin Mary, Joseph was portrayed by Leonard Pingree, and the angels were Maisie Krodel, Liberty Johnson, Evelyn Moors and Ena Scott. Those who played the parts of shepherds were William Enos, Eugene Nafie and Arthur Stitcht. The three kings were Kenneth Troeger, Howard Troeger and George Simino.

The music was under the direction of Miss Nellie S. Howie, the church organist and chorister, and those who sang were the Misses Charlotte Pilling, Marjorie McNally, Phyllis Airey, Hazel Larochelle, Dorothy Simino, Elberta Mather, Marjorie Troeger, and Ruth Grimshaw. The committee which had the impressive service in charge included Miss Eleanor Heinrich, Miss Mary Greenhalgh, Miss Hilda Troeger, Miss Mildred Troeger, Mrs. Richard Oat, Miss Elizabeth Houston and Miss Gladys Thoma.

The creche, or crib of Bethlehem has been put in place at Sacred Heart church.

Mrs. Richard M. Oat entertained the members of the 50-50 club recently at a Christmas party. Supper was served amid holiday decorations, and gifts were exchanged from an attractively decorated tree.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Gley and daughter Miss Hazel Gley of Mystic are holiday guests of Mrs. Gley's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Meyer and family of Blissville.

EGGS REACH LOWEST PRICE IN 11 YEARS

Today eggs are lower in price than they have been during any December in the past 11 years. The state department of agriculture points out that if records prior to 1919 were available the present low price may be a record over a period of 20 years or more.

The present wholesale price of eggs is 25 cents a dozen below the quotations for a year ago at this time. The average wholesale price of Connecticut Newlaid Fancy Eggs for the first three weeks of the current month was 52 cents a dozen while the same grade averaged $1 a dozen for the whole month of December, 1920.

S. McLean Buckingham, state commissioner of agriculture, discounted the theory that the 48 per cent. decline in the price of eggs during the past ten years was following the decline of other commodities and is directly accounted for by the present business depression. Commissioner Buckingham stated that the montly averages during the past ten years clearly indicate that the present low price is the result of united work on the part of Connecticut poultrymen to make the production of eggs more uniform throughout the year. The price charts show that the low summer prices are being elevated each year and the high winter prices are being lowered without materially affecting the yearly average price. Such a condition, it is believed, should greatly encourage the use of strictly fresh native eggs throughout the whole year.

Eggs have long been known as a disease preventive, especially at this time of the year when the sun's rays are weak. They are now cheaper in actual food value than many of the major foods and the department, in urging Connecticut women to include more fresh eggs in the daily meals, points out that it is easily possible to secure a guaranteed product which has passed state inspection. Over three hundred reliable retailers are handling such a product, neatly packed in cartons, sealed with the New England Quality Label.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Little Joe Otter's Christmas Fun

Since first the Great World was begun
There's always been the need of fun.
—Little Joe Otter.

Little Joe Otter believes in the value of play and lives up to his belief. There is nothing lazy about Little Joe Otter. No, sir, there is nothing lazy about him. He is a great traveler and a good provider for his family, but at the same time he likes to play and always finds time for a little fun.

It was Christmas morning. Little Joe didn't know that it was Christmas, for the little people of the green forest and the green meadows know nothing of Christmas. All Little Joe knew was that for some unknown reason he felt in the very best of spirits this fine morning. It was bright and cold. In the air were good cheer and happiness. He felt it in every breath he drew.

"Dee dee, chick-a-dee!" cried Tommy Tit, swinging from the tip of a birch twig above him. "It's a fine day, Little Joe Otter."

"It is so," replied Little Joe. "I hope you are feeling as happy as you look."

"I am," replied Tommy Tit. "I don't know why, but I feel as if everybody must be happy and joyous today. Blacky the Crow sounds as if he feels the same way. I guess it is in the air."

It was true. Blacky was cawing off in the distance, and, though his voice was just as harsh as ever, there was in it something that suggested that Blacky was feeling in the best of spirits. "It must be in the air," declared Little Joe. I feel like having some fun. Is there any open water down the Laughing brook, Tommy Tit? I have been on a long journey, far from these parts, and haven't been back long enough to find out how things are."

"Dee, dee, chick-a-dee!" cried Tommy Tit

Tommy Tit's eyes twinkled. "I know what you want," he cried. "You want to go sliding. Of course, there is some open water in the Laughing brook. There always is over by the big spring half way to the Smiling pool, and the bank there on one side is just as steep as it used to be."

Little Joe chuckled. "Thank you, Tommy," said he. "You have guessed it. There is no better fun than sliding. I think I will go over there and make me a slippery slide."

Away went Little Joe, making a queer track through the snow. You see, his legs are very short and when he bounded along he made a print of the full length of his long body and the mark of his tail besides. Tommy Tit flew after him. He wanted to see the fun if he couldn't share in it. When Little Joe reached the open water he wasted no time. Right to the top of the bank at the steepest place he went, stretched himself flat on his stomach with his front legs folded back along his sides to be out of the way, gave a mighty kick with his hind feet and away he went down the bank toward the cold-looking water. He didn't go very fast, for the snow was somewhat soft and he had to push it out of the way. When he reached the water he slid into it and disappeared. In spite of his own warm coat Tommy Tit shivered. He couldn't help it.

"Isn't that water dreadfully cold?" cried Tommy Tit as Little Joe's head popped out.

"It isn't cold at all," replied Little Joe as he climbed out and hurried around up the bank to the place where he had kicked off before. That was true so far as little Joe was concerned; that water didn't seem cold to him. He kicked off again and down he went once more, this time a little faster than before, because there was less snow to push out of the way. There was some water clinging to his coat, just enough to wet the snow a little, and this Jack Frost at once froze. The third time down the slippery side was still faster.

By the time Little Joe had been down half a dozen times the snow had become packed and icy and he would go down fast. This was great fun and it wasn't long before Sammy Jay and Blacky the Crow had joined Tommy Tit to look on. Chatterer the Red Squirrel was hidden in a tree where he could watch. Jumper the Hare peeped out from under a little hemlock tree. Billy Mink popped out from under the ice and watched, but refused Little Joe's invitation to try the slide. Lightfoot the Deer was present. Reddy Fox pretended that he had come that way by mere chance and wasn't interested. However, it was noticed that he remained where he could watch and that on his face was a broad grin.

So it was that Little Joe Otter had fun on Christmas day, and all his friends and neighbors joined in it, for though they couldn't themselves slide it was fun to see him go down the slippery slide. So every one had a Merry Christmas and I wish you the same.

BOZRAH MAN SUES FOR DAMAGES OF $11,000

Damages of $11,00 and on accounting are asked by Simon Ullian of Bozrah in a superior court suit he has brought against Nathan Gilman. The complaint alleges that on or about Sept. 20, 1929, Ullian and Gilman entered into an agreement in writing, whereby Ullian agreed to enter into the employ of Mr. Gilman as general manager of the Gilman factory at Bozrahville, whereby it was agreed that Ullian should have a drawing account of $50 a week, and at the expiration of his term of service should receive in addition one-half of the profits of the business. Ullian agreed to lend and did lend to Mr. Gilman the sum of $5,000 to be used in the business and for the benefit of the business, and which Mr. Gilman agreed to repay to Ullian on the termination of the agreement of employment.

It is alleged that the books of the business have been hudited under the direction of Mr. Gilman up to Sept. 20, 1930, but that Mr. Gilman has refused to permit the books to be audited fo rthe period between Sept. 20, 1930 and Nov. 22, 1930. The profits of the business exceed the sum of $8,000, it is alleged.

Ullian claims that Gilman has not paid him the amount of his drawing account, and there remains due $1,200. It is also alleged that Mr. Gilman has not paid any part of the profits of the business to Ullian nor has he repaid any part of the $5,000 loan, although payment of the same has been demanded.

50,000 "DRY" PRISONERS IN FEDERAL AND STATE JAILS

Figures Given Out by the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment in a Statistical Attack Upon the Prohibition Law—Places Cost of Adequate Enforcement at $100,000,000 a Year—Asserts That the Enormous Profits From the Illicit Liquor Trade Strengthens the Grip of Criminal Gangs in Communities Throughout the Country

WASHINGTON, Dec. 25—(AP)—An estimate that 50,000 prohibition prisoners now inhabit federal and state jails and the contention that federal court congestions "is due solely to national prohibition," were made today by the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment.

In a statistical attack upon the dry law, the association issued a pamphlet asserting it would cost $100,000,000 a year to enforce prohibition adequately, assuming that jury trials could be abolished in such cases. Otherwise, it contended, the cost would rise to $350,000,000, with an additional $20,000,000 added for the coast guard and customs service.

"All persons who have studied the problem" the association said, "agree that the enormous profits from the illicit liquor trade are now used to finance the underworld and to strengthen the grip of criminal gangs in communities throughout the country."

Citing a statement made last year by President Hoover that only a small part of the number of felonies "can be attributed to the eighteenth amendment," John C. Gebhart, the association's research director, asserted this was "an example of misinformation," since 88 per cent of the prohibition violators sentenced in federal courts are misdemeanants and not felons.

"The effect of liquor law violations, both federal and state," the association concluded, "can not be measured by the number sent to federal and state prisons and penitentiaries—only a small proportion of those convicted are given felony sentences.

"Civil cases to which the United States is a party have increased 347 per cent since 1920, but if we exclude prohibition actions the increase is only 117 per cent.

"Federal courts and the personnel of the attorney general's department have never been increased sufficiently to take care of the 70,000 prohibition cases which the courts must handle each year."

The pamphlet also contained figures designed to show that if there had been no prisoners for violations of the Volstead act there would have been no increase in the number of federal prisoners since 1920. It was contended that last year "16,783 persons convicted of violating the prohibition law were boarde dout in state and county jails, to add to the already overcrowded conditions of these local institutions."

TO RUN IN OPPOSITION TO MAYOR THOMPSON, CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Dec. 25.—(AP)—Municipal Judge John H. Lyle, nemesis to gangsters, tonight announced himself a candidate for the republican nomination for mayor in opposition to William "Big Bill" Thompson.

While the crusading jurist declined to state what backing his campaign would have, it was generally conceded that he would make a bid for support by the factions opposed to Thompson.

Thompson has broken openly with Bernard W. Snow, county committee chairman, and the county leaders who supported Ruth Hanna McCormick, in the senatorial contest.

Judge Lyle, in a formal statement, said he was running because he considered the mayoralty "the one spot in Chicago where all the lines that touch crime and racketeering converge."

He denounced the "ruthless, arrogant, unchecked reign of terror carried on by criminal gangsters and "racketeers."

FOUR PRISONERS ESCAPE AFTER BEATING TURNKEY

SANDWICH, Ont., Dec. 25.—(AP)—Four prisoners in the Essex county jail here escaped today after beating a turnkey and securing his keys.

Those who escaped were: Amos Findlay, 25, who police said has a long crime record in Canada and the United States; Norman Teetzel, 20, and Tony Becker, 23, both of Brantford, held on robbery armed charges, and Willard Melliss, Monroe, Mich., charged with conspiracy to abduct.

Turnkey George Meloche, 53, left alone while other jail employes went home for Christmas, unlocked Findlay's cell to give the prisoner a mop and pail. Findlay pounced upon him, inflicting not serious injuries.

The four fugitives had not been apprehended late today but were believed hiding in Windsor.

MYSTERIOUS LIGHT OVER IDAHO ENDED IN CRASH

LEWISTON, Idaho, Dec. 25.—(AP)—A mysterious light that flashed earthward across the northern Idaho skies last night and ended in a terrific crash was being investigated today, the prevailing belief being that it was a meteor.

No fragments were found but this was explained by the known fact that many meteors in their rush through the earth's atmosphere are dissipated by friction.

The phenomenon appeared about 6.15 p. m., and lasted but a few seconds. Its crash, heard for miles, was described by some as "like an earthquake." Children, awaiting Santa Claus, were particularly impressed by the display.

SANTA CLAUS MAKES MISTAKE AT WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON, Dec. 25.—(AP)—Santa Claus made a poor first impression on Herbert Hoover III today.

"You must have meant that for my sister," said young Robert, politely, but coldly.

"You are right," said Santa, his voice faintly resembling that of Lawrence Richey, one of the president's secretaries. Thereupon Herbert was given a railway train and his ideas of Santa Claus' judgment began improving.

DOUBT CONFESSION OF ROBBERY AND KILLING

NEW HAVEN, Dec. 25.—(AP)—West Haven police tonight were dubious of the truth of the story of Edward Slattery, local youth who surrendered early today claiming to be the bandit who killed one man and wounded another, escaping with a $4,000 payroll yesterday.

Joseph Ordazzo, 54, gate tender and watchman at the American Mills company was almost instantly killed yesterday by a bandit who approached and, without warning, opened fire as Ordazzo stepped out of the car in which he and Charles A. Kern, Jr., 45, chief clerk at the factory, had brought the payroll from the bank. Kern, shot twice as he sat behind the wheel of the car, was tonight still in a critical condition in New Haven hospital.

Slattery, it is reported, was intoxicated as he walked into New Haven police headquarters early today. He told officers that he had thrown the bag containing the money over the wall of a cemetery in the vicinity of the factory before fleeing the scene.

Checking on his story today, police could find no trace of the bag at the location in which he said he had thrown it.

The boy, Thomas Tracy, of the Bronx, was found helpless in a downtown subway station. Mrs. Mary Brennan, 30, was found downtown suffering from acute alcoholism.

Some died in the Bronx, some in Brooklyn and some in Long Island. The lower East Side as usual bore the brunt of the casualties. Five victims were unidentified.

YOUTHS BOUND PRIESTS IN PERPETRATING $2,000 ROBBERY

CHICAGO, Dec. 25.—(AP)—Pretending to be Christmas callers, two youths invaded the rectory of St. Adalbert's Catholic church tonight, bound three priests and forced a fourth to give them $2,000 taken in offerings at services today and Sunday.

After taking the money, they ordered Rev. C. I. Gronkowski, the pastor, to sit down, gave him a cigar, lit it for him, and said:

"Now, stay here a few minutes until we're gone."

The priest said he was chatting with two priests from neighboring parishes and Rev. Joseph Bieda, a Jesuit missionary from Toledo, O., when the front doorbell rang. The maid ushered in the men, both of whom were well dressed.

Both of them pulled out pistols as they entered the living room, and said:

"Where's the money?"

"In that safe, there," Father Gronkowski said, pointing to a corner.

"No, it's not all in there," he quoted one man as replying. "Show me where the rest is."

After tying the three other priests and forcing them to lie on the floor, one of the robbers stood guard while the other followed Father Gronkowski to his office, where the money was locked in a vault. A pistol at his back, the priest twirled the combination and opened the depository, handing the money to the man.

He called police five minutes after the pair had left.

Sen. Robinson For Five Day Work Week

To Meet the Growth of Substitution of Machinery For Hand Labor

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Dec. 25.—(AP)—The five-day week for labor may be the solution to the increasing substitution of machinery for hand labor, United States Senator Joe T. Robinson, senate democratic leader, believes.

In a statement upon his return home during the holiday recess of congress, Senator Robinson said today unemployment "seems to be increasing rather than diminishing" and "the substitution of machinery for hand labor is revolutionizing working conditions and throwing millions out of employment."

"Many circumstances," he continued, "indicate that mere temporary measures will be insufficient, although of course, they must first be considered.

"To restore the equilibrium between the labor supply and the demand for laborers, the industries of the United States may find it necessary to resort to the five-day week. Manifestly it is difficult for this to be brought about during an economic crisis like the present."

Senator Robinson said the establishment of reserves for unemployment has been proposed, but this could be made available only after the lapse of a considerable period, and "like the five-day proposal, is of permanent rather than temporary character."

The minority leader saw merit in long term advances to municipalities and states to enable them to carry on necessary public works and asserted these may provide substantial relief.

"There are some signs of general business improvements, but the recovery cannot be quickly made," he added.

CHRISTMAS IN SOVIET RUSSIA A DRAB AFFAIR

MOSCOW, Dec. 25.—(AP)—Christmas day dawned in soviet Russia with the meagerest activity to reflect the celebration in the Christian world outside.

There was not a Christmas tree to be found, even among the Christians, who usually celebrate moderately. There were said to be no Christmas trees available because the authorities do not permit the promiscuous cutting of pines and evergreens.

At the Church of the Redeemer in Moscow, one of the greatest edifices left standing in Russia by the communist anti-religious campaign, some 400 worshipers of the "Living Church" observed the day, most of them aged men and women.

In various other parts of the country similar churches held services, the government making no motion to interfere. In the same cities extra features were added in the theatres and music halls.

Few if any young people attended the scanty services in the churches, most of the youth never having heard of Christmas.

The Men Were Trapped in Lodging House at Whiting, Ind., at Daw[illegible]esterday

Another man, Nick Slemick, blackened and burned, was given up for dead but was revived by pulmotors and though still unconscious late today was reported by hospital attaches as "still breathing."

All of the victims were employes of Whiting Oil refineries.

The fire broke out as the eight lodgers in the second floor apartments of the building sat together about the festive board. Bottles stood before them. A phonograph in the corner scratched out gay tunes.

In the house next door Francis Cronar, just returned from midnight mass, noticed the little group, and then, smelling smoke, saw flames rise against the rear of the adjoining building. Rushing to the street, he gave the alarm.

Meanwhile the men in the room apparently had become aware of the danger and had made a dash for the rickety stairs. Egress had been cut offf by the flames, however, and the onrushing blast of smoke and fire caught the group in a small areaway.

Only Loorinovich had strength to return to the chamber and hurl himself through a window. The bodies of the others were found in a huddle.

In a ground floor room where the fire apparently had its origin, the body of a small watchdog was found. Its paws and nose were flattened against a smoke blackened window pane.

Cause of the fire was not determined.

WOULD REFORM ORGANIZATIONS OF AMERICAN UNIVERSITIES

NEW YORK, Dec. 25.—(AP)—A reform in the organizations of American universities to avoid some evils of industrialized education is urged in a report of Professor Yandell Henderson, retiring chairman of the Yale chapter, American Association of University Presidents.

"There ought not to be two parties; there should be only one party: namely, a fellowship of professors of which the administration would be the executive committee," Professor Yandell says.

SENATOR NORRIS IS INVITED TO HELP FORM THIRD PARTY

Invitation Extended by Dr. John Dewey, Chairman of the League For Independent Political Action—Dr. Dewey Writes Norris "That You and Other Insurgent Republicans Are Not Wanted in the Republican Party"

NEW YORK, Dec. 25—(AP)—An invitation to Senator George Norris of Nebraska to "severe forever" his connection with the republican party and help form a third party was extended today by Dr. John Dewey, chairman of the League for Independent Political Action.

"The recent attack upon you x x by Robert H. Lucas, executive director of the republican national committee, clearly shows that x x x you and other insurgent republicans are not wanted in the G. O. P. by those that control the machine," Dr. Dewey said in his letter.

Dr. Dewey was formerly professor of philosophy at Columbia university. The league he heads seeks to form a new party.

He declared the republican party stands for "rugged" individualism while Norris stands for "social planning and social control" and places human rights above property rights.

"These are antagonistic philosophies," he wrote "The republican party is a house divided against itself." He added the democratic party stands for the same principles. A new party formed of liberal groups "could win the presidency by 1940," he declared.

TWO SMALL BOYS RESCUED FROM NATURAL TAR PIT

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 25.— (AP) —Trapped for hours in a natural tar pit in the Baldwin hills, southwest of Los Angeles, two small boys were saved early today from suffocation when the searchlight of a passing electric railway train disclosed their heads and shoulders protruding from the blackness.

The two boys, Buster and Jackie Lowe, 5, and 3-year-old sons of John Lowe, had been presented with a tricycle for Christmas. They ran off the south end of Hauser boulevard into the pit yesterday just as dusk was falling.

Shortly before midnight Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Boyd, heard faint cries. They looked around them but could see nothing. As they were on the verge of continuing on their way home, an electric train rounded a curve, its big headlight flashing over the pits. Two terror-stricken faces were bathed in light for only an instant but Boyd and his wife saw them.

Buster and Jackie were dragged from the pit and taken to a hospital.

Recovering from their shock quickly, the two boys were home again today continuing their Christmas celebrations—keeping well away from the south end of Hauser boulevard.

THREE JAIL BREAKERS ARE STILL AT LIBERTY

EAST VIEW, N. Y., Dec. 25.—(AP)—An expert jail-breaker and three companions he led to freedom through sawed bars at East View penitentiary were still at liberty today, 24 hours after their escape.

They had successfully foiled a man-hunt which started a few minutes after their escape and scoured most of the territory for miles around.

The ringleader, Charles Sirico, 26, New York, now has a record of four escapes. Arrested ten times for offenses including burglary and robbery, he fled twice previously from East View and once from the jail at Goshen. The others are Peter Reynolds, of Yonkers; Ames Clark, of Newark, N. J., and William Rapp, formerly of Linden, N. J. All were serving short terms.

Taking advantage of preparations for Christmas festivities, they cut the bars of an unoccupied office, apparently with smuggled saw. When their disappearance was noticed, authorities followed their footprints in the snow. They led northerly four miles, but eventually the trail was lost.

At one time during the day more than 10,000 workers stood in line at the Wittenberg home.

NARROW ESCAPE FOR SOUTH WINDSOR MOTORIST

HARTFORD, Dec. 25.—(AP)—Richard Collins, 45, of South Windsor, early this morning drove his car through the gates at a railroad crossing here, turned to his right and drove between two pairs of tracks for a distance of 200 feet. A Boston bound train, coming in the opposite direction, struck the car, throwing it to the side of the tracks.

Collins, taken to the hospital and examined, was found to have only a slight cut over one eye and a bruised side.

FUGITIVE SPANISH AVIATORS ARE TO SAIL FOR ANTWERP

LISBON, Portugal, Dec. 25.—(AP)—Major Ramon Franco and other fugitive Spanish aviators have decided to sail for Antwerp as soon as they receive remittances from their families in Spain. They will travel on a Belgian steamer which does not call at Spanish ports.

Major Franco and his comrades fled to Portugal after participating in the recent abortive revolution in Madrid.

CRAZED NEGRO SLASHES TWO MEN WITH A RAZOR

CHICAGO, Dec. 25.—(AP)—A crazed Negro ran amuck near the Dearborn street station tonight, slashed two men, probably fatally, with a razor, then chopped at two pedestrians on the corner of State and Harrison streets. He escaped before police arrived.

Dozens of men and women, some of them out-of-town visitors, scattered as the Negro rushed toward them brandishing the flashing razor.

As he swung at John Mish, 46, and Frank Dejohn, 31, he cried, "You ain't never goin' tell the police; you can't tell them." Both men were taken to the County hospital, where doctors said the wounds are expected to prove fatal.

The Negro ran on toward the crowded intersection of State and Harrison streets. He struck at Roy Sells, 46, inflicting neck wounds, then swung around and cut Otto Sinkbeiner, 45, lacerating his back. Both were treated and sent home.

Special police details were called out in an effort to apprehend the man.

TWO MEN KILLED AND TWO WOUNDED IN GUN BATTLE

WILLIAMSBURG, Ky., Dec. 25.—(AP)—Two men were killed and two wounded in a gun battle at a Christmas party this afternoon at Kidd Schoolhouse on Marsh Creek, in the mountains of McCreary county.

The dead are Frank Amblin, 45, and Clarence Lovett, 22.

Those wounded were Golden Lovett, who was shot in the neck, and his son, Lester Lovett, wounded in the leg. Clarence Lovett, who was killed, was Golden Lovett's nephew. The two wounded men were brought to a physician's office here where their wounds were treated. Their condition is not serious.

Men who brought the wounded here and were witnesses to the shooting were vague as to the cause of the trouble. They said Clarence Lovett first shot and killed Hamblin, and accused Hamblin's son, Ernest, of killing his father's assailant. After these shooting the firing became general, they said, and accused Herman Hamblin, another son of the slain men, of shooting and wounding Golden and Lester Lovett.

THREE BANDITS TIED UP VICTIM IN NEW HAVEN

NEW HAVEN, Dec. 25—(AP)—Three bandits today tied up Michael Cretella, 42, proprietor of a meat market here, with his own apron, searched his pockets, and escaped with $167.

Cretella was sitting down to his Christmas dinner when a man entered the store and asked for his best cigars. Cretella presented the box. Then the customer demanded his "dough."

At that moment two other men entered the store. As the first man put his hand in his pocket as though gripping a gun, the other two stepped behind the proprietor and seized his hands. He was stripped of his apron and tied to his electric refrigerator. Then the bandits searched his pockets finding the large roll of bills.

The man who had first entered, he said, fled through a rear window, while the other two escaped by a side door. Cretella managed to free himself from his bonds and notify police.

PREFERENCES OF OFFICIALS IN AUTO LICENSE NUMBERS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 25.— (AP) —Distribution of 1931 District of Columbia automobile licenses has disclosed the preferences and superstitions of a number of those high in official life.

Vice-President Curtis was again assigned "111," which he has had ever since his inauguration, and which he feels is symbolic of his victory in the 1928 election. Mrs. Dolly Gann, his sister and official hostess, will have "11."

Representative Tilson of Connecticut, republican leader of the house obtained "Y-91," because he graduated from Yale in '91.

Representative Williams, democrat Texas, insisted upon the lucky number "711" and Speaker Longworth got "66." Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth the speaker's wife, was assigned "34."

According to custom, the numbers from "100" to "110" were assigned to President Hoover.

CHRISTMAS SPIRIT VERY EVIDENT IN WILLIMANTIC

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Dec. 25.—Christmas day, coming as a refreshing pause in the mental and physical sufferings of the depression period, was enjoyed with a fullness today, the employed benefiting from the fruits of a steady income and the needy gaining new cheer from an altruistic spirit that reached new heights this year. Careful surveys by various organizations and individuals tended to establish this Christmas as one that would find provisions plentiful in every needy home and there was every indication that this combined work had been well done.

Church services brought out large attendances in all denominations. At a Christmas eve service commencing at 11 o'clock in St. Paul's Episcopal church the Protestants of this vicinity gathered in a union service of impressive nature. The sermon was delivered by Rev. T. Hawthorne Jones of Mansfield Center and the rector, Rev. F. C. Williams, officiated at the service. At the Ebenezer Lutheran church a midnight service was held with a sermon by the pastor, Rev. E. Einar Kron, and anthems in the Swedish and English languages. Season's greetings and special messages of renewed faith were conveyed to the congregations at the Christmas day masses in St. Mary's and St. Joseph's churches.

While holiday gatherings of families and friends held the interest of the majority during the day, numbers sought forms of amusement and recreation in the evening. The theatres were well attended and there was a big holiday crowd at the Christmas eve and Christmas night dances at the Al-Pierre Tabarin. The day being a perfect one, hundreds of kiddies and not a few adults had a great time coasting on the three streets designated for the purpose and furnished with police protection. All forms of business activity were suspended for the day.

Silk Co. Gives Dance

The Willimantic Silk, Inc., entertained about 300 of its employes at a Christmas party and dance in the town hall Christmas eve with Max Stein of New York city, president of the concern, as guest of honor. There was dancing, entertainment, refreshments and the distribution of gifts. The committee having charge consisted of: Louis Constant, chairman; Miss Olga Pelechatz, Mrs. Eva Finbacher, Miss Ernestine Delude, Miss Anna E. Dudick, Oliver Voyer, William Watrous, Miss Ida Kaplan, John Peltier, Mrs. Eva Walsh, Miss Bessie Brettschneider, Jacob Finkelstein and Walter Langworthy.

V. F. W. Host to 500 Kiddies

Santa Claus, acting on behalf of Gold Star post, No. 1724, Veterans of Foreign Wars, gave out some 500 well-filled stockings at the first annual Christmas children's party given by the post in V. F. W. hall Wednesday afternoon. In addition to the stocking, each child received a toy. Victor Brunelle represented Santa Claus and general arrangements were in charge of a committee of which Tom Clyde Overholt was chairman. The veterans visited the homes of needy veterans during the day, leaving generous supplies of clothing and other useful articles.

The names of students at Windham high school, Stafford high school and the local state trade school, who are former pupils of the Willington town schools and who share in the Gardiner Hall, Jr., scholarship fund awards, have been announced. The awards are based on the attainment of an average of 80 per cent or better during the first school year at the respective schools. Students at Windham high school included in the list are: Geraldine Novotny, Fred Tomasko, Esther Davis, Frances Stross, Raymond Bruce, Barbara Amidon, Sylvia Cushman, Antoinette DeCicco, Sarah Methews, Henry Borovicka, Richard Taylor, John Carpenter, William Parizek, Elsie Amidon, Shirley Cushman, Jessie Davis, Mary E. Hueston, Eva Marco and Marjorie Royce. Those attending the Willimantic State Trade school are: George Pelikan, Martin Navratil, George Mathews, Sylvio DeCicco and Raymond Korner. The Stafford high school has one such pupil, Fred Fermier.

A sedan owned by the Willimantic police department and operated by Officer Roderick Lariviere, Jr., was damaged in a skidding accident near Sherman's corners in Chaplin late Wednesday forenoon. Officer Lariviere was returning from the county jail at Brooklyn where he had transferred two men sentenced from the local court. He had passed a snowplow truck when the sedan struck an icy spot in the highway and skidded out of control, striking the state fence on the right side of the road. One fence railing punctured the radiator and another damaged the left front fender and dented the body. Witnesses to the accident stated that but for the fact that the machine was being driven at a very low rate of speed at the time it would have gone through the fence and down an embankment.

To date ten tradesmen have enrolled in the teachers' training class at the Willimantic State Trade school but accommodations can be provided for about six more, according to Director Otto R. Nyffeler. The course is planned to fit a mechanic for a position on the faculty of any trade school in the state.

The appointment of George Elwin Whitford, son of George E. Whitford, Sr., of Grove street, this city, as apprentice chief petty officer and honor man of the 11th company, Apprentice brigade, at the U. S. Naval Training station, Newport, R. I., is announced. Upon the expiration of a 14-day furlough the young man will report at Newport for transfer to the Naval Training station at Hampton Roads, Va., for a course of instruction in the machinist mate's school. He enlisted at New Haven last October.

Norbert Mongeau, a brother-in-law of N. P. Loiselle and Mrs. Solomon Belanger, Sr., of this city died at his home in Central Falls, R. I., early Wednesday morning. Mr. Loiselle and Mrs. Belanger are to attend the funeral, leaving for Central Falls Friday.

Cook has been named chairman of the Ladies' night committee with Stephen Young and George F. Robinson as assistants.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Pare of Providence, R. I., were Christmas guests at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Hevrin.

MALDEN MAN ARRESTED ON EMBEZZLEMENT CHARGE

(Special to the Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Dec. 25.—William T. Maloney, 26, former collecting agent for the Business Men's Credit company of Danielson, was arrested here about 4 o'clock this afternoon by Deputy Sheriff Ernest A. Holland of this city, on behalf of the Danielson state police, who held a warrant for him on a charge of embezzlement. Maloney is a resident of Malden, Mass., and was apprehended here during a short stop on a return trip from Manchester. Maloney was subsequently turned over to the custody of State Policeman Mayo and will be presented in the Putnam court Friday morning at 9 o'clock. Maloney is a bridegroom of two months.

COLCHESTER

Walter B. Lombard of Hartford, former local resident visited over Christmas with his brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. John M. Riley.

Miss Harriet Howland, student at the Academy of the Holy Family, Baltic, is spending the vacation period with her parents, Dr. and Mrs. Edward J. Howland.

Firebug Suspected

State police from Groton barracks have been here the past few days investigating the cause of the fires on the evenings of December 20 and 21 which resulted in considerable damage to the Kalmanowitz house and the 6-chimney tenement house on Lebanon avenue. The two fires occurred within twenty-four hours of each other and were in the same neighborhood. If it had not been for the hard work of the firemen, aided by a plentiful, nearby supply of water, the several adjacent houses and business blocks would have been in grave danger. Borough residents are wondering if a fire-bug is operating in this vicinity. During the past year, several dairy barns in the outlying districts have been destroyed by fire of mysterious origin.

Miss Florence I. Dawley is visiting for several days with her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Kelly in Meriden.

Mrs. H. Herbert Tompkins, student at the Hartford School of Religious Education, was at her home on South Main street over Christmas.

Loot Poultry House

No trace has been found of the thieves who maliciously stole seventy pedigreed Rhode Island Red pullets from the poultry houses on the Roman Szablewski farm on the Parum road, December 15. On December 18, a band of thieves was scared away from the poultry houses on the Pehowda farm in the same neighborhood, making their escape before any clue to their identity could be obtained.

Miss Margaret F. Bunyan of Evanston, Ill., is visiting over the holidays with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward T. Bunyan.

Mr and Mrs. Albert T. Van Cleve returned Wednesday from attending the funeral services in Binghamton, N. Y., of Mrs. Van Cleve's mother, Mrs. Clark Z. Otis.

CHAPLIN

Surveyors have been through the center surveying for the setting of electric light poles. The work of setting the poles is looked for soon.

Christmas Entertainment

A good number attended the Christmas entertainment Monday evening at the Christian Mission chapel, South Chaplin, given by the Sunday school. A talking tableau, "When the Christ Child Passed Through", was well presented with appropriate selections of songs during the act. At the close of the entertainment the presents on two Christmas trees were distributed to the children and others. Refreshments and a social time followed the enjoyable Christmas gathering.

The two local schools closed Wednesday afternoon for ten days' vacation over the holidays. Each school presented a Christmas program before closing.

Rev Paul B. Sanger delivered a special inspiring Christmas sermon Sunday, taking for his text a few words found in Luke 2:7. "There was no room for them in the inn."

Mrs. Paul B. Sanger, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Lanphear, Orrin F. Wilson and C. Cletus Bradford, the shut-ins, appreciated the Christmas carols sung by Miss Florence I. Hunt and her Sunday school class under the windows at their homes Monday evening.

A community Christmas tree and entertainment will be given at the Congregational church Friday evening. A play, "Why the Chimes Ring", will be given, also special Christmas songs, under the direction of Morgan R. St. John of Willimantic.

XMAS MAIL RUSH SHOWS NEED OF NEW POST OFFICE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, Dec. 25.—One of the strange things about a Christmas in a supposedly bad business year is as to why postal activities here should break all records of the past, not merely break them, but actually shatter them. One would be inviting something akin to assassination by asking for statistical figures today about the amount of business transacted here since last Monday in Uncle Sam's post office, and one would almost deserve it, for the boys were a tired lot and entitled not to be bothered and left to enjoy their holiday. However, when Postmaster E. H. Keech is asked all about it this Friday morning he will have a story to tell about more money taken in than ever before, as to a striking increase in pieces of mail matter sent out and received and some comment having to do with the need of Danielson having much more adequate post office facilities than it possesses. If it is of any interest to the readers of this column, it may be mentioned that the postal business overflowed the office this week, and that the spacious floor of the adjoining town hall was more or less covered with parcel post matter and mound upon mound of mail sacks. Danielson needs a new post office—wants it tomorrow—by parcel post, if that can be arranged.

OBITUARY.

Augustus Higgins.

This Christmas morning at the home at the corner of Cottage and Furnace streets the death of Augustus Higgins occurred. He had been in failing health for some weeks and seriously ill for the past fortnight. He was in his 78th year, and was numbered among the very few people still claiming residence in this town who had lived in Danielson for close onto three score years and ten.

Mr. Higgins was born in Cleveland, Ohio, a son of Patrick and Ann Burke Higgins, and came here with his parents as a child. For many years he was in the employ of the Quinebaug company, as a spinner, and no one of his contemporaries has a better record of faithful service and efficiency than Mr. Higgins. He was of the old school, a man who turned in in labor something more than he took out for compensation, and rejoiced in so doing. Frank and outspoken, he said what he had to say, but was a judiciously minded man always, and a lover of his fellowman.

Mr. Higgins had been retired from active work for several years past, he and his sister making their home at the corner of Cottage and Furnace streets. He leaves a daughter, Mrs. Pearl Kennedy, a registered nurse, of Providence, and his sister, Ellen. The body is at L. E. Kennedy's Funeral home.

Katz Insists He Is Innocent.

Max Katz, held at the county jail in Brooklyn under bonds of $500, while awaiting presentation in the superior court at Putnam the coming week, to answer to a charge of fraud, may be the most innocent person in the world, but how the inquiries are pouring into the state barracks here from just about everywhere in this corner of the state in an effort to establish whether or not Katz is the boy that has gyped plenty of people! Katz was spending this holiday at the jail in Brooklyn because a woman over in Putnam was just a bit dissatisfied over the manner in which she lost an antique table for the time being. It so happens that it has been returned to her—from Worcester, by the way. Katz says he is innocent of any wrong doing, and no one knows better than he whether he is right or not, but much more about the whole matter will be aired in the superior court this week.

Industrial Outlook Bright.

This town, industrially, has small reason for complaint as to how general business has been during 1930, a year of blight for the country as a whole. Killingly has had its bumps, its weak spots, its things to be doleful about, but it has been a mighty good town, after all.

The town's people have gone along during a period of stress without undergoing a great many hardships—that is all of the town's people; a comparatively small number of them have had their difficulties.

Bad as 1930 has been for the country as a while, it has not been too terrible for this town—and that wonderfully promising year of 1931 is just ahead.

A scramble will be enacted during the next week as automobile owners who have neglected getting car registrations for the coming year go into action. Lordy, Floyd Gibbons, with all his speech can't talk half as fast as these boys and girls are going to act when they realize they have been neglecting something of an essential, or is it? in failing to get busy before this time about what has become, for a great many persons, a regular chore. All right, if you can't take the car out New Year's day because of no 1931 registration—there's a perfectly good excuse for remaining in repose, or asleep, or something.

There was no great crowd standing in the snow at Davis park last night about the brilliantly lighted tree that the members of Leo J. L'Homme post, of the American Legion, had set up, but the assemblage was adequate and there was much to claim the attention of those who came. The nice little party was much along the same lines as for several years past, and having said this, not much more remains to be said.

Mrs. Edward Hatch, of the staff of the Windham County National bank here, is a patient at St. Francis' hospital in Hartford, entering Christmas eve.

Mr. and Mrs. Michael Comiskey and Miss Nellie Sullivan, all of Hartford, were Christmas guests of Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Kennedy.

A foot of snow and from 2 to 5 below zero in Danielson this Christmas morning. Cold enough for Madame Queen when she is trying to collect a fur coat.

Many hundreds of members of the parish attended the services at St. James' church this morning, when, at all the masses, special sermons and special Christmas music was the rule.

Only a mighty bad boy could get arrested in Danielson this Christmas day. The police had little to worry about, and wanted nothing to worry about—the era of peace on earth and good will to men.

If anyone is interested in the matter, and the assumption may be that not too many are—it's mighty good sleighing, but watch out that a bus or a truck does not run you down while the old nags are puffing along.

Mr. and Mrs. George Simmons and son, Richard, were guests of relatives in Willimantic today.

This was a sleepy old town today, more or less so because the town was thoroughly sleepless last night. And one can't blame too many people for that. Getting rested up for New Year's now. Oh, oh!

DANIELSON PEOPLE UNITE IN BRINGING CHEER TO UNFORTUNATES

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, Dec. 25.—Probably no area in the state, at least it is pleasant to assume this on a Christmas day, was more considerate of its charges than was this particular section on this holiday. It fed its erstwhile wards, it kept them warm and it tried to do its bit for those among us who have been more or less unfortunate than some of the rest of us.

There were 19 inmates at the Killingly town farm near Dayville today. In that comfortable, steam-heated home this company of friends, men and women, sat down to an honest-to-goodness holiday dinner. They ate turkey—30 pounds of it—the gift of the Ladies' Aid society of the Dayville Congregational church. They had all the other good things, usually summarized as "fixin's," that go with such feasts in the average home, and plenty of them.

Having established through the years a record of thoughtful and efficient service as superintendent and matron of the town farm, Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Bassett did their utmost today to make all those at the farm enjoy themselves very much after the same manner as the inmates might have enjoyed themselves back around their old-time firesides. Last night there was a Christmas tree—gifts for every one.

Putnam lodge of Elks, with many members in Danielson and other parts of the town of Killingly, were as generous as usual with their gifts. Likewise, the Dayville Catholic Women's Welfare council. There were handkerchiefs and aprons in the gift list, and ice cream for everyone. Tonight at the farm a special holiday supper was served.

Deputy Jailer Walter Tripp, and his assistants at the county jail in Brooklyn, saw to it today that none of those at the institution forgot that this was one of the greatest holidays of the year in this country. Anyone invited to sit about the bountiful board that was set over there would have very little to worry about, as to getting enough to eat. Consider a menu that included roast beef, and about all the ordinary vegetables one associates with a good dinner, and various nice little things that give the big feast an edge. This was carefully and generously served within an institution as warm as toast, and made very cheerful, in keeping with the spirit of the season. There was no particular reason to be mournful today about anyone spending the period at the county jail. Deputy Jailer Tripp, Mrs. Tripp and all of those who are charged with making things click over there are to be commended for making Christmas a real holiday.

Gilbert, Mrs. George H. Prior and the teachers of the several classes.

At The Congregational Church

The Christmas party at the Congregational church included a miniature pageant in which the giving of gifts to the needy and the meaning of the Christmas tree, holly wreaths, tinsel, candles and bells was explained. Paganism was represented by Virginia Goodenough dressed in black robe and veil, who viewed the Christmas festivities, especially the exchange of gifts, with disfavor, according to the scroll from which she read. Lucille Tomlinson in a white robe, reading from an open Bible, represented Christianity, and introduced Christmas Spirit. She was represented by Janet Wilcox in a white robe, carrying a silver star wand which she questioned as to the meaning of the Christmas emblems. A woman of need, represented by Loretta Alley, entered, asking to be remembered with gifts. Christianity then called upon each class in the Sunday school to follow the spirit of Christmas, and lay their white gifts at her feet. Need gave her thanks in the verse Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these ye have done it unto Me, and Paganism was convinced of the real spirit of Christmas. Members of the kindergarten class, led by Helen Gouda, carried the tree, tinsel, candles and wreaths to the platform, Miss Goodenough's class gave a bell exercise, and Mrs. Earl Robinson's class, a gift exercise, during the pageant. Previous to the pageant the opening exercise of responsive reading telling the story of Christmas was led by Earl Robinson's class of boys. God So Loved the World was given by Junior Webster, as an Indian; Harold Tomlinson, an Eskimo; Corinne Zegeer, a Turkish girl; David Goodenough, an African; Beatrice Dominique, a Chinese girl, and Bernice McNicol, a Japanese girl, and Mary Gertrude Howe, Berylis Philbrook, Paula and Evelyn Link as American children. Recitations were given by Jayne Ricketts, Shirley Peterson and Gordon Willis, Jr., and the kindergarten class sang with Ruth Mae Benjamin as soloist. The Little Heralds were Barbara Payne, Ruth Mae Benjamin, Agnes Broadfoot and Mertice Randall and Bernice McNicol. Lynwood Mills made a fine Santa Claus as he came down the tower stairs ringing old fashioned sleigh bells, stamping the snow from his boots and shouting to his reindeer. After the distribution of gifts the white gifts were carried to homes all over the town by Margery Webster, Leah Gill, Arlene Symington and Ralph Goodenough. Fifty four children were remembered in this way. Mrs. F. S. Robinson and Mrs. E. H. Hiscox arranged the program, Mrs. Walter Benjamin was accompanist.

Mt. Vernon lodge will open at 1:15 Saturday for funeral of Antoine Maynard. Walter L. Benjamin, master.—adv.

Mr. and Mrs. F. D. Ballou entertained on Christmas day Mr. and Mrs David Ballou, Miss Caroline Ballou, Miss Mary Manton of Providence, Mr. and Mrs. A. H. N. Vaughn and Mrs. Clara Crawford of Norwich, also their daughter, Ruth, who is at home from Brockton for the holidays.

PUTNAM

PUTNAM INSTITUTIONS HAVE ANNUAL XMAS OBSERVANCES

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Dec. 25—That mysterious something that wreaths all the world in joy and gladness at Christmas time surged forth today to commonly prevail throughout the community at large which has been awaiting the glorious event for weeks. Wednesday night proved to be a Christmas eve in which the spirit of the occasion reigned supreme in every corner and nook of the city. Many hours after stores had closed and trains and motor coaches had rounded out their schedules for the day, homes everywhere radiated the joy that prevailed within. Christmas eve gatherings were commonplaces. Those whose positions necessitated that they be at their posts of duty during the hours of Christmas eve and during the day, overcame the sentimental feeling with impromptu social periods which they wove in during the course of their duties.

In line with the teachings born on that starlit night 1930 years ago, the fruits of gladsome spirit proceeded along the path of charity and goodwill here as throughout the country. While those whose fate has brought them a plentitude of the material things of life were enjoying the day, the mobilized forces of charity as well as individuals, were still busy at noon today spreading the spirit of Christmas to those of the less fortunate class. Few are the youngsters tonight whose humble dreams of Santa Claus were dispelled, for charity has seen to it that they were cared for. And at the public institutions of the town, efforts of the able and thoughtful had brightened darkened outlooks of inmates with toy and trinket, food and clothing and all else associated with the joyous occasion.

At the Children's Home

It was a happy and delighted lot of light-hearted kiddies that tripped off to bed last night at the Windham county home in Sawyer district, when Supt. Provandi ordered lights out at 9:30 o'clock, following the close of Christmas tree festivities that have become an annual affair at the county institution. Thanks to the kindness and consideration of community organizations coupled with the noble contributions of charitable individuals, the day was the biggest of the year in the lives of members of the Sawyer district family. At three o'clock Wednesday, the young and old alike filed into the assembly room of the home where an old fashioned Christmas programme of recitations, carol singing and story-telling was given under the direction of the Thompson League of Women Voters. Miss Gertrude Chandler of Woodstock, held the spirit of the young group with a series of delightful Christmas tales that won the approval of every attentive listener. After the evening meal the group reassembled in the reception hall for their annual Christmas tree party. Through the interest of the student body at the exclusive Howe-Marot school for girls in Thompson, the Putnam council of Catholic Women, Baptist church societies of Danielson and this city and the Putnam lodge of Elks, there were assortments of gifts for every boy and girl. Again this noon a specialyl prepared chicken dinner served to bring additional gladness to inmates.

Mrs. Murray "Haven" Benefactor

Over in Abington, shut-in members of the "Haven" family were treated to a turkey dinner provided by Mrs. T. Morris Murray of "Gwen Careg Farm" and Boston. On Christmas eve, the 23 members of the family who were able to participate in the celebration, gathered in the sun room of the home for the annual Christmas tree party. The room was appropriately decorated and in one corner was a large tree, the branches of which were laden with gifts and remembrances for all. Many received personal packages from relatives and friends.

Christmas at Town Farm

The spirit of Christmas was ushered into the Putnam town farm this morning and was enjoyed by the 23 aged inmates, who hailed it with all the delight of children. Gift packages of candy and smokes, articles of clothing and parcels of dainty food were sent by the Putnam council of Catholic Women, the Methodist and Baptist churches of Putnam, Rev. U. O. Bellerose, pastor of St. Mary's church, and by Representative Leon A. Talbot of South Main street. Mrs. Leroy Paine of Church street, was the donor of a giant box of sweets that were distributed among the old people at the after breakfast tree party this morning, which was arranged by Supt. and Mrs. Langelier.

Through the courtesy of the Putnam lodge of Elks, each inmate was presented with a Christmas basket, containing articles of use which they had requested of the relief committee charged with the lodge's charity work.

Merry Christmas at Hospital

Until a late hour this afternoon Christmas day at the Day Kimball hospital had been a merry one in the full sense of the word, according to Miss Falkins, assistant superintendent, who said that nothing had occurred to mar the joy that clothed the entire institution. A turkey dinner was served at noon to all patients well enough to partake of it and during the afternoon hours a programme of Christmas music furnished through phonograph recordings occupied the attention of the house.

Nashville Man Found Unconscious

Frank Bleke, 25, of Nashville, Tennessee, was taken to the Day Kimball hospital early yesterday morning in an unconscious condition after being found lying beside the highway on the Boston road. The man whose identity was not uncovered until he regained consciousness at 9:30 o'clock this morning, was picked up by a driver of a Shore Line express truck en route to New London. He was taken to the police station and examined by Dr. P. E. Tetreault, town physician, who ordered his removal to the hospital. After collecting his senses, Bleke informed hospital officials that he had made his way from Canada to Connecticut and was attempting to reach his home in the south when he was seized with exhaustion caused from cold and exposure. Police said a purse of $90 which was found in pockets of his clothes, was returned to him upon his discharge from the hospital this afternoon.

Mrs. T. Morris Murray, who has been at her winter home in Boston, since late summer has returned to spend a few days at her beautiful country place at "Gwen Careg" in Abington.

Mr. and Mrs. J. V. Howe of New London, have removed to Abington, where Mr. Howe is employed at the "Haven" home.

George Alvord of Pomfret, spent Christmas with his son Eugene Alvord and family of Walnut street.

Captain of Police A. J. Dubreuil returned to duty this morning after a two day leave of absence.

Reports from the bureaus of public safety,—local police and fire departments and state police station at Danielson—received late this afternoon, were to the effect that the holiday was exceedingly quiet much to the satisfaction of all concerned. Nary an arrest was made during the day and only one automobile accident and that fortunately, of no consequence, had occurred up until late this afternoon. The gongs at the central fire station remained silent throughout the morning and afternoon hours, as the firemen joined others in the community in observance of Christmas.

Miss Alice Perry of Willimantic normal school and Franklin Perry of Amherst colege, are spending the holiday recess with their mother, Mrs. Edith Perry of Grove street.

Coroner Arthur G. Bill of Danielson, will return no official finding in the investigation of the accidental death of Dr. Frederic G. Goodridge of Abington, who was killed on December 17th, by a bullet from his own rifle, superior court officials said Wednesday.

At the close of business Wednesday evening, members of the mailing staff at the local post office were still plodding their way through an avalanche of Christmas mail which poured into the office during the last minute rush. Every effort was made to clear the room of every parcel and letter last night, but so great was the volume of business, clerks were unable to achieve their goal. However, the postman will be up and at it early Friday morning delivering the contents of belated sacks.

It is universally conceded that fast men are slow pay.

UNION

Monday, Dec. 22, was one of "those calm mild days" that the New England poet, Bryant, so delightfully described so many years ago—only he was writing of November and Indian Summer. Those not poetically minded called Monday a "weather-breeder." Certainly it was a delightful day to enjoy in the open fields and woods. Traffic on the state road was brisk. Also, there were numerous planes passing over the route between New York and Boston.

Chopping Contest.

Monday was the fortunate choice for a chopping contest and woodlot inspection trip. In the morning, under the leadership of County Agent E. E. Tucker and Extension Forester J. A. Gibbs, a group of local men, accompanied by two guests from Windsor, made their first inspection on Nelson Horton's farm, at Union Center. Fairman Howard showed pine and hardwood thinning cuttings in another section and the chopping contest was held. The prize—a new axe — was captured by Harold Gilbronson of Mashapaug. A basket lunch with hot coffee was enjoyed in the forest, and the group moved on to inspect other sections of the Quinebaug Forestry holding. The last woodlot visited was at the extreme north end of the town, on the right of the road from Mashapaug to Holland, and owned by Victor Kaleta. The chopping contest was a preliminary try-out for the three-county chopping contest, to be held in January, in the town of Columbia. Peter McLaren, world champion chopper, is to attend the Columbia contest.

The schools held Christmas exercises with trees Wednesday evening, Dec. 17, at the Red school and Thursday evening, Dec. 18, at the Rock Meadow school. Many visitors were in attendance to enjoy the excellent programs. The schools closed Friday, Dec. 19, for the holiday vacation, to end January 5.

Christmas Celebration.

A very enjoyable celebration of Christmas was held at the church at Union Center, Saturday evening, Dec. 20. The weather was ideal and the attendance was very good—a large number of children being present. The pastor, Rev. Arthur H. Stainback, was able to be present before leaving to spend Christmas at his Virginia home.

Miss Helen Hutchins and Miss Mary Daly, teacher of Red and Rock Meadow schools, respectively, led in carrying out their school programs, which were repeated at the church. The plays, songs and recitations given by the children of Union, and supplemented by two recitations from North Ashford pupils, were greatly enjoyed. Rev. A. H. Stainback and Rev. H. M. Lawson made addresses and helped in the musical part of the program, in which many joined. Miss Daley used her violin in accompanying her pupils' songs. Miss Hutchins had trimmed the tree, which was much admired, and helped in very many other ways, to make the celebration a real success.

Tuesday morning, Dec. 23, the ground and trees were white with snow, which was coming from the northeast. By noon the ground was covered to a depth of about ten inches. Early in the morning, the sweet notes of those bluebirds (mentioned in the Union letter a few weeks ago) were heard. It was hoped that the little friends had departed for the south before this snow arrived, but they were still lingering around the bird houses on the 22nd.

BROOKLYN

The meeting of Brooklyn grange was held Tuesday evening. Worthy Master Theodore N. Anderson, presiding. After the business session, the social hour was in charge of the literary committee, Susie G. Williams, Judge O. F. Atwood and Myra J. Frink. This committee arranged the Christmas program. Singing of Christmas carols opened the program. A vocal solo by Mrs Clara Marlor, was another pleasing feature. A piano duet by Helen L. Witter and Myra J. Frink, was the third number. Two short but very excellent papers were presented, one by Mrs. C. G. Lawton, subject, "Good Will Towards Men," a very fine Christmas paper. Another equally fine and interesting, written and read by Mrs. F. W. Page, was of a different type, "Christmas In Other Lands," showing that we have something to learn from our foreign cousins. A monologue followed this. Then each was given a slip of paper and an amusing contest followed, after much pleasant discussion this resulted in F. W. Page being the prize winner. Sandwiches and coffee served by the committee brought the meeting to a close.

Mr. and Mrs. George Witter have gone to Mystic for the winter months.

Mrs. J. H. Hargraves and family entertained over the week end Miss Kathryn Hammond of Gloucester, Mass.

Mrs. A. S. Field spent the week end with her husband, Lieut. A. S. Field, in Ridgefield, Conn. This week Mrs. Field has all her children home for the holidays, Miss Elizabeth Field from the Mowe Marot school, Thompson, and Albert and Robert Field, from Kent, Conn.

Mr. and Mrs. Sidney W. Bard have as holiday guests their daughter, Miss Elizabeth Bard, of Providence, and Philip Hyatt, of New Haven.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Magoon are entertaining Mr. Magoon's mother, Mrs. Annie Magoon, of Providence.

Miss Susan La Gendre, of Cambridge, Mass., is spending the holidays with Mr and Mrs. W. H G. Herkslots.

Much sympathy has been expressed for Mrs. Kenneth G. Stetson, whose father, Mr. Cornell, of Plainfield, passed away Monday. Mr. and Mrs. Stetson were in Central Village Wednesday attending the funeral services.

Miss Ruth Johnson is spending the holiday recess at her home in Southboro, Mass.

SUGGESTED LEGISLATION

In a few weeks the Connecticut legislature will be in session for the purpose of providing such new legislation as the period since the last session has brought to attention. Through the various departments matters calling for action are being presented to the governor and among them the state forester includes legislation which has been recommended by a forest fire council which was called last spring after the state had experienced some of the worst woodland fires for several years.

It was the view of this council that Connecticut should have a law to place fire patrolling on the same basis as fire fighting; a law authorizing the governor to close the woods in dangerous periods to all except the landowners and their agents; a law authorizing the state forester to serve criminal process the same as grand jurors or constables; a law penalizing the throwing of lighted matches, cigarettes and the like into dry grass, dead leaves and other inflammable material, and increased appropriation for the purchase of fire-fighting equipment.

Last spring was unusual, upsetting completely the encouragement which had been obtained from the two previous years, but there is reason for believing that the situation is not hopeless when the forester reports the results secured on the protected areas of the state. Pointing out that during the previous two years the 90,000 acres of private forests in the state had only 160 acres burned and that patrolmen in these areas made 61 arrests, issued 118 warnings, discovered 30 fires and extinguished 17 without assistance, he shows what might be expected if such protection could be thrown about a greater part of the woodland of the state where so many destructive fires occur.

While it is evident that many of the fires are preventable, and that the carelessness which prevails in the majority of instances should be eliminated and thus become one of the most effective measures of prevention, it is evident, as it must have been to the forest fire council, that different tactics need to be employed in dealing with conditions which result in destruction of valuable property and threaten farm buildings and occasionally humanity. Those who go into the woods and those who drive through wooded areas are responsible for much of the suggested legislation, which is entitled to careful consideration.

STICKING TO POLICIES

While it will have to be admitted that there have been certain situations which have been quite unfortunate in their development, there is little justification for declaring Secretary Stimson to be a poor guesser.

It is to be realized that recognition of other governments is not based upon guesswork. The state department doesn't undertake to gamble on which side is going to win in a revolution and throw in its lot with whichever seems the most promising. It doesn't adopt the policy of backing the one that has the best prospects.

It is the policy of the United States to stand by a constitutional government and a government which displays a friendly attitude toward the United States. It does not lend its encouragement to revolutionists just because it thinks they may win. It tries as much as it can to discourage such a method of changing governments. Thus it is unfair to claim that Secretary Stimson guessed wrong because the Luis government in Brazil was furnished munitions during the recent revolution and an embargo placed on war equipment for the forces opposing the government. Secretary Stimson didn't act as he did because he guessed the Brazilian government would win. It was because it was the established policy of this government to act that way under such circumstances.

The same is true of the situation in Guatemala. We recognized the Palma government which was regularly instituted. It was soon afterwards overthrown but it is not our policy to recognize a Central American government which comes into being through a coup d'etat and the Orellana government will fail of recognition. It wasn't a bad guess by the state department. Our purpose was to give support to a regularly constituted government and it was given. We are not going to do the same for the unconstitutional government and if the Central American countries stand by their treaty they will not recognize it.

Standing by a fixed policy of the government can hardly be regarded as bad guesswork. It is not a hit or miss course that has been followed in either of these instances but one based upon established practice. Our action did not prevent the overthrows, but we lived up to what we consider to be the right attitude under those conditions, regardless of the outcome.

ILLICIT DRUG TRAFFIC

Whether the illegal traffic in narcotics was believed to be as bad as has been revealed by a special commission in Massachusetts is a question, but there is evidence that it was looked upon as demanding additional attention, inasmuch as a special commission was named to make an investigation.

The drug evil is not new. It has long been contributing to human misery and demoralization. Efforts to combat it have gotten none too much encouragement and those who have been willing to fatten their pocketbooks by increasing human wreckage and enslaving those who are unable to resist have found it possible to get plenty of the dope with which to do business. In spite of the laws enacted and the enforcement squads which are kept constantly at work, the smugglers bring much into the country and the dope peddlers ply their trade with persistency and profit. Even though much of the smuggled dope is seized, there are so many avenues and so many opportunities for getting past the vigilance of the narcotic squads that addicts are able to get their supplies and there is plenty more with which to entrap new victims.

Still the situation is such as to require more rather than less effort. The need is to check the trade and the evil. The Massachusetts investigators recommend that there be set up in the department of correction a division of narcotic control which will cooperate with the police forces throughout the state, maintain statistics and conduct experiments with addicts with the idea of accomplishing cures.

When it is realized what deplorable conditions are created by the use of dope and the depravity which results there can be no question but what our neighboring state has definite work cut out for it by the special commission which cannot be wisely ignored.

When it is understood what a part narcotics play among the criminal class it cannot be overlooked that through the fight that is made to check the illegal traffic in drugs there is an opportunity for striking at influences which other states as well as the Bay state have reason to be anxious to clear up. Massachusetts legislators will have a chance to act upon the latest information concerning conditions in their own state.

USING NATION'S NAME

It can be readily appreciated that congress acted wisely when it enacted legislation some time ago prohibiting the use of the name of the country in connection with a private corporation. The purpose of this was to prevent anybody from getting the impression that there was any connection between the government and the concern because of the name.

When the law was passed its prohibitory provision concerned the future. No attempt was made to take away the name from corporations which had already adopted it and built up their business and reputation thereunder. There is, in fact, serious doubt whether concerns which included the name of the country in the names of their corporations before such a law was adopted could now be deprived of it.

However, since a New York banking house has gotten into difficulties, which institution selected its name long before the prohibitory law was adopted, there has developed a movement to have the prohibitory law made retroactive. This would take away the names of old and established companies, successful and responsible corporations, and require them to go over much of the ground they long since covered in getting and keeping their name before the people and the trade.

It doesn't appear that the New York banking house grew and developed solely because of its name. It might have done as well under any other title. No thought would have been given to such a matter now except for the adverse conditions which have developed and the possibility of the name causing wrong impressions among the element whose understanding of such matters is none too clear. The case in question demonstrates the wisdom of prohibiting the use of the name in the future but the constitutionality as well as the justice of making the law retroactive needs very serious consideration.

STATES MORE EFFICIENT

While there is no effort to minimize the desirability of maternity and infancy health work, there is a feeling that it is work which should not be turned over to the federal government but should be and can be successfully directed by the various states. The centralization of efforts, which ought to be taken care of by the states, in Washington has been undertaken by having federal funds offered equivalent to those provided by the states. That is, for each dollar the state would appropriate the federal government would match it, but the administration of the work rested in Washington.

That this does not mean any greater efficiency than can be obtained through state direction is pointed out by opponents of the legislation that is proposed to continue federal control. They declare, on the other hand, that the records are found to be more favorable in states which direct such health work themselves, without any financial aid from the government, than in states where there is federal direction.

When it is pointed out that, during a seven-year period, the infant mortality rate in Illinois dropped 15 points while in the same period there was a decline of but seven points in Indiana, the results in Illinois must be looked upon as much the better. The significance of the comparison lies in the fact that Illinois refused to have anything to do with federal aid while Indiana accepted it. The same was also true in the cases of the District of Columbia and the state of Virginia, the former conducting its own work and showing a decline of 14 points in the baby death rate, while Virginia under federal direction showed a drop of but two points.

These comparisons do not lend encouragement to the federal aid idea but indicate that there is greater benefit to be secured from state-controlled and state-administered maternity and infancy health work. They upset the idea that it is necessary or desirable to run to Washington for every service that ought to rest with the state.

A BLUE HOLIDAY

You hate to fire a chap like Kent. He says nothin, yet you know his castles of dreams have come toppling down about his ears. His lean young face, with its quick, stricken look, kept bobbing between me and my work all afternoon. So much so that Margaret, watching a little impatiently as I struggled into dinner clothes that evening, asked again, "What's the mater, Paul. Don't you want to go to dinner on my birthday?"

"Of course I do," I said, a bit shortly, I guess. "Only I have something on my mind." It hung there, a sort of guilty wish I had given the lad another chance. But he wasn't a good salesman. He just couldn't seem to meet people.

Ever since the days of our engagement, when I had to stall off my laundry bill to buy her flowers, Margaret and I have forgotten other social obligations to dine alone together on her birthday. Only now we make it a point to seek out the most lavish and expensive dining place in Chicago.

"Look, Paul," she said suddenly. "Look at those two—they are alone—and they are having such a good time—by themselves."

I turned. "Good heavens — that's him now," I exclaimed.

"Who? Do you know them?"

"Kent—the chap I fired. Here I was feeling sorry for him because he is out of a job, and he alks into the most expensive dining room in Chicago. I'll bet this dinner could take his whole pay check. No wonder young people today are always just one jump ahead of the rent and radio payments," I snorted.

"What a dear delicious world they live in," breathed Margaret. "And you fired him today. Maybe he had asked the girl to dine and couldn't disappoint her."

"Bunk!" I snapped. "He's been married three years."

The waiter brought our entree. But Margaret could not forget the two across the dining room.

"Paul," she said suddenly. "Let's ask the mto dine with us. Please—they have something we've lost—I—please Paul."

I don't quite know why I conceded. It was not Margaret's request. A queer curiosity to study the mental processes of the young, who will spend their last pay check on dinner at a place like this, I guess.

They looked up in surprise as I approached their table. Kent rose, and as I asked them to become our guests he was at the point, I think, of curt refusal. But Mrs. Kent looked past me, caught Margaret's eye and rose.

"We should love to," and she gave me one of those clear, lovely smiles that seem to come from some luminous inner world, unshadowed.

They were charming young people. Kent, once we had broken down his shy reserve, was an intelligent and interesting talker. And his wife, slipping in and out of the conversation, gave the impression of being always on the verge of lightful exploration as though adventure lurked right around every corner.

He turned from the current things people talk about—books, theaters, our city, to work. And quite suddenly Kent blurted out, with,

"You know, our advertising is all wet," and stopped, remembering suddenly that it wasn't "our" advertising to him any more.

"Go on, tell him, Hugh" encouraged Mrs. Kent gently. And she shot me a quick, entreating, but valiant smile.

"Yes, do," I echoed. "What's all wet about our advertising."

"Oh—I have theories." Kent withdrew.

"Come clean," I laughed.

Kent's eyes met his wife's and with a little, short, embarrassed laugh he crumpled his napkin. "Well, our very best asset is not our product—" he began. He drifted along, speaking at first slowly, then faster, borne along on his own enthusiasm, and as he talked I realised that this lad had caught the spirit of our organization—he had found a story to tell that we had been looking for—and couldn't grasp.

"Write it, Kent," I cried. "Write it, fella, and bring it in to me tomorrow—or next day, but soon."

Mrs. Kent gave me one of her quick, clear smiles. Her foot began tapping the floor to the music. "All right," I smiled back at her. "May I have this dance?"

Out on the floor she drifted into the sway of the music as an autumn leaf drifts into the wind. Suddenly she tipped back her bright head. "You wondered, of course, why we were here—and we no pay checks after today."

"I did," I admitted.

"We always celebrate hard luck," she said. "When Hugh came home and told me about your letting him go we were crushed. He had so hoped to be able to break into advertising. We were just dazed for a minute. Then he said, 'All right, kid, let's "strike up the band."' So we did. And you his chance to tell you about his idea. happened to be here—and Hugh got It always works!"—Exchange.

YOUR HEALTH

Emotional Causes Produce Physical Effects

By Charles E. Kiely, M. D., Cincinnati
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

The doctor many times finds that "nervous indigestion" is really a stomach ulcer or that "heart disease" is merely rapidity of the pulse produced by gambling on the stock market or trying to live beyond one's means.

Just as the patient of today knows his doctor can detect his organic diseases, so he has come to know that this same doctor can recognize that disordered action of organs is not always due to physical damage but to emotional stress or strain.

A man named Pavlow showed that anger makes a dog produce a digestive juice of plainly abnormal character. If any human being has for years been subjected to domestic or business troubles, it is not unreasonable to suppose that chemical changes in his stomach will occur which will impair his digestion.

Everyone knows that fear will cause the blood pressure to rise. Worry, after all, is a small dose of fear taken continuously over a period of time, and so some cases of high blood pressure are found that are due solely to years of poisoning with fear. Infected teeth are not the only agents that can do your blood vessels great harm! Continued anxiety belongs well up on the head of the list.

The thyroid gland, the goitre center, is especially concerned with the fear emotion. Cretins, or persons with defective or absent thyroid, are dull and almost devoid of fear and other emotions. Likewise, persons with too much thyroid suffer particularly from fear. Trifles become magnified and sometimes the sufferer cannot really tell what he is fearing. Many people who go to the doctor complaining of nervous fear, find they are in the early stages of goitre trouble.

The emotions also have effects on the muscles. Hysterics complain of a lump in the throat. The X-ray has shown this to be due to a real spasm of the throat muscles. Everyone has experienced this tightening of the throat at a funeral. The hysteriac really has had his grief in small doses over a period of years.

Tightening of the muscles further down in the digestive tract causes "nervous" constipation, or when emotions produce an opposite effect, you have "nervous" diarrhea. A man who suffered from severe diarrhea for months recovered from the condition in three days when a physician in whom he had confidence succeeded in convincing him he had not contracted tuberculosis from his wife.

So, do not hesitate to see your doctor simply because you think your trouble might not be organic. The physician of today not only finds your inflammations, your ulcers, your hardenings, and your leaks; but he also finds that abnormal action may be due to emotional stress under which you have unwisely placed yourself, or unkind fate has forced upon you. Let it be the physician's task to separate the organic cause from the emotional, and start you out anew.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Stumpy Gets A Warning

Pass on a warning when you may
To help another on his way.
—Jumper the Hare.

Life was so quiet and peaceful under the ice in the Smiling pool that Stumpy, the three-legged son of Jerry Muskrat, gradually forgot that there was anything to fear. He forgot that there were such things as hungry enemies who would be glad of a young muskrat for dinner. He couldn't know that certain folk were hungrier than ever in this cold weather, for the simple reason that they seldom had enough to eat. You see, storms and bitter cold weather made hunting difficult, and among those who ate meat full stomachs were seldom known. Only those who slept all winter or who, like Happy Jack the Gray Squirrel and Chatterer the Red Squirrel and Striped Chipmunk, had stored up food in the days of plenty, knew what it was not to be hungry. The family of Jerry Muskrat should be included with these. While they had not stored much food they had stored some. But they didn't need to store food. They had but to swim out and dig up roots in the bottom of the Smiling pool or a few fresh water clams. And the weather, as you know, made no difference to them.

So, living so quietly and peacefully, Stumpy forgot that there was anything for a young muskrat to fear. It seemed to him that no one in all the great world could be safer. Thus he wasn't prepared for the warning brought him by Jumper the Hare, and even when he had received that warning he didn't take it seriously. He had climbed out on his favorite tussock beside the open water of the Laughing brook just above the Smiling pool. There was an alder swamp there and Jumper used to come down for an occasional visit. He was waiting right near that tussock when Stumpy climbed out.

"Hello, Stumpy!" said Jumper. "I've brought you some news."

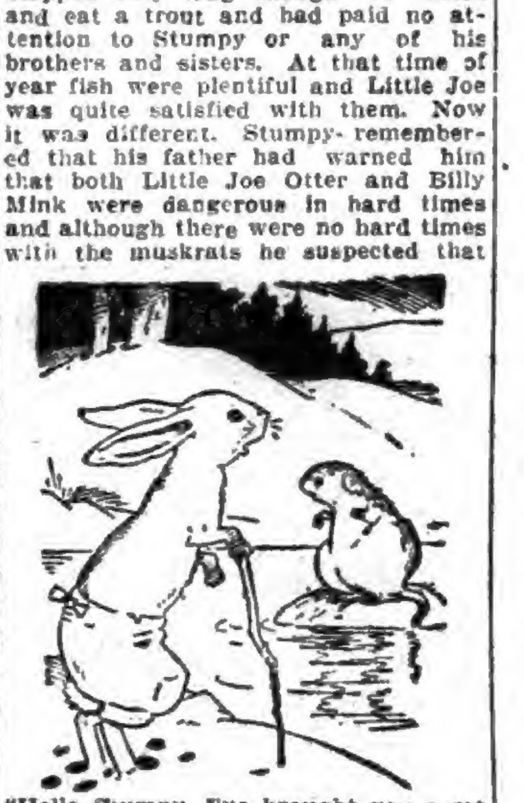
"I hope it is good news," replied Stumpy with a grin.

"That is for you to say," Jumper said. "Who do you think I have seen?"

"I haven't the least idea. Who have you seen?" asked Stumpy.

"Little Joe Otter," replied Jumper.

Stumpy was startled. He had seen Little Joe just once and that was in the late summer when Little Joe had passed through the Smiling pool on his way to the Big river. He had stopped only long enough to catch and eat a trout and had paid no attention to Stumpy or any of his brothers and sisters. At that time of year fish were plentiful and Little Joe was quite satisfied with them. Now it was different. Stumpy remembered that his father had warned him that both Little Joe Otter and Billy Mink were dangerous in hard times and although there were no hard times with the muskrats he suspected that there might be with other folk.



"Hello Stumpy. I've brought you some news!"

"Where did you see him?" asked Stumpy.

"Along the Laughing brook up in the green forest," replied Jumper. "He was playing on his slippery slide at a place where there is a spring and open water such as you have here."

"What is a slippery slide?" inquired Stumpy.

Jumper did his best to explain how Little Joe Otter dearly loves to slide, and for this purpose makes a slippery slide on a steep bank where there is open water at the bottom into which to plunge at the end of the slide.

"Did he swim under the ice?" Stumpy asked.

"I didn't see him do that, but he can. I am told he travels long distances under the ice," replied Jumper.

Stumpy began to look exactly as he felt—uneasy. "In that case," said he, "he could swim under the ice of the Smiling pool right to our house."

"Certainly," replied Jumper. "What is more, he is sure to pay you a visit sooner or later. He will look over every foot of the Laughing brook from the pond of Paddy the Beaver deep in the green forest to the Big river into which the Laughing brook flows. He always does. So take my advice and keep an eye open for him."

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Dec. 25 — Since John Sharpe Williams retired from the senate to meditate among his books in Mississippi, the job of congressional poet laureate has been vacant.

The Mississippian was quite fond of concocting rhymed satires and slipping them into the Congressional Record. He seldom read them, even back in the days when he was Represenative Williams, democratic leader in the house. He would just slip them in under "leave to revise and extend."

Next day you could see house members chuckling in their seats as they glanced over the Record and stumbled upon his barbed witticisms, invariably aimed at the republicans.

Some Blank Verse.

Since then nobody in congress has done much in a poetic way. Sometimes, to be sure, a perfervid burst of political chin-music gets into the Record that has a tinge of blank verse about it.

That does not count. That is just a part of political stock in trade.

About the only man to walk at all in John Sharpe's footsteps is Senator George Norris of Nebraska. Now and then he is moved to express himself in verse, always of the satirical variety.

You get the notion that the Nebraska veteran insurgent within the republican fold finds a lot of amusement at times in measuring out his ideas syllable by syllable and finding happy rhymes to tag the ends of his lines.

If he ever has done that about his thoughts in relation to what he invariably terms the power trust, the Bystander would like to see the result. It is a safe bet only blank verse could serve his turn for that, or perhaps "blankety-blank" verse.

Verse About Hoover.

Senator Norris, however, has contributed the first poetical outburst of the third session of the 71st congress. It is aimed at another favorite Norris target, Herbert Hoover.

It was in regard to presidential commissions, committees and such the senator lapsed into poetic periods.

He had said President Hoover was "becoming famous for referring every difficult question to some committee that he may pick up somewhere around the country," then added it reminded him of "a little verse" a newspaper friend had made and which he had edited a bit, he hoped to the author's satisfaction.

Here it is as Norris gave it:

"One to every man and nation
"Comes the moment to decide
"In the strife of truth with falsehood
"For the good or evil tide.
"But the case presents no problem
"To the white house engineer;
"He appoints a big commission—
"To report some time next year."

The Most Famous Battlefield In The World

Sold; the site of Armageddon, in Palestine, to American archeologists, for $3,500.

"Armageddon is the world's most famous battlefield," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C. headquarters of the National Geographic society. "In the Book of Revelations St. John the Divine predicts 'the kings of the earth and of the whole world' are to be gathered here in the last great conflict. Armageddon has made its way into our language as a synonym for 'the fight to end fighting.'

"Many battles have been fought at Armageddon, and in turn the dust of marching hordes of Assyrians, Egyptians, Greeks, Romans, Arabs, Crusaders, French, Turks, and English has risen from its sun-parched plain. But the battle of the centuries must still be ahead. Today groups of Jewish colonists, by settling these fertile fields, wage a silent but constant economic warfare with the local Arabs.

"It was at Armageddon, that the army of Necho, king of Egypt, overwhelmed Josiah, king of Judah, about 609 B. C. Napoleon followed the crusaders' trail by way of Armageddon, and lost the only battle of his Syrian campaign at Acre, nearby. Lord Allenby, commander of the British forces in the near east, fought one of the final battles of the World war (appropriately enough, it was thought at the time) at Armageddon, when he vanquished a Turkish army gathered on the plain.

"The plain of Megiddo, as Armageddon is called in Palestine today, is a wedge-shaped triangle a few miles south of Nazareth, and is perched in a mountain saddle about midway between the sunken valley of the Jordan and the Mediterranean sea. It is the plain over which Jesus gazed when the people of Nazareth took him up on the hill to cast him down. The dazzling white walls of the little town rise from one of the little valleys which run northward into the Galilean Hills.

"The main road between Haifa and Jerusalem crossed the Kishon river at the point where the field of Armageddon widens toward the interior. The railroad line from Haifa to Damascus bisects the plain.

"The land is both fertile and muddy. The blackish soil consists of decomposed volcanic rock, which, in rainy weather, attains the sticky consistency of gumbo soup, making travel off the main roads impossible. Frequent references have been made by military leaders and historians to the muddy character of the field. Defeat or victory has often been balanced on a rain-cloud. At other times the plain is swept by choking clouds of dust.

"Although the plain is lower than the surrounding barren hills there are low ridges across it, and these ridges are used by the modern highway. All the rock for this road had to be brought from the nearby limestone hills, while basalt for the surface had to be transported from the Jordan valley. As the site of the ancient fortified town of Armageddon, from which the battlefield took its name, is not on the main road and was isolated during the rainy season, an American financier recently built a branch road from Tell el Kasels to the tell, or mound, on which the archeologists are at work.

"The site of the town of Armageddon is about midway along the southern side of the triangle. In Biblical days it was a place of considerable strategic importance, but the modern Arab settlement, El-Lejjun, is a rather sorry remnant of an illustrious past.

"The place lay at or near the crossing of two great trade routes; that from Egypt to the east via Damascus, and the caravan routes from the desert to Acre on the Mediterranean. A castle dating from the twentieth century B. C. with walls 28 feet thick, attests the importance of the place."

North Wind

You have come at last, and with a hollow roar
Shall whip us to the shelter of our door.
But we shall win the race and bolt within,
Safe in four walls to listen to your din.

A trumpeter, a skirling horn you blow,
Bring with you all the vanguards of the snow,
To bivouac along the wasted plain
Scoured by the brushes of the autumn rain.

The day will dawn and blue will be the skies
That arch above our windows when we rise,
Blue, cold and deep as are the Arctic seas,
And fresh and clean and, too, remote, as these.

Hard, brilliant sunshine! And your snap and feel
Are sharper than a blade of chilled, blue steel.
Virile and strong and packed with life and zest—
Winds from the north. And we shall love you best.

Stories That Recall Others

Time Enough

Bill's immaculate sister was trying to convince her untidy brother that the opposite sex would like him better if he would give more attention to his personal appearance.

"Oh, there is time enough for sprucing up when I see a girl I care anything about," said Bill.

All But The Whiskers

Betty's mother had been making stuffed cats and dogs for Christmas presents. She succeeded quite well with the dogs but failed completely with her first cat.

She called up her next neighbor and said, "Will you draw a cat's face for me, about three or four inches in diameter?"

The neighbor promised to try. Shortly, the effort of the amateur artist was seen across the fence. The next day Betty saw the neighbor in the yard and called to her.

"Mother made the cat all right after your face."

The neighbor answered, "That's nice," trying hard to look well pleased.

"Yes," continued Betty, "all but the whiskers."

Beauty is only skin deep—and the same may be said of freckles.

BRUINS-QUAKER GAME TURNS INTO FREE-FOR-ALL FIGHT

BOSTON, Dec. 25.—(AP)—After the Boston Bruins piled up an 8-goal lead on the scoreless Philadelphia Quakers here tonight, the latter misnamed players dropped their sticks and engaged in a savage melee with their high scoring rivals.

The battle started when Hib Milks, Philly forward, struck George Owen, who had checked him near the Boston net. Eddie Shore, aggressive Bruin defense star, rushed to Owen's aid but Allen Shields crossed his path and they swapped blows. Every player on the ice, with the exception of Petch Cube, the Quaker's goalie, then entered the fray and peace was not restored until a dozen policemen were rushed onto the ice.

Referees Bill Shaver and Mickey Ion went into a long conference and imposed major penalties on Owen, Shore, Clapper, Milks, Coulson and Shields, the players most conspicuous in the most disorderly hockey scene ever staged in Boston.

The police detail came out again, just before time expired when Jerry Lowery struck Marty Barry during a mid ice scrimmage.

Until the fist fighting started late in the third period, the hockey game was the dullest such contest seen here in years. The Bruins scored almost at will and so disorganized were the Quaker rushes that they were not only unable to score but could only get in position to take 20 shots at the Boston net during the entire game.

AMERICANS TAKE MAROONS IN FAST FINISH

NEW YORK, Dec. 25.— (AP)— The New York Americans tacked a fast climax onto a slow hockey game tonight and defeated the Montreal Maroons, 2 to 1, to gain a tie for second place in the Canadian division of the National hockey league.

Two goals were scored before the first period was half over and then the teams dropped into a dull defensive battle until the finish was almost in sight. With only a few minutes to go, New York's third line put on a concerted rush and Bert Hughes flipped in the winning goal.

Both of the first period tallies received the benefit of penalties to the opposing team. Johnny Shepherd gave the Americans the first goal of the game. Hooley Smith tied the count three minutes later.

RANGERS DECISIVELY TURN BACK OTTAWA SENATORS

OTTAWA, Dec. 25.—(AP)—The New York Rangers registered a convincing 4 to 1 victory over the Ottawa Senators tonight in a National hockey league game that completely disproved the old axiom that too many cooks spoil the broth. The two Cook brothers, Bill and Bun, outshone the Senators and scored all of New York's goals.

Bunny Cook tallied three times to fatten his big scoring average. Two of his goals came in the second period, in which the Rangers rolled up a 3-0 lead after a scoreless opening frame. His third was registered early in the final period, which also produced the lone Ottawa tally, which was made by Till Touhey. Bill Cook scored early in the second frame on a solo effort. All of the younger Cook's tallies were made on passes

SCIENTIST PEERS INSIDE TINY CELL IN HEREDITY HUNT

PASADENA, Cal.—(AP)—The details of the internal structure of chromosomes, minute, sausage, shaped bodies that contain materials governing development of hereditary characteristics, are seldom visible even under the most powerful microscope.

A few chromosomes of exceptionally good visibility are known and these are described by Dr. Calvin B. Bridges of the California Institute of Technology, who says:

"In certain large, clear cells, the chromosomes can be seen to consist of an outer thin pellicle, enclosing a layer of chromosomal sap, and, within these two coverings a long, closely coiled thread, the 'chromonema.'

"The chromonema is the closest approach to the gene-string that has been identified in the living state."

Gene-string refers to the invisible particles called genes, which constitute the active material governing heredity. They are carried within the cheromosome, where they are joined to each other like a string of beads.

OVER 750 APPLICANTS GIVEN FLYING LICENSES

A total of 931 applicants have been examined by the personnel department of the state department of aeronautics since it began its work in April, 1927, according to Captain William B. Smith, chief flight surgeon. Of these 756 were accepted and were given permission to fly. A sufficient number of examinations have been made to enable the department to make an interesting study of the group and to draw several important inferences.

In addition to the selection of applicants for commercial flying, two other phases have been added to the work of the department since it was first started, Dr. Smith said. The selection is now only a part of the responsibilities and supervision is now considered an important. A system has been devised whereby the department of personnel is in touch with all persons holding state pilots' licenses, at practically all times. In this way the chief flight surgeon is kept posted as to a pilot's health, use of intoxicating liquors and other habits which might result in his being a poor risk in the air.

In several cases it has been necessary to revoke licenses and on two occasions these have been transport grades, Dr. Smith said.

Another type of work, which may be termed mental and physical hygiene, is now carried on by the department. The department's officers feel, Dr. Smith said, that they should keep a pilot in the air rather than on the ground. They therefore encourage all flying people under their supervision to consult the department regarding health. The results of this work have been gratifying, according to the flight surgeon.

An interesting observation, after a study of the department's statistics, is made regarding the ages of the applicants. One hundred and fifty-nine were 20 years old or younger. In the decade from 21 to 30, 544 applicants wished to fly, approximately three times as many as in any other decade and about twice as many as all the others combined. Applicants from 31 to 40 years old numbered 191, with 33 being from 41 to 50 years old. Four applicants were between 51 and 56 years old.

The number of applicants has also been classified as to occupations at the time of application. The term "aviation" includes all whose livelihood was derived from this industry at the time they were first examined by the state department, and includes all individuals in the industry except airplane mechanics. These were classified separately so as to be compared to automobile mechanics.

Grouping airplane mechanics with all others in the industry, it is found that this group comprises the largest number of any one classification applying for flying licenses. Next to these, skilled laborers appeared most frequently. The list follows:

Aviation, 131; skilled laborers, 128; students, 90; clerks, 86; salesmen, 65; airplane mechanics, 52; automobile mechanics, 52; merchants, 41; farmers, 33; not occupied, 37; chauffeurs, 34; manufacturers, 32; executives, 31; occupations unknown, 27; specialized (engineering, etc.) 19; professionals (doctors, etc), 15; unskilled laborers, 15; builders and contractors, 12; officers of the law, 8; teachers, 7; the press, 4; professional entertainers, 3; marine industry, not military, 2; military officers, 1.

CONNECTICUT A LEADER AGAINST COW TUBERCULOSIS

Connecticut ranks with the leaders in the campaign for the eradication of bovine tuberculosis, according to the biennial report of the commissioner on domestic animals. There are 6970 herd of cattle in this state under supervision, representing 91,194 head or approximately 70 per cent of the dairy animals in the state.

A large number of inspections of food sources are reported by W. J. Warner, dairy and food commissioner whose biennial report also appeared Wednesday. This report, in addition to the regular material, contains a resolution adopted by the International Association of Dairy and Milk Inspectors, and an appreciation of the life and services of the late Thomas Holt, former head of the department, who died April 29.

In the past biennium, 283 herds or 15,288 head of cattle have been added to the list of those under supervision of the state. Of this number 6259 animals were condemned and slaughtered at an expense to the state of $235,442. It is estimated by the department that 50,000 animals remain uninspected in the state, and that the expense for the completion of the program will amount to $1,210,000.

FUTURE OF THE WORLD BELONGS TO CHRIST SAYS EPISCOPAL RECTOR

"The future of the world belongs to Christ", said Archdeacon J. Eldred Brown in his Christmas morning sermon at Trinity Episcopal church. There was a large attendance at the service which was held at 10:45 o'clock. Archdeacon Brown took as his text, Isaiah 9: 6-7: "And the government shall be upon his shoulders. Of the increase of his government and of peace there shall be no end." In his sermon he said:

For the sincere Christian believer the fundamental joy of this day is a sacred, a holy joy. For to such a believer the birthday of Christ stands not only for the greatest event that ever took place in human history, but also for the fact that there is nothing in God which may not come into close and permanent union with man. The very fact that God can so intimately unite Himself with man as to take man's nature into permanent union with His divine nature gives us the most hopeful and assuring promise of our abiding existence and worth we could possibly desire. For it assures us as St. Augustine says, that "God is come down to us that we may be lifted up to God." Such an assurance is in itself instinct with joy and peace; with a joy and peace such as the world had always longed for, but had despaired of gaining previous to the coming of Christ.

You will recall that the texts I have chosen are taken from Isaiah's great prophecy of the Messiah which reads, "Unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given; and the government shall be upon his shoulder; and his name shall be called Wonderful Counsellor Mighty God, Everlasting Father, Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government and of peace there shall be no end."

Notice the sequence of ideas. First comes the promise of a Messiah, a being of divine power and attributes. Then, because he is to be a divine being and at the same time human, he will fittingly take on his shoulder the burden of government. Then, further, as a result of his government there shall be peace. And finally there shall be a never-ending increase of his government, and therefore a never-ending increase of peace.

Now, considering man's history, whether individual, tribal or national, what stands out more prominently than these three facts, namely, man's failure to govern himself wisely and well, his utter inability to find lasting peace by his own thought and methods; and the absolute need of relying on a power higher than himself, if he would so control himself as to find a worthy and satisfying peace.

Consider, first, the case of the individual. What means the whole system of law courts, police, prisons, and insane hospitals, but that it is a living witness to man's failure to govern himself and keep himself in peace?

Is there anything more pitiful or pathetic in all human literature than the wail of the best men of all the ages that, while they see and approve the better, they are unable to keep themselves from following the worse?

How full of disocuragements and despair were the best men of the world previous to Christ's coming! Even Plato could say "We must wait for a God, or a God-inspired man, who will tell us what to do and bring us peace."

And when a Plato could despair, what might be expected from the ordinary man?

True, we have the conscience. But, at its best, conscience is merely a guide. It may point the way to a duty, or warn from the path of evil, but it gives no power to obey its dictates. Even a St. Paul's conscience so far proved a false guide as to lead him to think it his duty to persecute Christ and the church, though afterwards he called himself the chief of sinners on this account.

No, my friend, whether we consult the heathanism of old or of today; whether we question the Christian or the non-Christian, the verdict is the same. Namely, that man as an individual finds it impossible to govern himself; that so far as he relies on his own strength, he is constantly transgressing the laws and rights of God and men, and so is constantly in need of help from outside himself to keep him in peace, or restore peace when it has gone from him.

And when we consider the history of man in groups or nations, the case needs no proof. It is simply notorious that nations, in and of themselves, have shown an utter incapacity to govern themselves so as to bring about a lasting peace. The latest evidence of this, that of the world war, is too fresh in our minds to even need mentioning. But here is the special pertinency of the texts to the present moment. The progressive and Christian forces of the world are at this moment largely centering their thoughts around the subjects of government and peace. Those who have been living under despotisms are determined to set up free governments founded on justice to all and having their promise of peace and duration in the free consent of the governed. These principles are in line with the principles of Christ, and it is impossible to suppose that the Christ of Isaiah's predictions and the Christ of Galilee would not be in closest sympathy with them. So likewise with the recent efforts of the Christian and progressive nations to devise such an agreement in governmental ideals and policies as shall secure to the world its stability, its freedom from war, and its peaceful development in all that goes to make up a truly Christian civilization.

For here, again, the underlying ideals are those of the predicted Messiah and the Christ of history. In a word, the Christian and progressive forces of today are thinking, as Isaiah thought of old, of the Christ, of His worthiness to bear the government of the world on His shoulder and of the belief in the sufficiency of a government comparing more closely to his principles to secure a just and abiding peace. And when we consider the evidence of the Christian centuries, how marvelously has the historic Christ fulfilled Isaiah's prediction!

The historic Christ's government has of course been spiritual. So far as He has taught and willed, government in His name has not been by force. Nor has it been political. Essentially, it has been a government of the individual, and a government by trust and love and peace. For He who was predicted as "the Prince of Peace" has freely invited all "the weary and heavy laden"—and that comprehends all men at one or another period of their lives—to "come unto Him and find rest unto their souls." That is, He invites all men to lay the government of their lives on His shoulder and in so doing to find rest or peace.

And what a vast realm He has built up of men who have freely committed to Him in love and trust the government of their lives! Who have joyfully accepted Him as "King of kings and Lord of lords!" "Of the increase of His government and of peace there shall be no end." That was the prediction. How remarkably it has been fulfilled or is in process of fulfillment! Has there ever been a time since He walked this earth when the number of souls who accept His government was not being added to? Has there ever been a period in Christian history when there have not been added to membership in His kingdom thousands who have found increasing peace in submission to His will? Consider the miracle of modern missions, which one hundred years ago was non-existent, but which, in the intervening period, his girdled the globe and brought the gospel within the hearing of over eight hundred millions of the heathens, giving to hundreds of thousands of them "the peace of God which passeth understanding."

But while Christ's government is preeminently individual and His kingdom a spiritual kingdom, yet it is written, "The kingdoms of this world shall become the kingdoms of our Lord and of His Christ." And here, too, the signs are not wanting that the Christian nations are increasingly governing themselves, modeling their ideals, on the principles of Christ. Nearly 2,000 years ago, for example, Christ contrasted His ideas of government with those of the rulers of His day, saying that those rulers stressed lordship and authority, whereas He would define greatness as a matter of ministry and service. And though His idea was far ahead of its time, it has been leavening men's minds until it has now become a recognized ideal in all modern, free, Christian governments, the motto being in the words of Grover Cleveland, "Public Office is a Public Trust." Again, Christ laid great emphasis on the brotherhood of man, and taught and practiced philanthropy—a pitiful, generous, self-sacrificing regard for the unfortunate and abandoned. And one of the outstanding characteristics of our day is the marvelous philanthropy which immediately responds to the calls of want and suffering. The Red Cross record is one of which the whole world, and particularly the Christian world, may well be proud. And the magnificent response of New York city to the needs of its poor and unemployed simply shows us on a large scale what is being done everywhere in this country by individuals, cities, states and the national government to aid the unfortunate and the needy. It is a demonstration of sympathy and brotherly love utterly inconceivable of the world before Christ, or even of a world without Christ. One has only to consider these phenomena and along with them the transformations wrought by Christian missions in such countries as Uganda in Africa, or in the islands of the Pacific ocean. The manifold peace organizations, and the great Christian movements in "behalf of Christian unity," to realize that "the thought of Jesus Christ is taking possession of the human mind; that His principles are increasingly reaching and regulating human life," and that, in ever-increasing measure, the government is being laid on His shoulder. Yes, the future of the world belongs to Christ. Therefore to be separated from Christ is "to lose the heritage, to forfeit the citizenship which will soon be the one thing worth possessing."

A DAY OF SPLENDOR AT ST. PATRICK'S CHURCH

Christmas was a day of great splendor and rejoicing in St. Patrick's church, with the inspiration of tradition, prestige, numbers and prosperity. The celebration of the feast of the Nativity began at 5:30, when high mass was sung by the rector, Rt. Rev. Msgr. M. H. May. At 7:30, low mass was read by Rev. John J. Reilly, who also preached to the large congregation. Low mass at 9 was read by Rev. James E. Dargan. At each of these services two priests were required to give holy communion, so numerous were the Christmas penitents.

The climax of the day came with the solemn high mass of rejoicing at 10:30, celebrated by Rev. Father Dargan, with Rev. Father Reilly deacon and Monsignor May sub-deacon. St. Patrick's is fortunate in having not alone three unusual preachers but three good singers as well, as was evidenced in the epistle for the day, Titus 2. 11-15, sung by the rector, the marvellous gospel according to St. John which Father Reilly sang so impressively and the Preface, given so beautifully by Father Dargan.

As a setting for all the services, the Altar society members had adorned the sanctuary with palms and flowering plants and the three marble altars with poinsettias and red carnations, while pink and white roses were at the shrines. When the sanctuary was flooded with radiance at the consecration, the spectacle in this magnificent church was most inspiring.

The day's program of music as arranged by the organist, Henry J. LaFontaine was marked by a number of new and notable compositions which several local musicians not members of this church attended the services to hear. At 10:30, the mass given was that in honor of St. Vincent Ferrer, the work of Pietro A. Yon, former organist at the Vatican, now at St. Patrick's cathedral, New York. This composion abounds in many new treatments of familiar themes, with marked evidences of Gregorian influence and unusual predominence given work for men's voices. It is constructed on a Gregorian series of seven notes, and is accounted the best of the new masses after the style of Palestrina. Careful rehearsals and an appreciation of the beauties of the work resulted in a remarkably excellent interpretation by the volunteer singers, the choruses standing out finished and true, while the solo numbers were most pleasing. The same singers gave the mass by Marsh at 5:30, with a real triumph of good work which won them the praise of their listeners. The offertory at both masses was the traditional pledge of faith and loyalty of the ancient church through generations, Adeste, Fideles, in which Walter F. LaFontaine had the solo, sung with smoothness and fine quality of voice. At 10:30, when benediction of the blessed sacrament was given by Father Dargan, the choir sang O. Salutaris and Tantum Ergo, both Mauro-Cottone settings and well interpreted. In Divine Praises, the invocation to St. Joseph was by Henry J. LaFontaine.

The soloists were Mrs. Bernard C. Coyle, Mrs. Domenick L. Bailey, Roderick F. Sullivan, Walter F. LaFontaine, William S. Shannon, John Kelly and Henry LaFontaine.

The parish children had their own special musical program at their mass at 9, the junior choir singing carols, Yon's "When Blossoms Flowered," Message of the Bells and Adeste, Fideles, under direction of Mr. LaFontaine, with extra fervor in their young voices. The boys' chorus work was of much merit.

When it was announced that Rev. Father Reilly was to be the preacher at the solemn high mass it was expected that his many auditors would hear a consideration of some Christmas theme from an altogether original viewpoint. Having read the gospel for the first mass of the day, Luke 2. 1-14, he sketched rapidly the mutations of world history by which mankind, once satisfied with little things, through the evolution of pride and progress and importance worked to a climax of immensity, until the standard and criterion for individual, national and world relativity was bigness. Now conditiones are changing, thought, and estimate and action are coming back to little things, nearer the condition of the little town, the little crib, the little Child, when angels broke their bounds and sang glory to God and peace to men.

Catholics have always knelt before the crib and have recognized the value of little things; have contemplated, not alone the Child, but the mother, in simplicity, in self-denial, in sacrifice. They have had a chance to learn the value of little things, their biggest moment in their first communion, to estimate their biggest achievement, not when they have won success, but when they have overcome some sin. The preacher carried out in a very convincing manner the thought of the celestial Boy, Who had come in the littleness of Bethlehem's surroundings to find His ball, the earth, which sin had taken awa yand this thought he stressed, expressing the hope that Christ might come to all hearts, whose purpose in life is to help Him regain that ball which He has lost.

The four masses of the day were attended by great congregations, unmistakable manifestation of the fervor and faith of practical Catholicity.

BEAUTIFUL DECARATIONS AT LOCAL SWEDISH CHURCH

Christmas matins were held at the Salem Evangelical church on Hickory street beginning at 5.30 o'clock Christmas morning. The early service began in the Swedish language with a song and a brief sermon in that language after which the English language was used entirely. The church choir rendered appropriate numbers with Miss Edna Hanson at the organ, while Miss Dorothy Pearson also presided for the hymns and the ritual service. The musical program was as follows: Swedish Psalm; Swedish sermon, on "The Great Light;" Hosianna (Volger) church choir; hymn, Introit for Christmas Day. Opening Liturgy with reading of Epistle; hymn; reading of Gospel for Christmas day; "Holy Night," (Adam), church choir; hymn, sermon in English, "Tidings of Great Joy. Today There is Ringing," (Christiansen), church choir; offertory; hymn; closing liturgy including benediction postlude. The church was very prettily decorated with Christmas trees and evergreens giving the surroundings of the church the atmosphere of the season's tidings. Rev. E Einar Kron, the pastor, delivered a very inspiring sermon. He said in part:

Again we gather in the early hours of Christmas morning to hear the old message of the birth of Christ the Savior. It is the old, oft-repeated message, yet ever new, for it comes to us with a newness and a freshness that reptition cannot dim. As we hear again of the events of that holy night when heavens came close to earth and heavenly choirs of angelic messengers sent the echoes of heavenly music vibrating and pulsating over the plains of Bethlehem it pulls at our heart strings and stirs us to the inmost depths of our spirit.

What was the central thought in that heavenly message? It is that feeling which is uppermost in your heart at Christmas time; it is joy and happiness, not an ordinary joy or a hilarious joy, but a joy that goes deep and abides. For the angel announced that these were good tidings of great joy.

Little did the shepherds suspect that they would this night receive an angelic visitation. Little did the people of Bethlehem or not far distant Jerusalem suspect the holiness of this night. But the fact that Jesus came at night reminds us that He came into the darkness of sin and unbelief and ignorance as "the Great Light."

We note then that these tidings were brought by angels, who sang the praise of God in their song, "Glory to God in the Highest," and brought to men the message of "peace" and "good will." For Jesus, the Prince of Peace, came bringing peace between God and man, who must be reconciled to God because of sin. For whosoever receives Christ and lives in Him experiences peace with God, peace in the heart, and peace with fellowmen. Jesus also brought the possibility of good will between men. O that the spirit of good will manifested at Christmas time might remain through the year, but alas, all too soon man returns to his envies and jealousies, his bickerings and quarrels, his hatreds and strifes.

But we note further that this message was for all people. The fact that it first was given to poor and humble shepherds on Judea's plain, shows clearly that Jesus came for all. Could we not say of these shepherds that they were typical of the faithful few, who, with Simeons and Hanna looked steadfastly for His coming? While rich Jerusalem and indifferent Bethlehem slept on, Jesus proclaimed to humble shepherds. He came then for all, Jew and Gentile, rich and poor, high and lowly. And he came as the Savior of the world. As the recent snow covers the bleakness and barreness of the earth with a pure, white mantle, so it symbolizes Christ with whose mantle all our sin and imperfection may be covered, so that scarlet sins become as white as snow.

What was this message, brought by angels, brought for all? It was a message of good tidings, for it told of the birth of a Savior. But why should the Savior of the world come as a lowly babe in a manger? In order to remind us again that he is for all. Why should He be born in Bethlehem? In order to fulfill the prophecy of Micah. When Caesar Augustus by a stroke of his pen authorized the enrolment of all his vast empire, he little knew that he was thereby helping to fulfill Micah's prophecy. So it shows that the world obeys God, though often unknowingly.

These were not only good tidings, but they were also tidings of great joy, a joy that grows and increases and benefits all around. For he who experiences the love of God in Christ, knows the true joy. For he who is rich in love, never wants for joy, for joy is the reflection of true love. May we allow that joy to become a part of our hearts and lives, and radiate that joy with others. For though we may give of it, we still have it down in our hearts, as Mary kept all these things in her heart. And then as the shepherds we may go out and make known the Savior who once was born in David's city to bring peace, joy, goodwill and salvation to all who will receive Him in heart and life.

LOST HIS LIFE IN ATTEMPT TO RESCUE TWO CHILDREN

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Dec. 25.—(AP)—Samuel Belario, 39, died today, his birthday, of burns received early this morning as he rushed to the burning home of his neighbor, Pasquale Giovinazzo, to rescue two children he believed sleeping in the house. Giovinazzo was held by police, while the arson squad investigated circumstances in connection with the fire.

Belario was attending a joint birthday and Christmas party in his honor when the fire was discovered, and he ran to the house to rouse Giovinazzo's two daughters, 13 and 8 years old.

Firemen later found that no one was in the house. They said the structure was soaked with gasoline.

AN 11-YEAR-OLD BOY WAS SHOT THROUGH THE HEART

ROANOKE, Va., Dec. 25.—(AP)—Billy Upton, 11, was walking through an alley back of his home this afternoon when he was seen to stagger and fall. A neighbor picked him up and called an ambulance but the child died as a result of a bullet wound in the heart before the hospital was reached.

Police investigating the case reported tonight that no one had been found who had heard a shot fired in the neighborhood where the shooting occurred.

TAFTVILLE MAN ARRESTED LAST NIGHT ON AUTO THEFT CHARGE

Ferdinand Gaudette, 18, of Taftville, was arrested Thursday evening by Constable Louis A. Paquette on a charge of theft of a Ford roadster belonging to Joseph J. Lobe of South A street, Taftville, about three months ago. He is held under bonds of $2,500 at local police headquarters for trial in the city court this (Friday) morning. The accused was arrested on a warrant drawn up by City Attorney Charles W. Cassidy on Oct. 7. The local police had been on the lookout for Gaudette since he is alleged to have stolen the car early in October, but they were unable to locate him until Thursday evening, as it is understood he with a companion drove the stolen machine to Canada, and did not return to Taftville until a few days ago. Receiving information Thursday that Gaudette was in Taftville Constable Paquette was on the watch for him and arrested him in a Taftville theatre.

The stolen machine was not recovered. Gaudette claims he did not steal the machine, and implicated a friend at the Brooklyn naval hospital.

Gaudette served in the United States navy for a year and a half.

PLAINFIELD HAS LITTLE TROUBLE IN BEATING HAWKES' GLOBE TROTTERS

(Special to The Bulletin)

PLAINFIELD, Dec. 25 — With Johnny Hawkes, the one-armed basketball player, as their only excuse to be touring the country the Globe Trotters took a sound drubbing, 42 to 22, from the Plainfield Pros here tonight, in what was expected to be a fast game. The Globe Trotters who came to Plainfield with a good reputation proved sadly disappointing with the exception of Hawkes who played part of the game and did some mighty fine work considering his handicap. Dissinger led the Pros in scoring with seven baskets, while his teammates played brilliantly with him. The game was not what was expected and proved more or less disappointing to the fans who like their games close and thrilling.

The redeeming feature of the evening was the preliminary between the Plainfield Buddies and the Putnam team of the Southern New England Basketball league in which the Buddies emerged victorious 30 to 26 in the five minute over-time period. This game was hotly contested from the start to finish, the lead changing hands every few minutes of play, not more than 4 points separating the two teams at any time. The half ended with the score 10 to 8 in Plainfield's favor but this scant advantage was short-lived as Putnam took the lead and held it until almost the last five minutes of play. Plainfield rallied and at the final whistle the count was knotted at 24-all. In the five minute overtime period Plainfield got going and tallied three baskets while Putnam was only able to chalk up two points. Mette and Mercer proved the stars of the Plainfield victory scoring 12 and 10 points respectively while Leo and Dennings were the high scorers for Putnam. The summary:

CARUSO LEADS FIELD IN CHRISTMAS HANDICAP

AGUA CALIENTE, Mexico, Dec. 25.—(AP)—Caruso, ridden by Jockey Leishman, led the field of ten horses of all ages to the wire today in the $1,500 Christmas handicap, feature of the opening day's card. Caruso stepped the six furlongs in 1:21 2-5 with Good and Hot second and Lampblack third.

Somewhat overlooked in the betting Caruso turned in a fine performance and paid $12.00 to win in the mutuels. Good and Hot, even less favored, paid $29.60 to place.

Lengthy priced winners featured the opening card, made up chiefly of claiming races. Mint Sauce repaid $16.40 for $2 to supporters in the seventh race, a mile and sixteenth run for three year olds and up. Tecolote returned $29.80 in winning the sixth and Jenkins Rochester $39.20 to backers in the third.

INDIANS WIN TWELFTH STRAIGHT, STILL UNDEFEATED

PROVIDENCE, Dec. 25.—(AP)—Springfield won its 12th consecutive Canadian-American league hockey game, here tonight, defeating Providence, 4 to 1, to remain undefeated in league games this season.

The Indians outclassed the Reds completely, scoring two good goals in the first and second periods. In the third period, Murray, Providence goalie looked bad and let two more through. Faudreault scored for the Reds just before the end of the game.

GENARO AND WOLGAST IN TITLE FIGHT TONIGHT

By EDWARD J. NEIL

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

NEW YORK, Dec. 25.—(AP)— The turkey and trimmings, and all the festivities that go with Christmas, are in storage today for Midget Wolgast, New York state commission flyweight champion, and Frankie Genaro, veteran Italian, until they can rid themselves of a fifteen round championship battle in Madison Square Garden Friday night.

Saturday will be one of the biggest Christmases in the busy careers of one or the other. While Wolgast is recognized in this state as the ruler of the 112 pounders, Genaro, New Yorker, has no title standing here but is regarded as the flyweight ruler by the National Boxing association, guardian of the ring game in 26 states and a few assorted territories. Friday's winner will automatically become the undisputed champion of the midgets.

Wolgast, a bumble bee of a battler with speed and energy to burn, came into the title by defeating Black Bill, the Cuban Negro, in the final of an elimination tournament here last summer. The Philadelphia Italian waded through half a dozen of the best flyweights Madison Square Garden could gather together during the course of the tourney.

Genaro refused to enter the elimination fray, standing fast on his laurels as the N. B. A. champion king and has defended his association title in half a dozen European countries. Of the two, Genaro is by far the more experienced ringman and his career dates back to the days of the ill-fated Pancho Villa, the sensational little Filipino, whom he once outpointed. Wolgast has youth and zip on his side, cleverness and a wealth of stamina. He outclassed his rivals in the elimination series.

Although the match has been dropped into a poor spot on the sports program, jammed in between the Christmas and New Year's holidays and forced to compete with the attractions of both, the interest that always follows a title contest has led to brisk betting. Wolgast is an 8 to 5 favorite and probably will enter the ring at 2 to 1.

Irish Jimmy Slavin, New York featherweight, heads the supporting card in an eight round go with Kid Francis of Italy. Vidal Gregorio, Spanish featherweight, meets Lew Feldman, of New York, in another fight.

ITALIAN SWIMMER BRAVES COLD TO WIN XMAS RACE

PARIS, Dec. 25—(AP)—In water only six degrees above freezing, twenty-one hardy swimmers today leaped off the south bank of the River Seine in front of Invalides square for the annual Christmas cup swimming race across the river.

Only ten finished. Some were carried 600 to 900 yards downstream by a strong tide before they managed to land on the other bank. Others were taken out of the water nearly frozen.

The winner was Gambi, of Italy, with Cartonnet, France, second, and Malfait, of Belgium, third.

ALL-STAR TEAMS ARE HIT BY INJURIES

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 25—(AP)—Injuries and illness today caused shifts in the lineups of the two all-star teams that will meet here Saturday in the annual East-West charity football game.

The eastern team lost George Van Bibber, tackle from Purdue, who wrenched a knee in practice and probably will not be in shape for the contest. A severe cold, contracted two days ago, prevented Jim Bausch, big University of Kansas fullback, from donning a uniform. Whether Bausch will be able to play in the western lineup is problematical.

Andy Kerr of Colgate and Dick Hanley of Northwestern, coaches of the eastern squad, replaced Van Bibber with Francis Vincent of Yale, with Lubratovich of Wisconsin at the other tackle position. This pair will alternate with Linehan of Yale and Ely of Iowa.

If Bausch fails to rally, his position will be filled by Kermit Lange, 195 pound line plunger, from Baker university. Lange held down the fullback berth in a long practice today in a manner that left nothing to be desired.

The squads finished heavy training today, each spending three hours on the field. Light exercises will be in order tomorrow.

The eastern team will be a strong favorite at the kickoff. In addition to an eight pound advantage per man, the visitors appear to be more finished players.

Despite cold weather the last few days, ticket sales for the benefit game have mounted rapidly and a crowd of more than 50,000 persons is expected.

THAT CHARITY GAME

Now that Christmas is over we should not forget that there are still many needy families in the city that need our contributions and aid, not only at Christmas but all through the winter. Tonight at the Y. M. C. A. there are three basketball games to be played for the benefit of the fund for the unemployed and right here is a chance to help make somebody's burden a little less heavy by attending this game, for every cent taken in at the gate is to be given to charity. Not only will you be helping the needy but you will get plenty of basketball for your money. The three games should provide some real basketball played by local athletes and many are stars of former college teams. It is a worthy cause and those bleachers should be filled to the limit this evening.

TRIBUTE TO DANNY MURPHY

Connie Mack, veteran manager of the World Champion Athletics, writing in his "My Fifty Years in Baseball", a Christy Walsh feature, pays glowing tribute to the prowess of Danny Murphy, former Norwich player. In one chapter of his writing Connie Mack says that Murphy was one of his greatest baseball finds. He tells of how, when his club was in the doldrums which through legal entanglements which crippled his team, he got wind of a player with the Norwich, Conn., team in the old Connecticut league who was burning up the loop. Mack claims he was persuaded by some Norwich friends to come up to the Connecticut city and look this boy Murphy over. He says that being desperate he was willing to try most anything and came. He saw Murphy and was impressed but was not hopeful as Murphy had been sent up to the Giants for a tryout and then had been sent back to the minors. However he took the chance and signed Murphy. Murphy had a big task cut out for him for it was into Nap Lajoie's shoes that he was to step. In the first game played against the Boston Red Sox Murphy hit six times in six trips to the plate. From that time on Murphy was one of the mainstays of the Athletics. So started Danny Murphy's big league career.

BILL TERRY TOPS NATIONAL LEAGUE BATTERS WITH AVERAGE OF .401

NEW YORK, Dec. 25.—(AP)— Amid the crash of shattered records, Bill Terry of the New York Giants hammered his way last season to the first National league batting championship a New Yorker had won in 15 years. The official National league averages for 1930, released today, credit Terry with an average of .401 and New York's first title since Larry Doyle won with a .320 mark in 1915.

Terry joined the league's record-smashing array by tieing the league mark for the most safe hits in a season with 254, and led the circuit with 177 singles.

Babe Herman of Brooklyn finished second to Terry in the batting race with a .393 average and following him came the star record smasher, Chuck Klein of Philadelphia at .386. Other leaders on the list of players who took part in 75 or more games were Frank O'Doul, Philadelphia, .383; Fred Lindstrom, New York, .379; George Fisher, St. Louis, .374; George Watkins, St. Louis, .373; Paul Waner, Pittsburgh, .368; Riggs Stephenson, Chicago, .367; Pie Traynor, Pittsburgh, .366, and Gus Mancuso, St. Louis, .365.

Klein set two new league marks by scoring 158 runs, two more than Rogers Hornsby made in 1929, and clouting 59 two base hits to surpass the mark of 56 made by Ed Delehanty in 1899. Klein also made the most total bases on hits, 445.

Hack Wilson of Chicago walloped the ball for 56 home runs and another new record, beating the mark of 43 homers set by Klein in 1929. Another Chicagoan, Hazen "Kiki" Cuyler, captured base stealing honors for the third successive season with 37 stolen bases. Adam Comorosky of Pittsburgh scored a double, leading the league with 23 triples and with 33 sacrifices.

Taylor Douthit of St. Louis went to bat 664 times.

Six of the eight clubs batted above .300 as the Giants set another league mark with a .319 average. The former mark of .309, made by Pittsburgh in 1928 and equalled by the Phillies the next year, was tied by Chicago and beaten by the Giants, Philadelphia and St. Louis. The St. Louis Cardinals set new records with 1,004 runs and 373 doubles while the Phillies established three marks as they went to bat 5,667 times, made 1,783 hits and allowed their opponents 1,199 runs. Chicago, clouting 171 homers for a new record, also set a mark for total bases on hits with 2,684. Pittsburgh collected 119 triples, made 196 sacrifices and stole 76 bases to lead in all three departments.

With 240 players displaying their batting skill, 84 of them in 75 or more games apiece, the combined totals of the eight clubs created seven new major league records. They were the composite averages of .303, at bats, 43,693; runs, 7,025; hits, 13,260; total bases, 19,572; two-base hits, 2,386; home runs, 892, and five clubs hitting more than 100 homers apiece.

"Six players took part in all their clubs' games, Chuck Klein and Tommy Thevenow of Philadelphia and Kiki Cuyler and Woody English of Chicago played in 156 games and Terry of New York and Douthit of St. Louis in 154.

JOE BELAIR'S ALL STARS SWAMP SHYMAS IN HOLIDAY GAME

With Joe Belair himself carrying the brunt of the attack the All Stars handed the Shyma club of Taftville a drubbing Christmas afternoon at Parish hall, Taftville, by the score of 52 to 36. Joe gave evidence of the fact that he still retained much of his old basketball wizardry as he led his picked collection of high school and college stars to their overwhelming triumph.

The visitors, aided by Belair's great floorwork, ran up a lead of 26 to 5 in the first few minutes of play. Belair then withdrew himself from the game and the Shymas gradually drew closer until at half time the count was 26 to 23. In the last half however, the All Stars resumed their killing pace and scored an easy victory.

Long, at center for the winners, was leading scorer with 10 baskets and one foul for 21 points, while Oscar Foote, at right forward, had eight baskets. Ray Yerrington, with 11 points, was leading scorer for the Shymas.

In the preliminary the Shyma Juniors were defeated by the Norwich Aces, 42 to 36, in a hard fought game.

After the game Manager Sullivan of the Shymas announced that he had resigned his position.

HIGH SCHOOL REPORTER INTERVIEWS KNUTE ROCKNE

ROCHESTER, Minn., Dec. 25.—(AP)—Spirit is the big thing in college and high school football, Knute Rockne of Notre Dame, told a 17-year-old Rochester high school journalism student.

Ted Tollefson, the student, met Rockne, who is here undergoing an examination at the Mayo clinic, at a high school banquet, and asked for an interview. The coach acquiesced and took Ted to luncheon.

The interview, in part, as made public today, follows:

By Ted Tollefson—

Spirit is the big thing in college and high school football, Knute Rockne, coach of Notre Dame, told me in an interview.

"Professional football is a game of individual skill, while intercollegiate and academic football is primarily a game in which spirit dominates," Mr. Rockne said. "They make a lot of fun out of it—the light writers for humorous magazines and sometimes newspaper readers— but, after all, spirit is the big thing in football."

Mr. Rockne told me most of those people who poke so much fun at school spirit never played football or any other game. The reason professional baseball attracts more people than amateur baseball, unlike football, is because baseball is a mechanized game, the wizard of Notre Dame declared.

"Every player in baseball has his certain task before him and naturally all of the players are good in their chosen work, while in football there is not so much attention given to individual skill as there is in cooperation and teamwork," he said.

Mr. Rockne believes the greatest football game of the year was the charity game between Notre Dame All-Stars and the New York Giants from which $115,000 was realized recently. He told me the All-Stars received no pay and risked personal injury for the benefit of charity.

I asked for this interview with Mr. Rockne when I met him at a high school banquet several nights ago, at which he was a speaker. He said: "Sure, are you pretty good?"

I replied: "Well"— and stuttering momentarily, grasping for a suitable answer—"I guess maybe I can work it out all right."

Mr. Rockne went on: "Well then, meet me at 12 o'clock noon and I'll buy your dinner for you and you and I can talk."

I have been asked to state my opinion of the great coach. He is one of the most frank men I have ever met. He is straightforward and says what he wants to.

SOUTHERN RACE TRACKS OPEN FOR WINTER SEASON

NEW YORK, Dec. 25—(AP)—With two tracks opening for the season and special Christmas handicaps furnishing added attractions at the others, winter racing had its biggest day of the season today. St. Johns park between Jacksonville and St. Augustine, Fla., and the famous Agua Caliente track in Mexico started their new seasons today.

At St. Johns, the well-played Ellis entry of Ellice and Honey Locust finished first and third in the featured Christmas handicap, a six furlong dash for all ages. Okaybee split the entry to take place money. Ellice, the winner, ran the distance in 1:14 2-5. The entry paid 2 to 1 to win.

The two tracks which have been carrying the burden of winter racing, Jefferson park at New Orleans and Oriental park at Havana put on richer races in their "Christmas handicaps". Despite a light rain, the Valley Lake stable's Battle Ax and B. G. Hart's Silver Cord staged a fine race in the $3,000 feature. Battle Ax, given a fine race by H. R. Riley, won by a head in a driving finish. Kadiak took show money while Galahad, the favorite, finished fifth. Battle Ax paid $11.20 in the mutuels.

Perfect weather at Havana brought out a record crowd as J. E. Smallman's Jack Biener won the big handicap. San Carlos, owned by A. Tarn, was a close second in the $2,000 event and Yam Toy third. Again the favorite was out of the money. Jem, the popular choice, finished fourth. Jack Biener paid 3 1-2 to 1.

The Agua Caliente Christmas handicap also saw a long shot triumph. Caruso, ridden by Leishman, covered six furlongs in 1:12 2-5 to win over a big field of all ages. Good and Hot was second and Lampblack third. Caruso paid $12.00 to win the mutuel betting while a place ticket on Good and Hot brought $29.60.

DETROIT COACH ASKS THAT FOOTBALL RULES BE INTACT

DETROIT, Dec. 25.— (AP) —Charles E. Dorais, athletic director at the University of Detroit and member of the rules committee of the Football Coaches' association, believes that what football needs is a five-year period without rule changes.

Discussing various changes in the rules which have been proposed for consideration at the coaches' annual meeting at New York next week, Dorais said today that a period of stabilization would help the spectators to catch up with the game. He indicated he opposed elimination of the point after touchdown, widening the end zones and other proposed alterations.

"Each year," Dorais said, "we are attempting some change in the rules, and the changes come so often that a vast portion of the populace that crams its way into stadia throughout the country can't keep up with the game.

"Much of the game is lost to the average crowd because of the many intricate changes that have been made during the past few years. I am heartily in favor of letting the rules alone for, say five years, until the public catches up, and then if the game needs any improvement alterations can be made and followers of the game won't be at a loss to understand them.

"This is no time for experiments," he declared. "I believe we have struck the proper balance between offense and defense, and the game is good enough now to let alone."

Asked his opinion of the move started by Coach Bill Alexander of Georgia Tech to eliminate the try for point, Dorais said he believed that while it might seem unjust to convert the extra point to lose to a team which scored a "fluke" touchdown and made the kick afterward, he believes the try for point should remain in the game.

"The large number of tie games would be unsatisfactory and unfair to teams which have developed kickers," he said.

Dorais said the suggestion for widening the end zones to facilitate scoring plays under the shadow of the goal posts came from coaches whose teams lacked the final "punch" last fall.

"I'm in favor of keeping the present rules until the public catches up," he concluded.

TWO FOOTBALL TEAM WORK HARD FOR NEW YEAR'S GAME

PASADENA, Cal., Dec. 25.— (AP) — Rose tournament's two football teams, Washington State and Alabama, gave vent to their Christmas spirit today by dashing through workouts for their New Year's clash.

The Cougars hit a stiff pace again with considerable work on offensive formations. Coach Orin "Babe" Hollingbery said he would stage hard drills tomorrow and Saturday, but would not work his men Sunday.

Coach Wallace Wade put the Crimson tide from the south through about two hours of fundamentals and finished off by running signals. He continued his policy of conditioning the team and paid little attention to brushing up on new plays.

After today's workout Hollingbery said he felt his team needed only a few more hard sessions. He plans to start tapering down next week.

When told the tide would probably outweigh his men with the possible exception of Glenn Edwards, the Cougar mentor said it didn't worry him any. "We were outweighed many pounds per man in almost every game this season, but it did not affect the outcome of a single one of the contests."

Washington State will step into the Rose bowl New Year's day in new uniforms of Crimson from shoes on up to helmets.

Apprised of this Coach Wade smiled and said:

"I allow as how we'll stick to our old work clothes. They were good enough to win all our games in this season and maybe they'll stand by us another game."

Coach Wade is still undecided about his line. If Newton Godfrey conditions well, he may send him in at tackle for Freddie Sington and let the All-American tackle play guard both on the offensive and defensive.

The weather continued cool with the skies partially overcast.

NEVERS TEAM BEATS ALL-SOUTHWEST, 20 TO 0

FORT WORTH, Tex., Dec. 25—(AP)—Ernie Nevers' Chicago Cardinals, National Pro Football league team defeated the Southwest All-Stars here today, 20 to 0.

The Southwest team was composed of former Texas Christian university and Southern Methodist Uni. players.

THREE BENEFIT GAMES FOR RELIEF OF UNEMPLOYED AT Y.M.C.A. TONIGHT

Three fine basketball games will be served to the fans of Norwich tonight at the Y. M. C. A. gym. The entire gate receipts of these games will be given for the relief of the unemployed. The bleachers have been installed around the gym, and the largest crowd of the season, is expected.

The first game which will start promptly at 7:30 will be between the Norwich Y girls and a team composed of college girls home on vacation. The Norwich girls have shown great improvement over last year, and look like they are in for a successful season. Miss Ruth Mullen, manager of the girls team is getting together the All-Star team and promises to put a team on the floor that will make the Norwich girls step.

The second game will be between the Montville Aces and an All-Star team. The Montville Aces have as yet to be defeated this season, winning all four of the games played to date against some of the strongest teams in this section. The All-Stars will be also old timers and boys home from college. They will have Joe Blair and possibly Leo Normandin at forwards. These two athletes have without a doubt done more for basketball than any other two in this section. They were teammates with the leading teams around here, and they made a wonderful working combination. Dud Burr, former star at Trinity, will pair up with Burnham, who is at present playing with Duke university freshman team. These two men will look after the back court, and with Demarest, former Dean academy and Springfield college player, will form a team that will make the Montville Aces travel to continue their winning streak. Gink Barber, now at William and Mary college, will be held in reserve, and will see service before the game is over. Gink won his numerals in the south, and is at present on the freshman basketball team playing guard. Long and Foote, star New London basketeers, will also perform.

The main attraction will be between the Y. M. C. A. and the Shyma club. Both teams are going to give all they have to win. Several members of the Shyma club were former Y players and they will be in there to show the public that they have not gone to the "bushes" but have graduated to the "majors." The Y. M. C. A. team is composed mostly of young players, but there is perfect harmony among the players, and the crowd will see a hard fighting team, playing against an older but not a better team until they have proven that fact tonight by the score.

Randy Whaples and Paul Bitgood will handle the games. Both of these popular officials have donated their services, and both players and spectators will feel that the games are in competent hands.

The doors will be opened at 6:45 p. m. and from the inquiries at the Y and other places a great crowd is expected to come out and help this worthy cause. Members of the various teams are selling tickets.

The line-up for the main attraction:

MID-WEST STARS START TUNE-UP FOR BIG GAME

DALLAS, Tex., Dec. 25—(AP)—The mid-west all-stars who will meet a picked football team of Southwest conference athletes here New Year's day arrived in Dallas today and three hours later were put through a thorough workout by Coach Bob Zuppke of the University of Illinois.

Only one member of the squad of 22 was missing. He was Donald Ridler, tackle from Michigan State college, who missed a train and reported he would reach Dallas tomorrow.

Zuppke used two full teams in the workout and indicated he would employ a strong running attack built around his most promising ball carriers. The session was devoted to offensive plays.

Three backs stood out in the first drill, Howard Kissell of Purdue, Leslie Molloy of Loyola (Chicago) and Lee Jensvold of Iowa. Malloy, a fast 193 pounder, seemed to please Zuppke especially with his excellent running, kicking and passing.

Players who will compose the southwest eleven, to be coached by Morley Jennings of Baylor and Fred Thomsen of Arkansas, will arrive tomorrow and go through their initial workout in the afternoon.

Members of the mid-west squad on hand included: Robert Clark, center, Northwestern; Arthur Bultman, center, Marquette; George Stears, guard, Purdue; Jack Christman, guard, Purdue; Bob Conover, guard, Illinois; Andrew Vanye, guard, Michigan State Normal; Stan Bodman, tackle, Illinois; Arthur Massucci, Detroit, tackle; Horace Buttner, tackle, Purdue; George Casey, end, Wisconsin; George Rogge, end, Iowa; Cecil Fogg, end, Michigan State; Edwin Winsper, end, Illinois; Charlie Brubaker, quarterback, Indiana; Lee Jensvold, quarterback, Iowa; Robert Horn, halfback, Ohio State; Howard Kissell, end, and halfback, Purdue; Leslie Malloy, halfback, Chicago Loyola; Francis Deig, fullback, Marquette; William Storen, fullback, Detroit; Hubert Hinchman, fullback, Butler.

GOLFERS TRYING TO GET FEEL OF "BALLOON" BALL

AGUA CALIENTE, Mexico, Dec. 25—(AP)—A holiday lull came to the rescue today of golfdom's winter army of professionals and amateurs experimenting with the new ball before taking up their play in the southland's two big tournaments next month.

With the experience of two competitions with the "balloon" behind, most of the links invaders awaited the $25,000 Agua Caliente open and the $10,000 Los Angeles open next month.

Fifty-one professionals and five amateurs out of a field of 97 starters succeeded in qualifying here yesterday for the Agua Caliente event. To this list will be added those players who were admitted by virtue of their performances in last winter's meet here and the P. G. A. and national opens.

Eddie Loos of Chicago and Pasadena, Cal., topped the qualifiers with a 71-73—144. Dewey Longworth, Oakland, Cal., followed with 146 and Fred Morrison, long driving Los Angeles professional, was third with 149. Tony Manero, New York pro, who won the southland's first tournament, the Pasadena $4,000 open last week, qualified far down the list with 157.

Many of the golfing stars spent Christmas day at this resort of old Mexico. They will return in groups to Los Angeles within the next week to tune up for the difficult play in January over the Wilshire Country club course, where the Los Angeles open will be held, followed by the event here.

MISS ORCUTT NEARLY TIES RECORD AT AUGUSTA

AUGUSTA, Ga., Dec. 25.— (AP) — Maureen Orcutt, star of the fairways among America's women golfers, presented herself with a welcome Christmas present today, a 77 over the well trapped lake course of the Augusta Country club.

Miss Orcutt's card was within a stroke of the course record set by Dorothy Campbell Hurd when she won the women's title in 1927.

Glenna Collett, who arrived yesterday with Miss Orcutt to spend the Yuletide holidays, did not play today.

Maureen and Glenna will play in the women's open here in March.

NORTH DAKOTA ELEVEN WINS FROM L. A. FIREMEN

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 25—(AP)—North Dakota university's football team was too much for the Los Angeles firemen today and the Flickertails won a 14 to 9 victory in one of the best games seen here this season.

The entire squad of middlewesterners astonished 20,000 spectators by well executed pass and drive plays which had their heavier opponents at a loss the greater share of the afternoon.

The firemen team was composed of former university, college and high school players.

McCOY LOSES BOUT WHEN HE BECOMES EXHAUSTED

BOSTON, Dec. 25.—(AP)—Ed George, recent winner of Gus Sonnenberg's claim on the heavyweight wrestling title, defeated Bob "Bibber" McCoy of Cambridge, here tonight in an exciting match that was stopped when the latter became too exhausted to continue.

FALCONS SET NEW MARK IN BEATING MAPLE LEAFS

DETROIT, Dec. 25.— (AP) —Goalie Benny Grant of the Toronto Maple Leafs spent an unhappy Christmas night in front of his teams net here tonight while the Detroit Falcons, playing unbeatable hockey, swept the Leafs off their feet to pile up a 10 to 1 victory and set a season's National hockey league scoring mark to date.

The Falcons, led by their sharpshooter, Ebbie Goodfellow, took the Leafs, and particularly Goalie Grant, by surprise as the game opened, and pounded in two goals during the first minute of play. They kept up the scoring spree in the first period until they had five goals. Two more were added in the second period, and three in the third, while the lone Toronto goal came midway in the final period.

Goodfellow boosted his National league scoring lead by four goals, while George Hay and Herbie Lewis, Falcon wingmen, got two goals apiece and Carson Cooper and Larry Aurie, wingmen, sent home one goal each. The Toronto goal came off the stick of Ace Bailey, Leaf wingman, with Jackson assisting.

King Clancy, Leaf star, played on both the defense and forward lines during the game, but found Dolly Dolson, Falcon goalie, too good for him. Most of the Falcon goals were charged directly to Goalie Grant having an off night, but the Toronto defense was weak all during the play. The Falcons didn't slow down at all during the play, and the game was rough throughout, 12 penalties being called.

Arrows Blank Eagles

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 25.— (AP) — The Philadelphia Arrows gained their second consecutive victory over New Haven tonight in a Canadian-American hockey league match, blanking the Eagles, 3-0. It was the local team's third defeat of New Haven in the four games played.

The contest was unusually rough, particularly in the second period, when seven men were sent to the penalty box, three of them twice. In this period Hudson skated through the entire New Haven team to score for the Arrows. Buckles and Anderson tallied the other markers.

WESTERLY KNIGHTS TEMPLAR HOLD ANNUAL CHRISTMAS OBSERVANCE

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Dec. 25.—For the annual Christmas observance of Narragansett commandery No. 27, K. T., of Westerly members and visiting fraters gathered in the armory banquet hall of its asylum at high noon on Christmas day, as directed by R. E. Frederick H. Briggs, of Boston, grand commander of the grand commandery, Knights Templar of Massachusetts and Rhode Island.

The knights seated themselves about a fittingly decorated table in the form of a passion cross, at the head of which were seated Em. Sir George E. Leonard, commander; Sir Fred W. Harvey, generalissimo, and Sir John R. Oppy, captain-general. The toast to the grand master as prepared by a grand encampment committee, was presented by Commander Leonard at 12 o'clock noon with response by Generalissimo Harvey.

During the program a quartet consisting of David A. Lowry, Richard Allen, John A. Hegg and W. Porter Hoxie presented Christmas numbers, "O Come All Ye Faithful" and "Silent Night."

Toasts were made to Grand Commander Briggs, Fifth division commander; Em. Sir Charles E. Converse, of Springfield, Mass.; Calvary commandery, Providence, "mother" commandery, and the adjoining sister commanderies in Connecticut, Columbian commandery No. 4, K. T., of Norwich, and Palestine commandery No. 6, K. T., of New London. Telegrams were read from and toasts made to Washington commandery No. 1, K. T., of Hartford, Em. Sir Clinton Nichols, commander, and St. John's commandery No. 11, K. T., of Willimantic, Em. Sir Russell W. Potter, commander, and also a telegram of felicitation was read from a past commander, Em. Sir Abel P. Randall, of Hadlyme, Conn.

To symbolic, capitular and cryptic orders, grand and subordinate, were made fitting tributes. The memorial to departed fraters of the past year was made by Past Commander John A. Pawson, prelate of Narragansett commandery.

"Immanuel" was the subject of the talk on Templarism and its Christmas signification by Reg. and Sir George P. Jones, of Quiambaug, a member of Thomas J. Shyrock commandery No. 11, K. T., of Salisbury, Md., and was given the closest attention. Report on the Christmas charitable work of the commandery was made by Recorder C. E. Burdick and the observance closed with a toast to Narragansett commandery and its commander.

SNOW AND ICE KEEP HIGHWAY DEPT. BUSY

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Dec. 25.—With the thawing and freezing of snow and ice on the highway surfaces in and about Westerly, the road section workmen of the Rhode Island state board of public works have had their snow plough trucks in operation on the state highways leading into Westerly. Their work has not been confined to scraping the snowy surface but where ice has formed on the highways and especially on curves the workmen have been busy placing gravel on the skiddy surfaces. The Westerly highway department under charge of Engineer A. L. Leon has also had its plough in operation and the workmen have been busy day and night in sanding the highways and street crossings. In Pawcatuck, workmen under direction of Selectman Arthur Babcock have been engaged in similar work to bring the number of possible highway accidents down to the minimum. Despite the hard work and overtime expended by the highway workers numerous accidents have occurred where automobiles have gone off the roads with more or less damages but without injuries to the occupants.

Christmas carol singers were on the streets of Westerly and Pawcatuck on Christmas eve and special attention was given by them to the homes of the shut-ins.

Real Estate Transfer

Recorded in the office of the Westerly town clerk appears the following transfer:

Dec. 22. Margaret Pengelley to William Pengelley, a certain tract or plot of land near Weekapaug, R. I., and adjoining lands of Ella J. Stillman, together with all buildings and improvements.

Mr. and Mrs. John Harvey Farnsworth were Westerly motor visitors on Christmas to Norwich, where they enjoyed Christmas dinner at Norwich Inn.

In the height of the heavy falling snow on Tuesday afternoon a low-flying biplane passed over the business section of Westerly, apparently just scraping the buildings and tree tops. It was headed in a northeasterly direction and was a plane of good size.

Westerly youngsters, with the advent of the snows of the past two days, have put up their skates and taken out their sleds to enjoy the coasting for the short time that it may last. The enjoyment of coasting was not confined to youngsters for a group of winter sport followers who stay at home to the number of a dozen made a trip out into the large open spaces on Christmas night to try the "sliding." The very coldest day of last winter was another time chosen, when even autos which were unable to drive through drifts made detours to reach their destinations.

Perhaps never before in the history of Westerly have homes, clubs and business establishments been so brilliantly and fittingly illuminated with colored electric lights and ornaments as on Christmas eve. The heavy fall of snow assisted the artificial decorations and a drive through residential sections of the town presented an ever-changing and most picturesque appearance.

George E. Bicknell and son, George, Jr., of Detroit, Mich., are the Christmas holiday guests of relatives and friends in Pawcatuck, where Mr. Bicknell resided about 20 years ago.

Mr. and Mrs. William C. Smith, of New York city, are the Christmas holiday guests of Mrs. Smith's sister, Miss Jessie M. Surber, and mother, in Westerly.

John Smith and sister, Miss Jennie Smith, are motor visitors this week-end with their sister, Miss Jessie L. Smith, a patient at Bowne hospital, Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

Station Agent James J. Flaherty, of the New Haven railroad, wife, daughter and son, left Westerly on Thursday night to visit with relatives and friends at their former home, Pawtucket, R. I.

Miss Marjorie D. Barber, a teacher in the North Attleboro, Mass., Junior High school, is the Christmas holidays guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Barber, in Westerly.

George E. Leonard, of Pawcatuck, left Westerly Christmas noon to be the holiday vacation guest of relatives and friends in Newport, R. I.

Herbert Hoxie and Carol Hoxie were Pawcatuck visitors in East Greenwich, R. I., on Christmas day.

Ralph D. Eldred, of Usquepaugh, R. I., was the Christmas day guest of Westerly friends.

REVIEW BY FEDERAL RESERVE BOARD

WASHINGTON, Dec. 25—(AP)—Volume of industrial production and factory employment decreased throughout the country in November, while wholesale commodity prices continued to decline and commodity distribution by department stores increased less than is usual for November, the federal reserve board reported today in its monthly review of business and financial conditions.

"Industrial production declined about 4 per cent in November, according to the federal reserve board's seasonally adjusted index," the review said. "The output of iron and steel decreased further while the number of automobiles produced per working day continued at low level. Daily average cotton consumption increased further by somewhat more than the usual seasonal amount and the activity at silk mills continued to increase, while wool consumption decreased by an amount substantially larger than is usual in November. Production at cement mills was reduced considerably, output at meat-packing establishments increased less than the usual seasonal amount and output of minerals declined.

"Factory employment and payrolls showed decreases in November, reflecting in part changes of a seasonal character. The number employed in the clothing and shoe industries decreased by more than the usual amount, while employment at silk mills showed an increase contrary to the ordinary seasonal amount. In the industries producing building materials, including lumber, cement and brick, declines in employment exceeded the usual seasonal proportions. In the automobile industry employment declined further but by an amount considerably smaller than is usual in November."

The board reported that from the end of October to the middle of December there were substantial decreases in wholesale prices of commodities including corn, hogs, pork, hides, tin and coffee.

NEW YORK, Dec. 25—(AP)—Christmas was observed with a complete cessation of activity in the financial district today. The New York Stock and Curb exchanges, banks and the commodity exchanges will reopen tomorrow morning.

The power machinery industry has been more active during the present year than indicated by the general conditions of business, B. B. Williams, president of the Cooper-Bessemer Corp. said in a year-end review. Numerous large pipe lines for transporting natural gas, petroleum and even gasoline have stimulated demand for gas and oil engines, as well as gas compressors and oil pumps.

Ernest Kauer, president of the Ceco Manufacturing Co. in a review of the radio industry, said he believes good business will come to those who put hard as well as intelligent effort into their work. Part of the industry's difficulties were due to its own making, in his opinion, and part to general economic conditions. Mr. Kauer was of the opinion that there still are too many manufacturers in the field and that the coming year may see mergers and possibly some withdrawals.

Inquiries at the offices of Transamerica Corp. as to the approximate time when the annual statement might be expected, brought the reply that the statement will be issued on completion of the yearly audit, which the corporation hopes to receive during February or early in March.

Mrs. William N. Palmer

Friends of Helen K. Palmer, wife of William N. Palmer, of Rocky Ledge, Stonington road, were shocked to hear of her sudden death Wednesday about 6 p. m. POETRY

A Girl's Mood

I love a prayer-book;
I love a thorn tree
That blows in the grass
As white as can be.

I love an old house
Set down in the sun,
And the windy old road
That thereabouts run.

I love blue, thin frocks;
Green stones one and all;
A sky full of stars,
A rose in the fall.

A lover I love;
Oh, had I but one,
I would give him all these,
Myself, and the sun!

BRITISH CRAFT AUDREY B. WITH $125,000 CARGO AT NEW LONDON

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Dec. 25.—One of the biggest captures of liquor made by the United States coast guard forces stationed at New London was that which resulted early today in the seizure of the British steamer, Audrey B., hailing from Lahave, Nova Scotia, and laden with 2,800 cases of booze. The Audrey B. is about 125 feet in length and carries a crew of ten men, including the captain. The capture of the steamer and her valuable cargo was made in New York waters, so the boat, crew and liquor will be taken to New York tonight or early tomorrow when the crew will be presented before the United States commissioner. The cargo is conservatively valued at $125,000 and it is believed that the liquor was intended to be taken to New York for consumption in the celebration of New Year's.

The Audrey B. has long been suspected of engaging in rum trafficking and her capture today was only after gun fire had been brought into play.

The steamer was sighted near Fort Pond bay, off Montauk Point, about 2:30 this morning, by the crew of one of several patrol boats being operated in that vicinity in search of rum-carriers. When the Audrey B. was sighted the patrol boat was headed for her and, overtaking the steamer, the command was given to stop. The master, however, disregarded the order and continued at full speed in an effort to out-distance his pursuer. When the Audrey B. was apparently gradually leaving the patrol boat astern a second command was given to stop and the order again being unheeded, the order was given to fire upon the steamer. A one-pounder was fired across the bow of the steamer, but the boat did not stop and it was then ordered to direct the gun fire at the bow of the fleeing boat. This was done and when two shots crashed against the steamer she finally came to a stop. Members of the crew of the patrol boat boarded her and a search of her cargo quickly revealed it to be a choice variety of liquors. The Audrey B. was taken in charge by the federal crew and the trip to this port started. The patrol boat and the captured craft put into port about daylight and steamed to the state pier, where the latter was moored and her crew made prisoners aboard.

PAYROLL THIEF THOUGHT TO BE HEADED THIS WAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Dec. 25—The New London police tonight were requested to be on the lookout for an automobile that might pass through this city. It is believed the car is being driven by a holdup man who killed one man and wounded another, in West Haven yesterday in the theft of a payroll. An automobile with a lone passenger held up and robbed the attendant at a gasoline station outside of New Haven and the description of the thief tallies closely with the man sought for the murder.

City Cares for Needy

About 200 families, all in need of assistance were provided with bountiful holiday dinners by the city. The charity department had baskets containing meats, vegetables, bread, butter, coffee, etc., delivered to the homes of the needy yesterday afternoon and today the members of the families receiving the foodstuffs enjoyed substantial dinners through the aid of the city.

Several members of the New London police department were granted permission to remain off duty tonight, the sergeants and patrolmen desiring to spend the evening with members of their families.

STOLE $80 AND SHIRTS— ALBERT L. HUBBARD HELD

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Dec. 25.—Albert Lee Hubbard, employed as a restaurant worker, was presented in the police court today charged with breaking and entering. His case was continued to Saturday. In default of bail of $2,500, Hubbard was committed to jail. Hubbard forced entrance to the home of Luther Green, who resides at 11 Shapley street, and stole $80 and a half dozen shirts of the value of $16.50. Some of the loot has been recovered.

Green was absent from his home from 11 o'clock Wednesday morning until about 2 o'clock this morning. When he entered his residence he discovered that the house had been entered during his absence and an investigation showed that a trunk in which the money, $75 in bills and $5 in change, and where the shirts were kept, had been forced open and the cash and apparel stolen. Green reported the theft at police headquarters and said that he suspected Hubbard of committing the theft. An hour later Patrolmen Frank Linehan and Anthony Turello went to the B. P. Learned mission rooming house and found Hubbard there asleep. He was aroused and when his effects were searched the shirts were recovered and as Hubbard had about $78 in his possession it is claimed the money is the stolen cash. Hubbard was arrested and locked up.

It is claimed that Hubbard was aware of the habits of Green, also had knowledge that the money was stored in the trunk. He waited a favorable opportunity to enter the house at a time that he was aware of Green being away.

Four men were arraigned on charges of intoxication, but they were given leniency, for none of them was disciplined, being discharged with a warning to refrain from further indulgence in liquor and to conduct themselves in a manner that will not bring about their arrest again. One man was arrested on Truman street by Sergeant John Courtney when found asleep in a snow bank and with a quart of liquor by his side. Another was arrested by Desk Sergeant Frank Howard when the former went to police headquarters seeking lodging. A third was arrested on Bank street by Patrolmen John Sullivan and Arthur Feeley. The fourth was arrested on Potter street by Patrolmen Frank Philopena and Arthur Feeley.

Breach of Peace Charge

William Walker, charged with breach of the peace, was fined $10 and costs. He was arrested last night by Detective Sergeant John Cavanaugh upon complaint of John Morin. Morin was getting into his automobile on State street and was confronted by Walker, who took the former to task for an alleged utterance that Walker was not the father of a child born to him and his wife several weeks ago. During the argument, Walker attacked and beat Morin, who fell and sustained an ugly laceration of the head. Walker denied attacking Morin, but admitted pushing him. Walker claimed that Morin sustained the laceration when he slipped and fell on the sidewalk.

Will Pay For Damage

An automobile was damaged, as was a fire hydrant, early today, when the car crashed against the latter. None of the occupants of the automobile sustained injury. The automobile was being driven by Edward Marsh, 916 York street, Rutherford, N. J., and was en route to Westerly, where Marsh and his party are spending the holidays. When the auto was passing through Main street, the wheels skidded on the slippery tracks of the Connecticut company and before the driver could get the car under control, it went across the street and hit the guard rail and then the hydrant. Marsh said that he would stop at police headquarters upon his return trip and would defray any cost entailed in the repair of the hydrant.

Turkey Dinner For Needy

But five unfortunates occupied bunks at police headquarters last night for, contrary to the rule at this time of the year and with so many men out of employment, there was a small number of occupants of the tramp room provided with shelter for the night. Those who did seek and receive sleeping accommodations, went to the B. P. Learned mission lodging house, North Bank street, at noon, where they were provided a turkey dinner.

The slippery conditions of the sidewalks throughout the city last night did not result in serious injury being sustained by pedestrians, but many fell and received bumps and bruises. Several men and women fell in front of the municipal building, and others fell on Bank street, between State and Tilley streets. On the north side of Howard street, near the corner of Bank street, numerous pedestrians, one an aged man, suffered bruises by falls. The walk there was later scattered with ashes by a patrolman to prevent other pedestrians falling. Today the highway department had trucks and shovelers sprinkle sand on the walks, where it was known people had fallen the night before, as well as other slippery walks. The shovelers also scattered sand on streets where grades exist so as to prevent automobiles from skidding and figuring in accidents.

All of the members of the police department were allowed an hour today for their lunch period and practically all of the sergeants and patrolmen enjoyed the holiday repast at their homes. The added period for lunch was a half hour extra.

C. A. Caldwell Deserter

The police today were requested by Lieut. Comdr. L. C. Mueller of the United States coast guard destroyer Davis, stationed at this port, to be on the lookout for Charles A. Caldwell, seaman first class, who is ranked as a deserter, having deserted Dec. 10. At the time of his enlistment Caldwell said his home was in Covington, Ky., in which city his mother resided.

SEEK YOUTH AND GIRL WHO HAVE DISAPPEARED

A youth and a girl have disappeared from their homes in the state and today the New London police were requested to maintain a watch for either of the missing ones and arrest them if found. The youth is Francis Norton, 28 Lowe street, Norwalk. He is described as being 24, about five feet, five inches in height, and weighs about 138 pounds. He has black, wavy hair and brown eyes. When Norton disappeared he wore a blue serge suit, brown hat, brown tweed overcoat and black shoes. It is believed Norton, who disappeared today, will be found driving a Ford automobile which carries Connecticut markers S—19106. The girl, who also disappeared today, is Carmel Sanora, 16, of 1343 Whalley avenue, New Haven. She is described as about five feet in height and of stocky build. She has brown bobbed hair.

Santa carried with him gifts for the youngsters. The officers got much satisfaction out of their kindly deed.

HOW AN OUTBOARD MOTOR CHAMPION WON THE CUP

A young fellow who goes fishing and sure loves the salt water, is William Banks, mate on the good ship Ethel H. His pals called him Outboard Motor Bill. When Outboard Bill was around the age of 7 his mother used to take him away from the rain hole where a toy was sailing. As years went on, he made a study of the water and became a real fisherman as good as ever sailed out of the channel. His hobby now is outboard motor boats. He knows his stuff and Gar Wood has a rival on the water who will make the world champion go for his money on any space of water this side of the Atlantic ocean, if Outboard Motor Bill had the green dollars that are scarce as oranges, at the North pole, out west where Pole cats are bears at night time. There is not a part of the engine that he doesn't know and he can talk for several hours on outboard motors. He has a boat named What Have You, and he gives anyone a go; so he holds the championship on the Noank river in that size boat.

Gordon Clark has an outboard motor boat named Shell Drake. Oh, baby; how it can step! Barney Oldfield's auto could not catch it. The two young men got talking how fast their boats could go. As the talk got hot under Gordon's rubber collar, almost got afire, had to call out the smoke eaters, fire fighters to put it out. So a race was held for a purse of $25 and the championship, as a June day came in Santa Claus' month. Where you could go around with no sleeves in your vest and the coat left one on the rack. People crowded the shores as the boats went up the river to Mystic, where the race was to start and it was to finish at the shipyard. The judges were Capt. Elmer Hewitt, Mate John MacQuarrie and Orlando Clark. As Bruno Bracci shot the horse pistol off (the one Jesse James used to shoot Indians with) the great race was on. Billie Banks' boat "What Have You?" had the west course, while his rival Gordon Clark's boat "Shell Drake" was on the east course. Boats were lined on both sides of the river, dressed up in flags, like a Yale-Harvard regatta on the Thames river. Capt. Banks kept a little ahead, while Capt. Clark did not give the engine all it had, saving the power to the finish line that he might thrill the 1,000 people along the shore. As the racing boats passed the yachts and fish boats, sirens and whistles could be heard in the mill town of Old Mystic.

About then Capt. Clark lit up an Old Gold and was gaining on Capt. Banks, who was chewing on some rock candy that came from Vermont. At the two and one-half mile flag the race was even and happy Clark said to Outboard Motor Bill "You had better give that engine more Socony special gas if you want to win the championship or the tea cup, given by the West View Yacht club!"

But Billie only laughed and came back with an answer "For your engine castor oil would be better and help it to run without a hitch!" That sure did make Clark laugh and he lost a few sucks.

The people were waving table cloths and iron hats at the men in the boats. About 100 feet from the finish line both young salts gave all the power that the law allows. Never in the history of the fishmen was ever such a boat race held, being so close that it would make a bald-headed man's hair stand up straight like that of a cadet at West Point, as the boat What Have You? pushed the waves and over the finish line six inches ahead of the boat Shell Drake over the course of three and one-half miles.

The judge, Capt. Hewitt said "Capt. Banks is the king of the outboard motor boat class, also wins the championship $25 in one dollar bills and a tea cup from the West View Yacht club!" The crowd on the shores went wild and the boats gave a salute with horns and whistles. A good sport, like Sir Thomas Lipton, always smiling when he loses a race, that is Gordon Clark, who shook hands with his rival who is the champion of Noank. With a few words he said: "I have lost to a real fisherman that knows his onions on a boat and motors! You might live to be 50 years old before you will lose a race with such a boat. I wish you all the luck in the world when you race again with anybody that we can find, so to give all the other towns a chance at the cup and championship."

Capt. Banks thanked the good loser also hoped he will race again for he said: "Nothing in this world I like better than a good sport who doesn't get mad when he loses a race, and hope some day when the horse flies are around and the wild geese fly back from the south with no overshoes on, meaning winter has gone and summer draws on, that we will race again in the Indian harbor."

OBITUARY

Antoine Maynard

Antoine Maynard, 87, died at the home of his son, Charles, on Green avenue, Christmas day, after many years of declining health. In his son's home, where he has lived for years, he has received every care and attention from his son and daughter-in-law. Mr. Maynard was born in Canada, but has lived in Jewett City and Lisbon since he was a boy. He was one of the oldest white cotton weavers, having run looms in the old wooden Ashland mill. He also worked in the Slater mills and the latter part of his life in Aspinook bleachery. He was one of the oldest members of the Baptist church. He is the oldest member of Mt. Vernon lodge, No. 75, F. and A. M., also a chapter member of Franklin council and Columbian commandery, No. 4, Knights Templar, of Norwich. He is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Nettie Draper of Lowell and five sons, Charles of Jewett City, Alvin of Haverstraw, N. Y., Myron of St. Louis, Mo., John of Putnam and Richard of Westerly. There are eight grandchildren. He leaves a brother, Joseph, of Mystic, and a sister, Mrs. Mary Quebec of Westerly, who is ninety.

BEAUTIES OF LANDSCAPE FOLLOWING THE STORM

Many supposed there had been such a Christmas before, yet none were able to name the date when nature furnished such a wonderful display of scenic beauty. Following two days' snowstorm the sunrise Christmas disclosed a picture of winter scenery, seldom surpassed here. Every old time tradition of the storied New England winter was verified in finest detail. At David Hale Fanning park, the East Main street highlands, along the Quinebaug on South Main street, at any point where there were trees and shrubbery, there the winter artist had set up his beautiful canvas. Many went to the woodlands, or visited camps to see the remarkable snow draperies in the cedar swamps and among the pines and hemlocks. A man coming in from below Bethel found places along the country roads, where low arching shrubbery, bending with a great weight of snow had formed a crystal tunnel extending several hundred feet. While the snowfall appeared heavy within the borough limits, it was said Thursday that the places to really appreciate a 14-inch storm were in the outlying districts. Several were out during the forenoon with cameras securing pictures of the varied winter landscapes.

Larry Olsen, of Sylvandale, comes in for the public spirit blue ribbon for he cleared half the Quinebaug bridge side walk Christmas morning of the heavy snow. When he arrived at the Lisbon town line in the center of the river, spirit level measurements, Larry quit the job, and George can do the Griswold end.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theatre

Stage, screen, literature, arts, fashions and the Fourth Estate are in evidence in the personnel of the cast supporting Will Rogers in what is expected to prove his most triumphant audible picture, "Lightnin'" from John Golden's most successful stage play. Rogers, undoubtedly the best known personality in America, has perhaps the most varied background of any in the public eye.

Claremore, Oklahoma, was the setting for the start of his professional career. Caught doing roping stunts for a medicine show, an alert vaudeville agent sensed possibilities in him and soon after he was doing a vaudeville act.

From the vaudeville stage it was but a short step to the "Follies," the talk taking precedence over the roping tricks and his intimate and seemingly crude knowledge of the news of the day, his intimate manner of conveying it to his audience, catapulted the Oklahoma cowpuncher to fame as a stage star, lecturer, newspaper paragrapher, feature story writer and the most sought after American as an after dinner speaker.

That personality and other assets he brought with him to audible pictures, first with "They Had To See Paris," later with "So This Is London," and now with "Lightnin'."

From the stage, via vaudeville and musical comedy, and, later, via silent pictures, comes Louise Dresser, rated the most beautiful matron in pictures and the most talented character actress on the screen.

The daughter of Rogers in the picture is Helen Cohan, daughter of the beloved George M. Cohan, whose chief asset at the moment is heredity for she had but a brief stage experience when she took a test for Fox Films and was signed to play her current role.

"Lightnin'" starts tomorrow for a four-day run at the Broadway theatre.

Palace Theatre

Charles Farrell, who attained instant fame in "7th Heaven" and "Sunny Side Up" is the young lover in "The Princess and the Plumber" starting at the Palace Saturday and running for four days through Tuesday, the beautiful little Irish lass, Miss Maureen O'Sullivan, who was seen in "So This Is London" and "Song Of My Heart" is the sweet little princess, and when this pair get together you can expect big things.

The story is a faithful adaptation of Alice Duer Miller's recent serial in a national weekly, and deals with the love affair between the lonely little princess of Daritzia and the young American engineer who comes to look over the heating plant in her royal father's castle. Not knowing the girl is a real princess, the engineer gravely tells her he is the Duke of Mamaroneck, and when each discovers the other's real identity, the basis is laid for a series of hilarious misunderstandings.

Farrell as the engineer and Miss O'Sullivan as the princess make a thoroughly delightful team, and their work presages many re-appearances together. H. B. Warner is perfect as the impetuous Prince Conrad, and Joseph Cawthorn adds to the comedy of the film as the all-in-one official of the little village.

To complete this fine bill a Charley Chase comedy and several short subjects and the latest news are shown.

Get your tickets now for the New Year's eve midnight frolic at the Palace, 10 acts of high class vaudeville as well as a feature screen attraction.

CHURCH CHOIRS SANG CAROLS AROUND TREE

Wednesday evening carol singing was held on the green at Niantic by the choirs of the Niantic churches. The committee comprised Rev. J. S. Pennepacker, the Rev. Yvo O. Wain, the Rev. A. E. Darby and Father E. A. Flynn.

The living Christmas tree which was planted last spring and presented to the town by the Niantic chamber of commerce has borne its first fruit. It was decorated with colored lights and shone in all its beauty. The tree is 15 feet high and of perfect shape, which adds to the beauty of the green the year around. The Boy Scouts carried water during the dry spell last summer to keep the tree alive.

Some people are pleasant to talk to but unpleasant to listen to.

COLUMBIAN COMMANDERY K. T. HOLDS ANNUAL CHRISTMAS OBSERVANCE

With a large attendance the annual Christmas observance of Columbian Commandery, No. 4, Knights Templar, was held at 11.45 o'clock Thursday morning at Masonic Temple, corner of Washington and Sachem streets, in conjunction with similar observances held by Knights Templar commanderies under the Grand Encampment of Knights Templar of the United States of America. An inspiring Christmas message was delivered by Rev. Robert H. Parkes, of Yantic.

Toasts were given to Most Eminent Grand Master William L. Sharp and to various commanderies in the state. These, with greetings from a number of commanderies in Connecticut, were read by Recorder Harry B. Ford. Sentiment to Most Eminent Grand Master Sharp prepared by the committee on Christmas observance of the grand encampment of Knights Templar of the United States and the grand master's response were read by Recorder Ford as follows:

To William L. Sharp, Most Eminent Grand Master:

The star in the east, which appeared to the shepherds in the hills and on the plains of Judea, and which guided the wise men to the manger in Bethlehem, is still shining, in undimmed effulgence for all those who have faith in Him who was the Christ-child, and who made the greatest of human sacrifices in offering up his life in early manhood, to redeem mankind from sin.

The anniversary of the birth of this lowly Nazarene is again approaching, and on that day, while the Christmas bells are rining out their gladsome message, "Peace on earth, good-will to men," the Knights Templar of America will stand for a little while uncovered while they drink a toast in memory of Him who was the saviour of the world, and whom they taught to call "Immanuel," and to you as the head of an order founded upon the Christian religion, and the practice of the Christian virtues.

Had not Christ lived Templary would not and could not exist. You are nearing the end of your term as most eminent grand master, and the voices of the Templar hosts go up in thanksgiving that you have been spared to render such splendid service to an order whose characteristics so completely harmonize with your daily walk of life.

May your life be long spared, and, may the memory of your three years of distinguished service, and the many friendships formed, be to you and yours as fragrant buds in that beautiful bouquet of precious memories which you will ever hold and cherish.

To which the grand master responds as follows:

The reception of such a message of appreciation, confidence, good-will and esteem, more than compensates for any sacrifices of time which may have been made by the grand master in the discharge of his official duties, while the many valued friendships formed, will continue to be a source of real happiness through life.

While the great order of Christian Knighthood has suffered, like all other fraternal societies, from the present prevailing business conditions in this country, there is no cause for alarm, for the fundamental and underlying principles of our great order, and the many things for which it stands, are firmly rooted in the hearts of men, and the best of them will be glad to unite with us when normal conditions again prevail.

If we but follow, as nearly as possible, in the footsteps of our crucified and ascended Saviour, the world will be better because of our having lived, and our great fraternity will hold still higher place in the estimation of mankind.

I am truly grateful for the support and assistance given me by grand officers and sir knights everywhere, and while I shall retire from office with a feeling of relief, there will ever remain with me the most pleasant recollections of my years of service.

To grand commanders, and commanders of subordinate commanderies under the immediate jurisdiction of the grand encampment:

The foregoing toast of the most eminent grand master and his response thereto are transmitted to you with request that you extend an invitation, through the proper officers, to all sir knights within your jurisdiction to join in the sentiments expressed, on Thursday, Dec. 25, 1930, at some convenient hour, preferably at noon, eastern standard time, (equivalent to 5 p. m. Greewich).

MONSIGNOR McCORMICK AT ST. MARY'S MEMORIAL CHURCH

Five masses Christmas morning at St. Mary's Memorial church found large congregations present at each service, with many receiving the sacraments at the first four masses. Low masses were offered at 6, 7, 8 and 10 o'clock, with the 9 o'clock being the high mass for the day. The low mass at 6 o'clock was offered by Rev. Arthur B. Sullivan, curate of the parish; the 7 o'clock by the pastor, Rev. George J. Donahue; the 8 o'clock by Rt. Rev. Msgr. Patrick J. McCormick, D.D., of the Catholic university, Washington, D. C.; the high mass at 9 and the low mass at 10 by Rev. Father Donahue. Father Donahue, at the last four masses, extended the greetings of the priests to the congregation and Father Sullivan in like manner at the 6 o'clock mass.

The altar decorations were of choice cut flowers, while trees were in the foreground of the sanctuary, being arranged by the Altar society.

The crib decorations of the stable at Bethlehem, showing the scenes at the birth of the Saviour, were at St. Joseph's altar and attracted the attention of many communicants.

The Christmas offering went to the pastor and his assistant and proved to be of a generous nature.

Father Donahue in his Christmas message, said in part:

"The simple and the wise were the earliest to greet the Burning Babe. The really wise and simple still vigil and adore with each recurring Christmas. The church seems to accentuate this detail in the selection of her evangelists for the day. In the earliest mass it is Saint Luke, physician and especially artist, who tells the sweet old story with all the colorful details dear to the heart of an artist, while in the later mass Saint John lifts the curtain on the Divinity of the Christ-Child with enough thought and Greek phraseology to delight even old Plato. Saint Luke and Sain John might easily counterpart shepherds and kings! Come then to the crib and if you happen to be artists you may revel in a world of poetry, light and song, and if you think you think, ask the Babe how God can become man; how Omnipotence can possibly be pleased in bonds. If you come as Chesterton counsels — 'like children walking through the snow and rain,' you will not only find the Babe but achieve the peace promised to men of good-will."

URGES PROGRAMME OF COMMUNITY TREE PLANTING

According to the annual report of the state park and forest commission, the acreage of state forests has increased more than 25% in the past biennium. The total acreage of the forests owned by the state Nov. 30 was 9,879 acres, of which 3,363 acres, or 34 per cent has been donated by public minded citizens and organizations, the total number of state owned parks being 39, and their total cost $1,230,628.

The annual report will be ready for distribution early in 1931.

Since October 1, 1913, receipts of the state park and forest commission have totaled $2,427,921, of which $1,530,264 was from state appropriations, $812,077 came from service operations; $30,099 from rents and products of the forests and $55,480 was derived from gifts, cash and interest.

Of this sum $1,131,370 was expended for the purchase and development of land, and $1,294,852 for recurring expenses of operation and administration of the forest system.

Despite this expenditure by the state, overcrowded conditions are being felt in some of the parks, notably at Hammonasset beach, according to Field Secretary Albert N. Turner. Comparative reports of the three summer months for 1928, 1929 and 1930 show that 111,440 automobiles were registered on the counter as having visited the park during the past summer as compared with 69,699 in 1928 and 109,067 in 1929. The number of bathers increased from 117,401 in 1923 to 151,199 last summer and the number of campers from 12,393 in 1928 to 13,412 this year.

The week end camp was visited by 4,842 parties representing 112 towns in this state and 23 states in the union during the past two years, according to the report, while the long term camp, which is smaller, attracted 854 parties from 74 towns in this state and 13 states in the union.

Secretary Turner, in his report, points out that the overcrowded situation has a tendency to work its own cure, in that people avoid an overcrowded space, and states that "when that occurs the primary purpose of a state park is defeated." He says that overcrowding is not easily put into figures, since the capacity of a park varies not according to its size, but according to its facilities for the comfortable accommodation of visitors and for their recreation.

The basis of a plan for the systematic working out of the potential capacity of a park given the attendance records for three years or more has been indicated as a result of the study of Mr. Turner. Attendance records of the various parks for the past 11 years have been studied and a logistic curve has been plotted for each park in the light of this study and information collected by Dr. Raymond Pearl of Johns Hopkins university.

The figures indicate that the normal growth of the rate of attendance in the various parks begins slowly and proceeds at an increasing rate to a high point, after which the rate decreases slightly until it settles at an average at which those visiting the park utilize its entire capacity for recreation. This data, which might appear irrelevant to the layman, is expected to be of great value in outlining a national park policy, although the theory must be tested further before final conclusions may be made.

A preliminary study of the attendance records by this method indicates the need of developing further the Hammonasset beach park, which is capable of having its capacity doubled at comparatively small cost. Mr. Turner recommends that additional parking space be secured at Lake Waramaug and Mount Tom, but warns that the wisdom of materially enlarging the present capacity of these parks is at least debatable. Completion of the development of the Black Rock project is recommended as desirable at this time, while improvements or additional land may well be obtained at Squant Pond, Indian Well and the Devil's Hopyard.

But 19 of the state parks are now in what is termed "active use," and these areas account for 85 per cent of the total land costs and 99 per cent of the development costs, Mr. Turner points out.

In the 11 years beginning with 1920, the state parks have been visited by 7,200,000 persons, each visit being in effect a vote for the popularity of the state forest system, Mr. Turner declares.

The report of the general superintendent contains detailed reports of the work done in each park during the past biennium.

Allen B. Cook, shade tree inspector, reports an increase in the interest evidenced by towns of the state in preserving the trees along the highways, but notes that very few communities are planting trees in desirable places, and urges a program of tree planting by every community.

"COLLEGE NIGHT" FRIDAY AT COMMUNITY SYNAGOGUE

Special services especially for the Norwich young men and young women who are home from college for the Christmas holidays will be held at the regular Friday evening service of the Community Synagogue of Norwich. It will be observed as "College Night," according to Louis Goldblatt, secretary, and Saul Sussman, a junior at Brown university, Providence, will speak on the subject, The Jew at College. The sermon will be preached by Rev. Simcha Rabinowitz of the New York Theological seminary, whose theme will be along the same line as Mr. Sussman's.

NORWICH TOWN

THREE MASSES CHRISTMAS AT THE CATHOLIC CHURCH

Christmas was observed at Sacred Heart church with three masses, all of which were attended by large congregations. The decorations in the sanctuary were baskets of poinsettias arranged among palms and ferns. On the altar, evergreen, poinsettia, roses, carnations and other flowers were attractively arranged, under direction of the Altar society. At the gospel side of the altar was a reproduction of the Christ Child's crib. The first mass was at 6:30. At the 8:30 mass the junior choir sang carols and hymns, under direction of the organist, Mrs. William A. Murphy. The last mass was a high mass at 10 o'clock, when the senior choir sang Bonner's Mass, with Miss Mary Buckley and Charles McNally soloists. Before reading the gospel of the day from the second chapter of St. Luke, the pastor, Rev. Edward J. Quinn, at all three masses, wished his parishioners a holy and happy Christmas. At each mass a large number received holy communion. The high mass at 10 o'clock closed with Benediction of the Most Blessed Sacrament. During the 8:30 mass, several new small altar boys were in the sanctuary for the first time.

Mr. and Mrs. George Geer, of Plain Hill road, entertained a Christmas dinner party at their home that included Mrs. Samuel Norman, her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. George Norman, and children, Stewart and Priscilla May Norman, of Jewett City, also Mrs. Josephine Parker. An excellent roast goose dinner was served by the hostess.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles La Varge, Miss Elizabeth Myrtle and Charles La Varge, Jr., were dinner guests at a Christmas party at the home of Mrs. La Varge's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Meehan. Others present included their other son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Portelance, and daughter, Miss Sadie Portelance, also their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. John Meehan, and family, Brenden, Mary and Loretta Meehan, of Yantic; the daughter who resides at home, Miss Lavina Meehan, and Miss Mary Meehan, sister of the elder Mr. Meehan.

To Present Pantomime

Sunday night in the First Methodist Episcopal church the Christmas pantomime, "At the Door of the Inn," will be presented, under direction of Mrs. Harry Norrington. The pantomime has a cast of about 30 characters and the scene is in Bethlehem. It will be a part of the evening worship which begins at 7:30. Last Sunday night, the pastor, Rev. George Warren Potter, gave a reading of a cutting he made of "The Story of the Other Wise Man," by Henry Van Dyke. Doris Rose, assistant organist, played for the service.

Christmas at the Johnson Home was enjoyed in full measure by members of the family. The introduction to the festivities came as a surprise Christmas eve, when the chorus serenaded the home, singing carols, following the community Christmas tree celebration on Norwich Town green. The home is a brilliant spectacle each evening, with lighted candles and in the bay window in the large sitting room is a handsomely decorated tree lighted. Christmas morning Santa Claus arrived and to each one able to come down stairs presented eight or more gifts. The dining room had been made attractive with decorations of red and green paper, red candles and poinsettia, to the delight of the family.

Mrs. Mary Webb, an invalid confined to her room, shared in the Christmas pleasure, as when she awoke, to her great surprise, a beautiful little decorated tree had been placed in her room while she slept.

Of the 14 members of the home, three were entertained at dinner in the homes of relatives, Mrs. Jackel, Mrs. Pendleton and Mrs. Hunt. Those who remained at home were served a delicious dinner of fruit cup, roast chicken, mashed potato, onions, mashed turnip, celery, cranberry sauce, pumpkin pie, fruit cake and fruit, figs, nuts and candy.

Interested friends of the home family remembered each one with an abundance of cards. The largest gift received was that of a beautiful radio, presented the home by the board of trustees.

Several King's Daughters' circles made special gifts. The generous display of lights on the tree, as well as books to every member, was from Grace circle, Ever Ready circle presented candy, Euphenium circle provided ice cream and cards for all, while Home chapter of the King's Daughters gave money to each one in a neat little folder. Miss Porteous, as usual, sent oranges. The family is appreciative of the efforts of the matron, Mrs. Madeline Martin, in arranging so much pleasure for those at the home.

From the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Gillette K. Martin is passing the holiday recess with his mother, Mrs. Madeline Martin, of Norwich Town.

THEFT CHARGE AGAINST JAMES BARRY DROPPED

The case of James Barry, 26, of North Main street, charged with theft, was nolled at the Thursday morning session of the city court. The accused was charged with having stolen $12 from Walter Mercik, No. 24 North Thames street. It was charged that he returned $2 of the money, but retained the remainder. Barry was taken into custody by Officer Hugh McAvoy early Thursday morning.

Hard work is the only sure cure for an ingrowing grouch.

THREE CHRISTMAS CHECKS FOR POLICE PENSION FUND

Three checks, two for $25 each from the American Thermos Bottle Co. and the Chelsea Savings bank, and one for $10 from the Norwich-New London Sign Co., have been received by Chief George Linton of the police department for services rendered by the police. The letter from the Chelsea bank, Frank Hempstead, vice-president and treasurer, follows:

We are enclosing herein our check on the Thames Bank and Trust Co., for $25 to add to the fund for the policemen. We take quite a deep interest in our police department as we consider it a very good one.

The following is the letter from the Thermos Co., Aurin E. Payson, president: Please find enclosed this company's check for $25 which I would be pleased to have you place to the credit of the policemen's fund. This company is grateful for the courtesies that are extended to them from time to time by the police department and it gives us pleasure at this season to send this evidence of our appreciation of these officers during the year.

EARLY MORNING SERVICE AT GERMAN CHURCH

A forceful Christmas message was delivered by Rev. Carl Storek, the pastor, at an early morning service at the First Evangelical Lutheran church on Franklin street. The service was held at 7 o'clock and was largely attended. In his sermon, Rev. Mr. Storek spoke as follows:

"Messages in the form of postcards, letters, telegrams, night letters and radio programs were sent from place to place and across the continent these last few days, bearing the glad Christmas greetings. I am going to read a message that comes direct from heaven. It was delivered by an angel at night near Bethlehem in the land of Judea. It contains exactly 58 words: 'Be not afraid, for behold I bring you good tidings of great joy which shall be to all the people; for there is born to you in the city of David a Saviour, who is Christ the Lord. And this is the sign unto you: Ye shall find a babe wrapped in swaddling clothes, and lying in a manger.' Luke has recorded it in the second chapter of his gospel that later generations—among them our own—should receive it anew every Christmas season.

"A better message I have none, for with Paul I will say: 'For I am not ashamed of the gospel, for it is the power of God unto salvation to everyone that believeth.' Fear not! Many are tortured by a fear of some kind. Like the people in an old town in the middle ages (14th century) were afraid of the black plague that depopulated whole countries and drove these people behind locked doors and drawn window shades because of the fear of contagion, so mankind is still seeking shelter in dark places, but as those frightened people forgot their terrible fear on a certain Christmas midnight and came out to join a brave singer of the Christmas message and were saved not only from fear, but also from the dreadful disease, so shall everyone be delivered of fear and every trouble who will lend his ear to the gospel and live thereby, for God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son that whosoever believeth on Him shall not perish, but have everlasting life. For 'Earth has no sorrow that heaven cannot cure.' This is my Christmas message to you, and in the name of Him who gave it I wish you all a happy and blessed Christmas."

The church was filled almost to the last seat for the 7 o'clock service when the choir opened the service with the processional, Come Hither, Ye Faithful, played by the organ and church orchestra. A large star suspended from over the high altar arch was suddenly lighted. A large tree was also lighted and beautiful wreaths and evergreen baskets adorned the chancel and church. The beautiful altar flowers were given by the choir in memory of the late Rev. P. F. Werth, a former pastor of the church. The choir rendered two beautiful Christmas anthems, in the German language. The service in English and German closed at 8:15 o'clock. Gifts and cheerful Christmas greetings were exchanged freely after the service, among those who attended. A committee composed of Mrs. F. Kellish, Anna Retkovske and Harry Hildebrandt took gifts and flowers to Uncas-on-Thames. Gifts were also taken to the Norwich State hospital and to the sick and shut-ins of the church.

In the evening the Sunday school held its programme with a pageant, recitations and carols. Gifts were distributed at the close of the service.

CHARGED WITH VIOLATION OF AUTOMOBILE LAWS

At the Thursday morning session of the city court George E. Gross, 49, of Norwich, was presented on a charge of violation of the motor vehicle laws and his case was continued to today (Friday). His arrest followed an automobile collision Wednesday. Motor Patrol Officer Clifford Crary was the arresting officer.

J. OLIN HOWE, FORMER NORWICH MAN, DIED SUDDENLY IN NEW YORK CITY

NEW HAVEN, Dec. 25—(AP)—J. Olin Howe, former Connecticut newspaperman, who died Wednesday night at the Grand Central station in New York as he was about to board a train, was one of the best known news writers in the state during the years he made his home in Waterbury.

He became secretary to the late Congressman George L. Lilley during the greater part of the latter's service in Washington prior to 1908 and then returned to do special writing and press association work. For several sessions he was at the general assembly doing special work. About 1915 he went to New York city to do free lance work and became a contributor to various publications. His last work of importance covering a period of three years was to prepare material for a history of aviation and the story of man's attempt to fly by artificial devices from earliest times. This work completed, Mr. Howe looked forward to a return to Connecticut.

It was a coincidence that there were two Howes in newspaper work during the same period of years, both doing free lance writing, and both members of the Laurel club, which is made up of men who do legislative newspaper work. Both went into journalism in New York city. The other was Alfred Howe, once mayor of Derby and later a staff member of the New York Herald. He wrote his last copy several years ago.

J. Olin Howe's family belonged in Norwich and his lineage went back to the early days of the state.

J. Olin Howe was the son of Mr. and Mrs. William R. Howe who resided on River avenue, Laurel Hill. He was graduated from the Norwich Free Academy, class of 1896 and began his newspaper career with The Bulletin Co. Mr. Howe was a member and former president of the Norwich Society of New York and was a man of splendid personality and a brilliant newspaper writer. Surviving is a sister Winifred Eva Howe, of New York, a graduate of the Norwich Free Academy, class of 1895.

Mr. Howe was well known in Norwich and his many friends here were shocked to learn of his sudden death.

Mr. Howe was 56 years old. He was for some years a congressional secretary in Washington, was organizer of the McKinley association of Connecticut and was a familiar figure at political conventions. He was appointed director of the manufacturing census for Connecticut in 1910 and was at various times connected with the news bureaus of the Boston Transcript, Springfield, Mass. Republican, and the New York Tribune.

Mr. Howe was a member of the international advisory board which recently completed a collection of prints and documents which record 5,000 years of man's conquest in the air.

NORRIS WOULD ABOLISH THE ELECTORAL COLLGEE

Political Nonconformist Will Cling to the Republican Party—Doubts if "We Could Start Out Now and Get Much of a Nucleus" For a Third Party, Therefore Would Not Be a Candidate For President of Such a Party—Pays Tribute to John Dewey, Who Suggested That the Nebraskan Lead a Third Party Movement

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26—(AP)—Senator Norris today eliminated himself as a possible third party candidate for president in 1932.

At the same time, the Nebraskan republican independent served notice he would begin in the next congress a fight for abolition of the electoral college provision of the constitution "so it would be possible for a man to run independent of any party in the United States."

Commenting on the letter of Dr. John Dewey, head of the League for Independent Political Action, suggesting that Norris leave republican ranks and lead a third party movement, the Nebraskan told newspaper men it would be futile to attempt to organize another political faction with any hope of success as long as the electoral college exists.

"I doubt if we could start out now and get much of a nucleus behind a third party movement," he said, adding that under the present two-party system national conventions "pay little heed to the rank and file."

"Now, in order to nominate a man," he asserted, "for practical purposes you have got to organize in every congressional district and select candidates for the electoral college. It can't be done in any case without the expenditure of untold sums of money. Then, if it is done, the voter is forced to face a list of candidates as long as your arm."

After saying he would introduce an amendment to the constitution to abolish the electroal college, Senator Norris said:

"I'm not a candidate for president. I'll not be a candidate for president. I'll probably be dead before this reform can be brought about."

While this statement was regarded as eliminating Norris for the time being as a third party candidate two years hence, early speculation on the next presidential race continued to keep such names as Borah of Idaho and Pinchot of Pennsylvania to the fore. Both, however, have given no intimation of their intentions.

When asked what the republican independents of the west might do to "influence" the 1932 election, Senator Norris said if the democrats nominated a real "progressive," many of his group would support him. Norris, who bolted his party two years ago to vote for Alfred E. Smith, the democratic nominee, did not commit himself on that point, but indicated strongly he would do likewise.

Discussing at length what he termed the "impracticability" of organizing a third party as long as the electoral college system continues, Norris said the "special interests" seek to control both republican and democratic parties.

He said it was expected President Hoover would be renominated and "it is an open secret that the power interests are trying to nominate a democrat who will be satisfactory to them."

Asked to be more specific, he said "known emissaries of the power trust are busy now trying to line up the democratic party for Owen D. Young."

Norris said he regarded Dewey as "one of the leading thinkers of the country."

"There is no doubt," he added, "his letter was written in the very best of faith and without any selfish motive. Nevertheless, I feel that in a practical sense at least the suggestions which he has made cannot be followed by the progressives in and out of the senate who think and believe as I do."

"I realize," he continued, "that I am talking to men who know more about politics than I do. I don't expect a lot of the people of the country to agree with me. I do not look upon a party as anything sacred. I look upon a party only as an instrumentality of government.

"I do not believe that a man who has at heart the good of the country can look upon a party as something that is sacred, that it is more than a mere instrumentality of government. A public official, from road supervisor to president, ought not permit partisanship in the slightest degree to control his official action. He ought to be moved entirely and exclusively by what he believes is his duty to his country and the people at large. If he obeys the oath of office he has no legal right to do otherwise."

Norris argued a political party "does not belong to a few self-appointed alleged leaders.'

"With due respect to all leaders," he continued, "I can say the republican party does not now belong to Mr. Hoover or Mr. Lucas. It did not belong to Mr. Harding, Mr. Sinclair, Mr. Dougherty or Mr. Fall. For a time, it is true, these men were in control.

"A new party would be subject to the same criticism that I think can rightly be made against our present political parties. For the purpose of illustrating the point and without reflecting on anybody, take present conditions. People run to Mr. Hoover to find out where the republican party stands on any issue that may arise. They may never have thought of the issue when he was elected.

"The trouble is that under our present system the people have to vote for one man or the other. Often it is a case of voting for the lesser of two evils.

"A man ought to follow his own convictions no matter whether he differs from the president or not. The special interests seeking legislative favors don't care a continental about either party. If we had at this time, for instance, a president who favored the preservation of the natural resources and opposed turning them over to the power trust for private gain you would find thousands of so-called leaders in his own party denouncing him."

Norris contended the people "don't really select our presidents."

"Under our system," he said, "the president must first be nominated before he can be elected and he is elected by the electoral college. The founders of the constitution thought they were granting discretion to the electoral college. But it has become a form now, a fifth wheel to a wagon.

"What we need is a system by which the rank and file can get control of a party any time they have a mind to."

Norris cited the nomination of Theodore Roosevelt on a third party ticket in 1912 as illustrative of the impediments in the way of successful independent political movements.

Regarding Robert H. Lucas' challenge of Norris' republicanism, it was pointed out to the Nebraskan that Frank R. McNinch, of North Carolina, who voted for Mr. Hoover in 1928, was nominated to the power commission as a democrat.

"Yes," Norris replied, "on Mr. Lucas' theory McNinch is a republican. And on Wood's theory McNinch is a demagogue."

Representative Wood, republican, Indiana, holds Norris is neither republican nor democrat, but a "consummate demagogue."

INDEPENDENT POLITICAL LEAGUE ORGANIZING

NEW YORK, Dec. 26—(AP)—The League for Independent Political Action is organizing local branches and state committees all over the country to lay the foundation for a new political alignment, United States Senator George W. Norris of Nebraska was told in a letter sent to him tonight by Howard Y. Williams, executive secretary of the league.

The Williams letter seconded the suggestion of Dr. John Dewey, chairman of the league's national committee, that Norris head a third party.

"We are not seeking to be a new party ourselves, but only to do the ground work," Williams wrote. "There is nothing we want for ourselves except to see politics in the United States used in a more creative and constructive way.

"There is no question about the rising dissatisfaction with the old parties among people in every walk of life."

CONVICT COMES BACK TO PRISON AFTER THREE YEARS

TRENTON, N. J., Dec. 26—(AP)—A convict who fled the Leesburg State prison farm three years ago went back to his old cell today of his own accord, beaten by conscience and the hard world in which he had tried to lose himself.

Norman Emmons telephoned Col. E. B. Stone, the prison keeper, that he was coming. In half an hour he was again in custody. But he was not allowed to remain long in his old quarters. Emmons was placed in solitary confinement and an extra "stretch" will be added to his seven to 12 years term for the escape.

The contrite convict said he had been in Baltimore recently, working his way north to surrender. Two robbery charges were made against him while he was at liberty, in Salem and Gloucester counties. His two alleged confederates have been captured.

3 YEAR OLD BOY BURNED TO DEATH IN NORWALK

NORWALK, Dec. 26—(AP)—A three year old boy lost his life and his brother and a fireman were severely burned early today when fire destroyed the home of Mr. and Mrs. Percy F. Barnum in West Cedar street.

Tonight Mr. and Mrs. Barnum with their nine other children were installed in a tenement on Taylor street. With all their own furniture and clothing lost in the blaze, necessities were contributed by neighbors.

The dead boy is John Barnum, youngest of the 11 children. Donald Barnum, 16, is in Norwalk hospital with severe burns, while Percy Barnum, jr., 17, who discovered the fire as the family slept, and who aroused them, is nursing an ankle injured as he leaped from a window.

GOLD NUGGETS FOUND IN CROP OF A TURKEY

FORT WILLIAM, Ont., Dec. 26.—(AP)—A Christmas turkey may start a gold rush to the Lakehead district.

This one brought in two gold nuggets in its crop, one the size of a pea and the other slightly smaller, which gave a thrill to J. C. Fregeau, the lucky purchaser, who bought it from W. Kilson.

Kilson has excited the countryside. He is trying to trace the shipments of birds that probably have been grazing on a farm where gravel most likely is peppered with gold.

Small pieces of gold were found last year in several Christmas turkeys.

SOVIET SECRET SERVICE USED FORGED PASSPORTS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26—(AP)—The use of forged American passports by members of the Soviet Russian secret service, was described in a report made public today by Chairman Fish of the house communist investigating committee.

The report was made by G. Agabekoff, formerly an operative of the Ogpu, soviet secret police, now living in Paris.

"Almost all of the representatives of the third internationale travel abroad with American passports which give them entrance into all countries and permit them to carry on communistic work without arousing suspicion," he said.

The Russian said a special office was maintained to fabricate all sorts of documents, particularly passports and false certificates. In addition, he said, voluminous files of English and American documents were kept in Moscow for use by the secret police.

"English diplomats unwittingly rendered valuable service to the soviet government through their detailed reports to the foreign office," Agabekoff said. He added reports of the English envoy to Washington and the activities of the American government were "a permanent source of information to the Ogpu."

Fish said he was convinced that everything Agabekoff said was accurate.

CHARLES A. LEVINE IN MORE LEGAL TROUBLE

NEW YORK, Dec. 26—(AP)—Charles A. Levine, aviation enthusiast, who recently was held by Vienna police in a counterfeiting mixup which he subsequently explained away, faced new troubles today when a subpoena was issued asking him to tell the district attorney how he came into possession of $21,900 worth of missing securities.

The Fidelity Deposit company, of Maryland, asked to have Levine summoned for the inquiry, charging that the stock, 100 shares of American Telephone and Telegraph company, vanished while en route by messenger from one downtown house to another.

According to the summons, Levine pledged the missing stock at the Manufacturers' Trust company as collateral for a loan last May. The Fidelity agent said he would subpoena bank officials to tell the sum of the loan.

Levine's attorney declared his client would be able to explain his possession of the stock to the company's satisfaction.

OBITUARY

Frank McKinney Hubbard

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 26— (AP) — Frank McKinney Hubbard, whose witticisms have been given to newspaper and magazine readers through the medium of a tall, gawky character known as "Abe Martin," died suddenly at his home here today. Death followed an attack of heart disease.

After his death his close friends and associate learned that he was 62 years old. He would never tell them his age.

He disliked personal publicity but was prevailed upon several years ago to prepare an autobiography. In this he told of his boyhood at Bellefontaine, Ohio, the place of his birth, of his yearning to be an actor or show man and of his ultimate development into a newspaper artist and humorist.

It was 26 years ago that he drew his first "Abe Martin" for the Indianapolis News.

Henry Snyder Kissam

NEW YORK, Dec. 26—(AP)—Henry Snyder Kissam, 64, prominent architect and scion of an ancient line, died here today of heart disease. He had been ill a year.

Kissam, a graduate of Columbia, studied in Paris and on his return in 1893 established a business in New York. He was supervising architect for the Buffalo exposition in 1899-1900.

Four N. H. Road Cars Jumped The Rails

Several Hundred Passenge[illegible] Were Jolted at Park [illegible]nue and 141st Stre[illegible]

NEW YORK, Dec. 26—(AP)—[illegible]veral hundred passengers on an inbound New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad train weathered a severe jolting without trace of panic tonight when four cars jumped the rails.

The mishap was at Park avenue and 141st street, where the tracks run below the street level before entering the terminal tunnel.

Police and railroad employes led the travelers to safety at the Mott avenue station.

No one was hurt, but traffic was held up three hours.

The train was bound from Stamford, Conn. Delay was caused to northbound trains from Grand Central.

About 3,000 commuters, to Westchester and southern Connecticut points gathered on the lower level of the terminal. Railroad officials were kept busy answering questions concerning the delay. Parties were organized and taxicabs and buses hired for nearby towns.

Trains were made up in Portchester and other Westchester towns. Some holding tickets took buses to those points.

In the waiting rooms and cars a number of bridge and poker games got under way and the crowd became good humored.

Of several thousand travelers on the upper level many had skis and skates and apparently were bound for winter sports in upper New York state and Canada.

Among the important New York Central trains delayed were the Cleveland Limited, the Southwestern express, the Lake Shore Limited, The Detroiter and the Western express. The Gilt Edge express, on the New Haven line, scheduled to leave at 6 o'clock left the terminal at 7:45 o'clock. On both lines, between 40 and 50 trains were affected. At 8 o'clock service was normal.

Difficulties in clearing up the right of way led to an announcement later that normal traffic out of the city could not be resumed until late tonight.

Lightnin' Bill Jones

Remember the line in the lovable play Lightnin', when Bill Jones received his pension check from the government? "See all them names on there—secretary of the treasury, secretary of war, and so on? This check ain't any good unless I sign it!" said Bill with an air of importance.

And he was right. Without his little endorsement the check was a mere scrap of paper.

CLASS PASSENGER FARE SYSTEM FOR RAILROADS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26—(AP)—The class passenger fare system widely used on European railroads is finding new advocates among carriers in the western states.

Two lines—the St. Louis-San Francisco and the Santa Fe—have received permission from the interstate commerce commission to use second class tickets, and G. J. McGuire, secretary of the Western Passenger association, indicated today in Chicago a possibility that other southwestern companies might seek to meet a two-cent a mile rate authorized on the Frisco.

Under the commission's order, the Frisco is permitted to sell the second class tickets for use only on day coaches. It is expected to put the plan into effect early next year.

Arms and ammunition had been secured and a demonstration had been set for Christmas eve, it was declared. The demonstration, however, was cancelled when its leaders learned the government was aware of their plans.

Colonel Hevia was taken to Cabanas fortress.

SCORES WATCHED MAN JUMP TEN STORIES TO DEATH

NEW YORK, Dec. 26—(AP)—Scores of brokers and their clerks late today watched a diamond merchant, David Polak, 54, throw open a window of his Nassau street office, climb to the sill and jump ten stories to death in the busy street.

A Temporary Govt. [illegible]ated In Monaco

[illegible]ce Louis Has Dissolved Both Legislative Bodies—Prince Rules as Dictator

MONTE CARLO, Monaco, Dec. 26—(AP)—Prince Louis of Monaco took things into his own hands today, dissolved both the legislative bodies of the little principality, established a temporary government which is tantamount to a dictatorship, and put an end for the time being at least to the political squabbling which have torn Monaco for months.

His move came as a surprise to the people, who have assailed him bitterly for what they call his neglect of the affairs of state. His decree dissolving both the national and municipal councils—the only legislative and executive bodies Monaco has—came on the heels of a riot two days ago in which the country's 100-man army was hard put to it to win even a moral victory.

Feeling ran high in Monte Carlo this evening, and there were many gatherings of protest.

Prince Louis, it became known, will not authorize another election until the present trouble has cleared up and the suspended premier, Eugene Marquet, has appeared before a tribunal on fraud charges in connection with his brother's real estate failure.

Military precautions are being taken to maintain order in the tiny principality over the week end, with the army strongly mobilized.

Opinion is divided over whether France will be asked to intervene or will be forced to do so if further trouble occurs Saturday or Sunday. A battalion of French troops is quartered halfway between Nice and Monaco, and several divisions are strung out along the Franco-Italian border.

EXPLAINS DISMISSAL BY THE POWER COMMISSION

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26— (AP) — Chairman Smith of the power commission said today the dismissal of three of its employes had been decided upon by a quorum of the commission members and that Frank R. McNinch of North Carolina and Ralph B. Williamson of Washington had not been consulted because they had not taken the oath of office.

Smith's explanation came after McNinch had telegraphed friends here that he had not been consulted about the dismissals which have brought a demand from a group of republican independents that the confirmation of the commission appointments be reconsidered by the senate.

The discharge of Charles A. Russell, Frank E. Bonner and William V. King was the first official act of Smith, Marcel Garsaud and Claude L. Draper after they took the oath.

The five commissioners, prior to swearing in the three, however, had agreed that no appointments would be made until all had been seated and had held their first meeting, Smith said. He added that the three had power to act and since McNinch and Williamson had not taken the oath, they were not members.

ESCAPED BANK ROBBERS CAPTURED IN CAVE IN NEB.

RUSHVILLE, Neb., Dec. 26—(AP)—Harold "Spike" Domnisse, 28, and Forest Cook, 23, escaped bank robbers, today were captured in a cave eight miles south of Chadron by a posse.

The two men had battered their way out of jail at Alliance, Neb., yesterday while scores of persons participated in a Christmas program in front of the building.

After less than 19 hours freedom, Domnisse and Cook were back in jail here awaiting transfer to the state penitentiary to begin serving twenty year sentences for robbing the First National bank of Hay Springs last Sept. 18 of $14,000.

Although Domnisse and Cook were armed with weapons stolen after the escape, their capture was effected without resistance.

ROBBERY OF $8,000 JEWELRY CONFESSED BY THREE MEN

NEW HAVEN, Dec. 26—(AP)—Three men arrested here late today are reported to have confessed to local police that they robbed John Lener New York merchant, of cash and jewels worth nearly $8,000 in the Hotel Woodstock, New York, Tuesday night.

The men are: Joseph Serrano, 26, of New York; William C. Rogers, 23, Chicago, and George R. Wilson, 22, East Orange, N. J.

In a valise in the room taken by the three in a local hotel, police found two revolvers, one containing two discharged shells. Tonight detectives questioned them concerning the holdup and shooting here Wednesday in which one man was almost instantly killed and another fatally wounded by a robber who escaped with the $4,000 payroll of the Allingtown branch of the American Mills company.

Only $500 in cash has been found in their possession.

Members of U. S. Chamber of Commerce Vote 2158 to 679 That the Federal Government Should Permit the States to Control Their Water Resources—Vote 2596 to 226 That Municipally Operated Utilities Should Be Subject to the Same Regulation as Privately Owned Utilities

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26—(AP)—Private operation of power facilities and regulation of them as far as possible by the states is favored by members of the chamber of commerce of the United States.

The organization today made public the results of a referendum on the power question in which 1147 commercial organizations and trade associations belonging to the national chamber participated.

A vote of 2158 to 679 was registered in favor of the proposal "that interstate power, so far as now incapable of regulation by states, should be regulated through concurrent action of state agencies made effective by the federal power commission, and only in the event of failure of concurrence on the part of the state agencies should be regulated directly by the federal power commission."

MAXIMUM PENALTY FOR A YOUTHFUL EXTORTIONIST

KANSAS CITY, Dec. 26—(AP)—Admitting an attempt to extort $25,000 from R. A. Long, wealthy lumber man, Charles L. Duncan, 23, was sentenced to two and a half years in the Missouri penitentiary in criminal court today on a charge of third degree robbery.

Duncan became the second youth sentenced to prison by Judge Ralph S. Latshaw on charges resulting from attempts to extort money from Mr. Long. The first was Thaddeus S. Wilson, a school teacher, convicted in 1911 of attempting to extort $5,000.

Duncan was arrested Wednesday when he started to recover a decoy package placed by detectives at a place designated in letters received by Mr. Long demanding $25,000.

The youth maintained his innocence through 20 hours of questioning, confessing, police said, when confronted with identical misspelling of words in the threatening letters and in a test made by officers.

Duncan suddenly expressed a desire to plead guilty today and was taken before Judge Latshaw. The youth told the court he was normal mentally but was afflicted with epilepsy.

The sentence pronounced was the maximum provided by Missouri statues.

ELDERLY PERSONS VICTIMS OF FAKE STOCK PROMOTION

NEW YORK, Dec. 26—(AP)—Indictment on mail fraud charges of 17 persons connected with a stock promotion scheme which allegedly defrauded elderly persons in all parts of the country of $1,250,000 over a four-year period was disclosed today by the United States attorney's office.

Among the subscriptions to stock of the Automotive Royalties corporation were 29 clergymen whose losses were the Automotive Royalties corporation placed at $150,000 by Assistant United States Attorney Tompkins.

Clark W. Parker, 63, a trustee of the Church of the Stranger in New York, and his son, Wyman, were among those indicted and were described by Tompkins as the head of the promotion scheme. Many purchases for stock in the company, which was represented as marketing a "marvelous" automobile invention, were obtained through the efforts of the late Dr. Eugene Christian, vitamin food specialist, Tompkins declared.

MAJOR RAMON FRANCO A STEERAGE PASSENGER

LISBON, Dec. 26—(AP)—In striking contrast with his triumphal arrival in Lisbon after his flight to South America a few years ago, Major Ramon Franco left here tonight for Antwerp as a steerage passenger.

With him was his inseparable friend and mechanic, Pablo Rada, who, with Franco, escaped from Spain after their abortive revolutionary attempt of ten days ago.

There were few friends at the quay to say farewell. Clad in a shabby tweed suit, a khaki military overcoat and a gray cap, and with no baggage except a small bundle of necessities acquired at Lisbon, Franco looked the typical emigrant.

He told the correspondent he had not decided upon his plans but that he would stop a few days at Brussels, before going to Paris. He took a Belgian steamer because it made no stops at Spanish ports.

JAPAN PROTESTS SOVIET ACTION CLOSING BANK

MOSCOW, Dec. 26—(AP)—The commissariat of finance today charged the Vladivostok branch of Bank of Korea with illegal trading in soviet currency in a statement explaining why the bank was ordered closed on December 18.

The soviet action in closing the institution drew a protest from the Japanese foreign office, which said it considered the closing unjustifiable and unfriendly.

The commissariat's statement today declared that the bank had been illegally dealing in soviet currency from January 1, 1927, until August 9, 1930, involving a total amount of 71,368,257 rubles (about $35,000,000). The commissariat stated that rubles were sold at much lower prices than fixed by the soviet government, giving a profit to the bank of about 3,285,000 Japanese yen, (about $1,600,000).

TULSA, Okla., Dec. 26—(AP)—The problem of preserving more than 30,000 small oil wells in northeastern Oklahoma and southeastern Kansas, whose chief market outlet will be withdrawn January 1 when the Vairie Oil and Gas company ceases to be a purchaser, was tackled in earnest by the petroleum industry today.

HUGE DISTILLING PLANT RAIDED IN CAMDEN, N. J.

CAMDEN, N. J., Dec. 26.—(AP)—Police today raided a huge distilling plant, the equipment of which they valued at upwards of $250,000.

Two employes, who gave their names as Samuel Friedman, Brooklyn, and James Carey, New York city, were arrested. They said they had obtained their positions through an employment agent named "John Smith" in New York about six weeks ago. They were unable to furnish any information concerning the owners of the plant, declaring they received their salaries at midnight each Saturday from an unknown man. Instructions for their work, they said, were left in an envelope.

Seven tanks on the first floor contained about 15,000 gallons of mash and on the rafters supporting the roof were six coolers, each with a capacity of 5,000 gallons. More than $1,000 empty five-gallon cans also were found and in the office was a half-berrel of alleged whiskey.

EARTHQUAKES KILL 33 AT LA POMA, ARGENTINA

SALTA, Argentina, Dec. 26—(AP)—In the little village of La Poma, hidden in the rugged foothills of the Andes, the crude adobe huts which were the homes of its families, were piles of wrecked masonry tonight and men went about turning over the debris looking for the bodies of their neighbors.

Disaster in the form of an earthquake took at least 33 lives there on the day before Christmas and 60 more persons were seriously injured. Most of the bodies have been recovered but it was almost impossibl to make a definite tally of the number of casualties.

An American engineer, J. N. Stone came out of the La Poma district today, reporting that inhabitants of the vicinity still feared to return to the villages lest another landslid bring new danger. Many who fled to the open fields at the first shock have remained there for the past two days.

SCANDAL INVOLVES TOWN OFFICIALS OF WOLCOTT

WOLCOTT, Dec. 26.—(AP)—Probability that Wolcott town officials not yet scheduled to appear as witnesses in the current town scandal involving two constables and a grand juror, will be called to tell what they know of the alleged extortion of "protection" money was seen today following the second session of the now famous blackmail trial.

Additional names of town officers were dragged into court under cross-examination of a prosecution witness by Defense Attorney Thomas F. McGrath this afternoon, indicating that others had knowledge of the case on the evening of the second, when two of the three defendants were arrested on charges brought by Antonio Marino, convicted bootlegger, that the three demanded money in payment for protection from the hand of the law.

Officers said Rinker has served 18 months in the Kansas State reformatory. Floyd Storer, cashier of the Peru bank, was shot and dangerously wounded by the robbers.

MIAMI BEACH, Dec. 26.—(AP)—The nation is returning to a normal condition after a period of too much pessimism induced by business depression, in the opinion of Harvey Firestone, tire manufacturer, here to spend the holidays with his family.

People appreciate the value of a dollar more now than they did in the days of extreme optimism, Mr. Firestone said.

"Except for unemployment, America is in the best condition now of any nation of the world," he said. "People just don't realize it fully."

CITY RETURNS TO ITS NORMAL STATE AFTER HOLIDAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Dec. 26.—In homes and stores time was devoted today to getting back to normal, even the weather having a finger in the pie by trying gallantly to remove all traces of the flaky snow that made of Christmas day a beautiful one. Much of the business on the streets today consisted of exchanging gifts for suitable sizes and colors.

At the postoffice Postmaster Frank M. Smith was making a final check of the tremendous volume of business done during the rush period. This check showed that a grand total of 104,703 pieces of first class matter were handled from Saturday to Wednesday night.

The Windham almshouse was one of those charitable places that was invaded by the Christmas spirit. Superintendent Joseph Nolan and Mrs. Nolan, matron of the home, served a turkey dinner to 37 inmates on the holiday. Added to the generous supply of edibles provided from the almshouse larder were many gifts. B. C. Hallock furnished ice cream; Manager Charles E. Mayo of the Nathan Hale hotel gave boxes of cigars for the men and candy to the women; the Misses Paschall and Litchfield gave novelty candies; the Salvation Army assorted cookies, and candy was given two blind inmates by the Lions' club. On Christmas eve the inmates were entertained at a party given by the Ladies' Catholic Welfare council and James E. Lynch was Santa Claus at a tree party. Previously in the week another party had been given by a delegation from the First Congregational church.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Max S. Kuehl

Mrs. Max Schenker Kuehl, 58, died at her home in Hanks' Hill, Mansfield, early this morning. She was born in Germany, Feb. 11, 1872, a daughter of Jacob and Josephine Mossbruk Schenker. Besides her husband the deceased leaves one daughter, Miss Margaret Kuehl, four sons, William, Martin, Walter and Harry Kuehl, all of Hanks' Hill, and a sister, Mrs. Freda Mallberger, of Germany.

Charles Franklin Olin, 60, for 26 years advertising manager of the New Departure Manufacturing company of Bristol, who died at his home in that place Thursday, was a former resident of this city. Among his survivors are two sisters, Mrs. Sadie Carpenter of this city and Mrs. Pete LeRoy of Hartford, and a brother, Walter Olin, of this city.

At the Tolland county jail the 18 men confined there were treated to a roast pork dinner served by Keeper A. Esten Clough. An anonymous friend gave each prisoner a package of fruit. It was the first Christmas in years that the jail was without one or more women inmates.

A story that was purposely withheld until after Christmas because of its drab aspect concerns Willimantic's 25-cent "flop" house. The term "flop" house is a recognized one in the vernacular of tramps and down-and-outers and originates from the metropolitan cities where overnight standing room against a rail, a chair-sleep or a floor mattress can be had in a room having a large stove for a centerpiece at rates ranging from a nickel up to about a quarter. The local flop house is more dignified in that it is rented by the room. Owing to the fact that these rooms are unheated, the occupants usually pair up for comfort. The rooms, without bath, in question are in a former boarding house located on Main street and across from the town building. Christmas night the police were called there to remove two transients who lacked the necessary funds. They were taken to the cell room at headquarters and were most pleased by the transfer upon finding the cells heated. Occupants of the flop house generally bring in their own "heat" as indicated by the presence of dozens of bottles of bay rum and various tonics of alcoholic content in the rooms. In practically all respects the flop house is an undesirable place but the police are overlooking many of its shortcomings because they realize that modest though it may be it is as a heaven to the tired, wet and hungry knight of the roads who holds just enough respectability to try to keep out of the jails while waging his vain quest for work.

Albert Marche, 31, of Eagleville, was taken to St. Joseph's hospital this forenoon with a dislocated hip suffered while at work in the woods near his home.

The manufacturing plants of the American Thread, Holland Silk, Windham Silk and Rossie Velvet companies remained closed today and will not resume operations until next Monday morning. The plants of the Willimantic Silk, Inc., and Kobe Silk company were open today, resuming regular day and night schedules after the holiday.

The traffic signal on Main street, at the head of Railroad street, was damaged this afternoon when struck by a car operated by Edward Breault, 17, of 2 Anthony street.

A thaw, followed by rain this afternoon, was rapidly melting off the snow and traveling was an uncomfortable and messy job. Street department men were clearing out gutters to allow a free flowage and preparations were made to sand over streets and sidewalks should a freeze come on during the night.

A New Year's social will be held at the Y. M. C. A. next Thursday evening with a program to include a basketball game, reception and dance.

Tangled up in the mass of Christmas mail this week was the first shipment of day-old chicks to arrive by parcel post for local delivery.

Two more transients were taken to the county jail to work out 30-day sentences imposed in police court this morning on charges of intoxication.

CANTATA, THE HOLY CHILD TO B EGIVEN SUNDAY EVENING

"The Holy Child" will be sung at Colchester, Sunday evening at 7:30 by a united chorus of more than 50 voices. Singers will gather from Columbia, Gilead, Hebron, Marlboro, Westchester and Colchester for the presentation of this Christmas cantata, which will be conducted by George Curtis Munson, who produced The Holy City in such a successful manner in Hartford this winter. This program by the Tri-county union of churches will make a wide appeal to its constituency because it introduces a novel feature, inasmuch as it represents the cooperative effort and united talent of the six communities that make up the union.

The chorus has been faithful in its preparation and its members have gathered frequently from their widely separated communities for group rehearsals. They have perfected their work with increasing enthusiasm. Mr Munson has brought to the assistance of the Tri-county union several voices from the Hartford County Choral and Orchestra society. Mrs. W. O. Seyms of Colchester is accompanist.

Coasting is forbidden on the streets in the borough but the children have a splendid opportunity to exercise their sleds on the hills in Hyde Park.

STATE'S CLIMATE MAY CHANGE DUE TO RECEDING GLACIERS

PORTLAND, Ore.,— (AP) —Waning glaciers in the Cascade range of Oregon are being studied by geologists.

There is speculation among them as to the possible effect a continued diminishing of glaciers might have on western Oregon's summer weather.

Alpinists who scaled the North Sister in the Three Sisters region found the snout of Collier glacier more than 200 feet receded from the position it had held for years.

The entire glacier field had become a wilderness of yawning pits and crevasses, with scarcely a handful of snow on Prouty pinnacle and the Dillard and Hayden glaciers badly shrunken. The "eternal" patch of snow below "The Chimney" had completely disappeared.

EARTHQUAKE CRACKS TRACED TO MOISTURE

PALO ALTO, Calif.,— (AP) —One cause of crevasses in the ground during earthquakes is traced at Stanford university to moisture differences.

On a shaking-table, which was constructed by Prof. F. J. Rogers shortly after the 1906 earthquake, sand surfaces which are wetter in some areas than in others are subjected to artificial quakes.

The wet sand swings to and fro in a wider vibration than the dry, and reverses the motion of its vibration more quickly than the dry soil. In the region between the wet and dry areas this causes crevasses to appear.

Desert Plants Long-Lived

TUCSON, Ariz.— (AP) —The state flower of Arizona, the showy white sahuaro, comes from an unusually long-lived plant, having the same name. Dr. Forrest Shreve, head of the Desert laboratory here of the Carnegie institution, estimates sahuaros live 150 to 175 years.

POETRY

The Hilltop

The hilltop sang to the hollow—
"I'll cast my shadow o'er you!"
And around the beautiful meadow
The shades of the hilltop drew:
The shade of the hilltop holy
That claspt in its warm delight
The vales of the utmost dreaming
And the gates of the far-on night.

It is splendid there on the summit,
In the kiss of the airy wine;
But something down in the valley
Is also rich and fine:
That feeling of old protection
When the hilltop shadows fall
And field and the fairy meadow
Are claspt in the hilltop's pall.

Oh, man in your wandering, wandering
To the hilltops first you go!
And now to the humble valleys
That lie in the shades below;
To the shadows of the valley,
To the peace and rest of things
When the shade of the holy hilltop
Folds you in its wings.

—Baltimore Sun.

Aspects Of The Pines

Tall, sombre, grim, against the morning sky,
They rise, scarce touched by melancholy airs,
Which stir the fadeless foliage dreamfully,
As if from realms of mystical despairs.

Tall, sombre, grim they stand with dusty gleams
Brightening to gold within the woodland's core,
Beneath the gracious noontide tranquil beams—
But the weird winds of morning sigh no more.

A stillness, strange, divine, ineffable,
Broods round and o'er them in the wind's surcease,
And on each tinted copse and shimmering dell
Rests the mute rapture of deep-hearted peace.

Last, sunset comes—the solemn joy and might Borne from the west when cloudless day declines—
Low, flute-like breezes sweep the waves of light,
And lifting dark green tresses of the pines.

Till every lock is luminous, gently afloat,
Fraught with hale odors up the heavens afar,
To faint when twilight on her virginal throat
Wears for a gem the tremulous vesper star.

—Paul Hamilton Hayne.

DANIELSON

GOOD RESPONSE TO APPEAL FOR STRICKEN FAMILY

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Dec. 26—A considerable number of persons today responded to the appeal in aid of Mr. and Mrs. George Sarantopolous and their children, the family having lost all their possessions when their home was destroyed by fire early Wednesday morning. At the Danielson Trust company sums of money for the relief fund came in from various individuals today and there also have been contributions of clothing for the members of the family. An effort is being made by representatives of the insurance company having the risk on the house to get very prompt adjustment of the loss.

As the house, newly built, was mortgaged, the bulk of the insurance money will go to the bank holding the mortgage, so there will be little relief from this source for the stricken family. Meanwhile, the family has taken quarters in the Greek community house at the corner of Water and Cottage streets, and interested persons are striving to assemble enough household equipment to permit of the family getting along in some degree of comfort.

Warden Gaston A. Maindon gave warning today that property owners who have new concrete sidewalks built jointly by them and the borough must clean them of snow. There has been widespread neglect of this duty following the recent snowstorms.

Asking Bids for Highway Work

Bids being asked by the state highway department for the construction of 26,500 feet of water-bound macadam highway in the towns of Canterbury and Lisbon means that an optional route out of this territory into Norwich will be completed within a few months. This is the route out of Brooklyn southward to Canterbury Green. The link to be built in the near future is the last required to give an unbroken stretch of state highway directly into Norwich. It is certain to be a very popular route, as it also is a very pretty one, and will greatly relieve the traffic density on the present route to Norwich via Plainfield and Jewett City. The cost of the new route through Brooklyn and Canterbury was borne jointly by these towns and the state.

Highway crews continued sanding state highway routes through this territory today. The work they did greatly relieved the danger of cars skidding, especially on hills and curves. Highway plows had removed all but a thin film of hard-packed snow by yesterday. This film began to disappear by noon today under the influence of a light rain and a temperature that climbed up to forty degrees.

FUNERAL

Charles Freniere

Funeral services for Charles Freniere, 64, who died suddenly at Elmville, were held at 2 o'clock this afternoon at L. E. Kennedy's Funeral home on Furnace street, Rev. William Swainson pastor of the Congregational church at Dayville officiating. Burial was in the High street cemetery at Dayville.

It's vacation time for pupils in Danielson's schools and there is, or was up to this afternoon, good coasting. This set of circumstances again has set up the same dangerous situation as has been the subject of discussion here for several winters past—that of coasting in streets where there is heavy automobile traffic.

Danielson has no restrictions as to where the children shall slide. They make their own selections and just naturally pick some very dangerous places. There were several narrow escapes from accidents today, as drivers of cars were startled at the recklessness of some of the youngsters. Carter and Franklin streets were two of the thoroughfares crowded with children and their sleds, and Reynolds street also attracted numbers of them.

Such an amount of belated holiday mail arrived here this morning from all parts of the country that it was necessary to keep four extra men on duty today and press an additional motor truck into service to handle the parcel post matter.

Christmas night's incoming mail also was heavy and remained for distribution today. Early this afternoon the work was cleared up and the office running along on a normal basis again. The receipts of the Danielson office for the year that will end next Wednesday night will be far ahead of any other twelve month period in the history of the office.

It was noted by postal workers here that practically all of the many thousands of cards handled were in envelopes and went as first class mail. Unlike some postoffices, the experience here was that parcel post matter increased in volume.

This week's timely farm topic from the County Farmers' association has to do with pastures, and shows how good pasture help to meet the low cost of milk. Climate, soil and a large amount of suitable land with low values give Windham county farmers a splendid opportunity for realizing much from their pastures, County Agent Raymond E. Wing points out. In their present condition most of these pastures are so poor that the summer grain bills are nearly as large as those of the winter months. By proper treatment these pastures can be made to mean a saving of at least one-half of the summer grain bill, all of the roughage feed in summer and the lengthening of the pasture season from one to four months. In a pasture demonstration at Storrs superphospate returned $8.54 for each dollar invested, limestone $2.64 and nitrogen $1.27, while potash has not returned the original cost. These figures are for the first five years of treatment and do not give credit for the vast improvement existing at the end of the period.

A large portion of pastures hereabouts can be very much improved by merely top dressing with lime and superphosphate.

ALLEGED BANDIT LEADER NOW IN COUNTY JAIL UNDER $15,000 BONDS

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Dec. 26 — Harry Abrams, alleged leader of the silver bandit gang, was brought here from Providence this afternoon in custody of Lieut. Ross V. Urquhart and State Officer Royal V. Scranton of the Danielson barracks. Abrams, who had fought and delayed extradition from Rhode Island for about a week, lost out this morning when Governor Norman Case of the neighboring state signed the necessary papers for his return to Connecticut.

Abrams was brought here, but not presented in the Killingly town court. A bench warrant had been issued for him, so he was taken to the office of the clerk of the superior court in Putnam and placed under bonds of $15,000. Being unable to furnish this amount he was taken over to the county jail in Brooklyn, and will be held there until the superior court for the county again begins the consideration of cases on the criminal list, in February.

JEWETT CITY

SANTA CLAUS' AGENTS GET BIG KICK OUT OF GOOD DEEDS

Some of the many men and women who delivered packages and baskets of Christmas cheer are beginning to tell of the wonderful reward they received. It was a remuneration that didn't go into their pockets. One man said, "It's something— Oh! I don't know! Anyway it was there and we got it," adding that "where the need seemed the most urgent, we took away the most. Strange isn't it? but we had it, and it was under our shirts." Thanks to the report of a distant neighbor, facts concerning the needs of one Stone Hill family were made known in the borough. Say! those people, and there are lots of small chaps and little misses in the household, received a visit which they didn't expect from the little fat man with the cherry nose. There was a feed from the Elks that would knock one's eye out, a big fresh pork shoulder, tea, coffee, sugar, milk, potatoes, cookies, bread, apples and a lot more and Oh! Boy, shoes, stockings and three pairs of brand new overshoes The country roads were blocked with snow, the house is miles from anywhere, but three men got them there just the same. What's the answer? The mother cried, the children danced a hornpipe, while the father stood speechless.

PUTNAM

LAST OF CHRISTMAS MAIL IS DISTRIBUTED

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Dec. 26. — The mailing staff and force of city and rural letter carriers at the local post office breathed easier today as the last of the Christmas rush was lugged into channels of delivery. It was said this afternoon that the holiday tide of business surpassed any post office record of the past. Tonight, normal conditions were prevailing at the office, although clerks and mailmen clearly evidenced the strain under which they have been working for the past week. Only one city delivery of postage was made today, but at that carriers did not complete the rounds until regular quitting hours.

An item in the Danielson column this morning was to the effect that the Christmas volume of mail handled in that town emphatically suggested the urgent need of new post office quarters. The same situation exists in this city and doubtlessly in other communities along the line where inadequate facilities are serving the postal needs. However, in Putnam, those intimately concerned with the post office prospects are resting easier, since officials of the post office and treasury departments of the federal government have recently visited this city, where sites for the location of a new federal building were inspected. The result of the inspection is anxiously being awaited even though no word of government recognition is anticipated for sixty days.

Katz Case Comes Up Today

Max Katz, who is being held at the county jail in Brooklyn for trial in city court in Putnam to answer for a charge of fraud, will be presented before Judge M. H. Geissler, Saturday morning. Although Katz steadfastly maintains that he is innocent of the charges being pressed against him, it was understood tonight that he did not intend to combat the forces of law any further than a reasonable extent. Should the police in their attempt to secure a conviction in the local court, and such a thing is not likely to develop, Katz will be taken to Willimantic for trial, where an even stronger case against him exists. The man, who is believed to hail from Providence, was arrested a week ago by State Officer H. M. Mayo of Danielson barracks, after he was alleged to have swindled Miss Nellie Stone of Sunnyside avenue, out of a valuable antique table. Two days after his arrest Mrs. Morgan Butler of Willimantic appeared at the police barracks and identified as hers, an antique chair which she said was taken from her. She later described Katz as the antique reproducer who called at her home, and paid $5 for the loan of the furniture.

FUNERAL

Francois Brodeur

The funeral of Francois Brodeur was held this morning from his late home on Maynard street, with a requiem high mass at St. Mary's church at 9 o'clock, which was largely attended by relatives and friends. Rev. U. O. Bellerose celebrated the mass and was assisted by Rev. Leon Jegou, chaplain at the provincial house on Church street, as deacon and Rev. Joseph Normand as sub-deacon. A special service of requiem music was rendered by members of the 9:15 o'clock choir under the direction of Miss Rose Metras, church organist. Burial was in the family lot in St Mary's cemetery. A committal service was conducted by Rev. Fr. Bellerose. The bearers were Gaudias Rivard, William Jolly, Henry N. Benoit, Dr. A. E. Parent, Joseph Perreault and Adelard Marion.

Police made little headway today in an effort to definitely establish the identity of an unknown man picked up on the state highway Tuesday morning in an exhausted condition, who claims to be Frank Bellete of Houston, Texas. Bellete, who also claims to be Frank Bleke of Nashville, Tennessee, has been at the Day Kimball hospital for the past two days. He regained consciousness Thursday morning and since then his condition has been normal. A wire received from police of Houston, Texas, this afternoon, said that no evidence could be found to substantiate the man's claim that he hailed from the Lone Star state. It was reported in this column this morning that a purse of $90 was found in Bellete's clothes when he was taken in custody Tuesday. Captain of Police A. J. Dubreuil stated today that in commenting on details of the case he misinterpreted the symbol appearing on the blotter, preceding the figure "90" which he said should have been 90 cents.

ONE OF THE WORLD'S SHAKIEST SPOTS

"The Izu Peninsula, center of the Japanese earthquake, is one of the world's 'shakiest' spots; for two weeks before the recent disaster, the inhabitants of the peninsula were shaken by an average of 300 tremors a day," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C. headquarters of the National Geographic Society.

"The peninsula is one of the east coast appendages of Honshu, principal island of the Japanese archipelago. It lies on one of the forks of the western Pacific volcano ridge which passes down the Asiatic coast and through the East Indies.

"Izu has not been in the spotlight in recent years as the center of major earthquake disturbances. However, Yokohama and Tokyo, which were practically leveled by a quake in 1923 are but 40 and 60 miles, respectively, northeast of the head of the peninsula.

"Throughout the northern part of the peninsula are hot springs which enterprising Japanese have developed into thriving resorts. Atami, where it is reported 120 houses were destroyed, nestles in an extinct crater at the northeast corner of the peninsula. A portion of the crater is submerged in the Bay of Sagami. Among Atami's 6,000 residents, are members of the Japanese nobility.

"Ito, where many houses are reported destroyed by fire resulting from the earthquake, is also a popular spa. The hot springs spurt salty water and the chief problem of the city fathers of the resorts is to procure ordinary drinking water. Mishima, near where a score of people lost their lives, is the largest city on the peninsula, with 11,000 inhabitants.

"Shimoda, on the eastern coast of the peninsula, came into the American spotlight in the middle of the last century when a treaty was ratified there which first opened Japan to foreign trade. In 1853 Captain Matthew Calbraith Perry, U. S. N., sailed up the Bay of Sagami to Shimoda, went ashore with 300 men and delivered letters from President Fillmore to a representative of the Japanese emperor. In the spring of 1855 the first treaty between America and Japan, providing among other things for the opening of Shimoda to American trading vessels, was proclaimed.

"America's first diplomatic representative to Japan resided at Shimoda. It was a tidal wave and earthquake that caused the diplomatic offices to be removed from Shimoda to Yokohama in 1859."

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace Theatre

Now playing at the Palace for the next four days is "The Princess and The Plumber," with Charles Farrell who has endeared himself to the fans of this city by his young and ardent love-making. Charles Farrell, one of the screen's most popular leading men, and Maureen O'Sullivan, the meteoric little Irish colleen, will be seen together in many more offerings if their work in this picture is any criterion.

The opening scenes cleverly establish the locale and the leading players, who meet without knowing each other's real identity. Their mutual and horrified recognition later, brings about plenty of hilarity, as well as starting the train of obstacles to the romance. These include a highly sophisticated villain, an American millionaire who unsuspectingly hastens the love affair, a case of mistaken identity, a hurried marriage under false pretences and a kidnaped airplane, with everything coming out rightly in the end but not before the audience has been thoroughly entertained with the swift situations. The comic acting honors go to Joseph Cawthorn as the village jack of all offices. His hat trick alone is worth the price of admission. The other members of the cast keep their work on the same high level.

A Charley Chase comedy and several short subjects as well as the latest news make this a most pleasing entertainment. Don't forget to get your tickets for the gala frolic New Year's eve midnight show at the Palace, 10 acts vaudeville, feature Talkie, novelties and all that goes to make the New Year's opening remembered.

United Congregational Church

The Boy Scouts meet in the Scout room, as usual at 7:30 o'clock Friday evening.

Broadway Theatre

Will Rogers, international wit and philosopher, is one Hollywood star who has no taste for the public eye. He has never attended the premier presentation of one of his pictures. When such an event is about to take place Rogers invariably finds it convenient to be at some distant point or on the way to one in an airplane.

Rogers does attend previews of his pictures, but on such occasions, manages to remain in hiding until the theatre lights are dimmed before he makes his entrance and gropes for the single seat that has been reserved for him. When the picture is finished and the lights go up, he is missing, having made a quiet exit before the final fadeout. He is on his way home before the first of the audience reaches the street.

"Lightnin'," starting today at the Broadway theatre for a four days' run, was adapted from John Golden's tremendously successful stage play and was directed by Henry King. Rogers, in the leading role is supported by a cast that includes such notables as Louise Dresser, famous for her mother roles, Helen Cohan, youthful and talented daughter of the distinguished George M. Cohan, Joel McCrea, popular leading juvenile, J. M. Kerrigan, outstanding character comedian and Sharon Lynn.

Large hopes sometimes from small foundations grow.

Look to the Future
"The business of life is to go forward"
—SAMUEL JOHNSON

We are passing through a period of financial readjustment. Excesses of speculation and extravagance have been curbed. In both business and individual life a sounder, more normal viewpoint has been gained.

Conditions similar to those of the past year have been experienced and weathered before. They recur as a phase of the economic cycle. They are temporary. Progress may pause—but it does not stop. Already signs point to increasing confidence and renewed business activity.

The future, as always, is bright with opportunities for those who will be prepared to take advantage of them.

The present is a time for sound judgment, wise planning, and unselfish, constructive cooperation.

THE STATE BUDGET

In making its recommendations to the next general assembly, the state board of finance and control has dealt with the problem in a manner to take care of recognized needs. That it should deem it necessary to turn down certain propositions which it did not consider pressing at this time for those which were recognized as necessary is in accord with good judgment.

According to the budget which has been presented, the board believes that expenditures slightly in excess of $52,000,000 will be justified for the next two years. While this recommends an increase of nearly $8,000,000 there will be a permanency to certain of them so that they will not figure in the expenditures for the future.

A certain large share of this increase will come from the outlays necessary to bring the institutions of the state up to requirements. It is with the idea of taking care of the unfortunates and providing the facilities necessary to do it that substantial increases in the appropriations for such institutions are recommended. But the board in preparing the budget has not lost sight of the fact that there is need for economy. Emphasis is placed upon that in spite of the excellent financial condition of the state, for it is desired to maintain that good standing, and it is interesting to note that the board believes the increased outlays can be made without any new taxation.

All Connecticut has interest in this state budget. It should get the close study of all members of the general assembly in particular for it has been amply demonstrated that it is wise to pay-as-you-go and it is desirable to take care of the necessary while avoiding extravagance.

There will be general interest in the proposal to use a million a year to look after the rural roads of the state, and eastern Connecticut will note with satisfaction that there are provisions in the budget for extensive construction at the tuberculosis sanatorium, where added facilities for taking care of the long waiting list are greatly needed, also at the Seaside sanatorium. With the provision for tuberculosis patients sufficient beds should be provided in the state for all those seeking treatment.

In addition, the Norwich state hospital would receive several new buildings, the Mystic Oral school would get a new building and considerable outlays would be made at the Mansfield training school and at the state farm for women.

The budget is expected to serve as a guide to the legislators and it is impossible to overlook the fact that it has been prepared by those who are in close touch with state conditions.

CHICAGO'S MAYORALTY

What must be regarded as a strong answer to the announced candidacy of Mayor Thompson of Chicago for reelection is the statement by Judge J. H. Lyle that he will seek election as the next mayor of that city.

Municipal Judge Lyle has been waging a strong fight against the gangsters in Chicago. He recognizes that the time has come when something more than his efforts from the bench are needed if the undesirable conditions there are to be cleaned up. That he is prepared to carry the banner for such a clean-up ought to be received with a hearty welcome in the Windy City for if anything is needed there it is a political housecleaning. Out to put an end to the "ruthless, arrogant, unchecked reign of terror by gangsters and racketeers" in that city, Judge Lyle points out that "the one point in Chicago where all the lines that touch crime and racketeering converge" is the mayoralty. Thus he realizes that his fight is not only against Mayor Thompson and his supporters but that his supporters can be depended upon to include that menacing element which has brought such unfavorable publicity to the city and is responsible for the reign of terror.

Where Judge Lyle stands does not depend upon what he has said in connection with his announcement as a candidate. He has repeatedly voiced such an attitude from the bench. His decisions have been in keeping therewith. He has done his best to uphold law and order and to fight the undesirable element. His ambition to be mayor comes solely from his recognition of the need of a change in that office if conditions are going to change. The futility of a municipal judge trying to accomplish it is apparent.

With a candidate who apparently has all the earmarks of the man for the office and really seeking the opportunity to do for Chicago what it has long needed, it remains to be seen what the voters are going to do about it.

Does Chicago want to be cleaned up? Does it want to get rid of its gangsters and racketeers? Are there enough voters in Chicago demanding better conditions to put him in the mayor's chair? Will they unite upon one candidate or will they accept a fleet of candidates and thus divide the Thompson opposition?

As in the past, the decision rests with the people of that city. Conditions there are enough to arouse them if such a thing is possible.

REPORT ON ENFORCEMENT

That the Wickersham committee is making every effort to get its report ready for early presentation doesn't indicate what will be reported. It does indicate that an agreement has been reached and that at no distant date it should be known what the committee has found and what it believes should be done as the result of the information obtained.

The committee has been at work for more than a year and a half. It has been engaged upon a big task, one that might cause it to go on indefinitely if it undertook to dig into every sideline that is suggested. The commission has made a preliminary report in regard to prohibition enforcement, enlargement of powers of federal commissioners and the rights of defendants to trial by jury.

There has been hope that the commission would express itself in regard to the 18th amendment and whether, as the result of the facts it has gathered, it believes it is possible to enforce the Volstead act. It has also been hoped that in case it did not believe enforcement was possible that it would indicate what course should be followed in order to meet the situation. The committee has been able, through investigators, to get an inside view of conditions throughout the country and it is to be expected that it will be guided in its views to a large extent by what it has learned. If it believes that enforcement is possible, enforcement that would accomplish so much more than is being done that there should be a marked contrast, it should say so. If it believes that public sentiment is such that enforcement is impossible it would be a help to the country if it would set forth what course it believes should be followed. If it reaches the conclusion that there should be a modification of the dry law, some idea of what that modification ought to be should be conveyed to the country. Likewise, it is to be expected that the commission will have something to say in regard to the effect which conditions that have developed under prohibition have had upon general law respect and enforcement.

With the facts that the committee has gathered carefully set forth, there ought to be ample opportunity for congress, or the country at large, to come to some definite conclusion as to what is required. The president has sought to get at a decision by experts and it is only proper that such a decision should include with the statement of facts such recommendations as it is believed are necessary to remedy the situation.

CANAL CONSTRUCTION

Some day or other there will come before congress the question as to whether there should be a canal constructed across Nicaragua to connect the Atlantic and Pacific, or the spending of a sizeable sum for the purpose of increasing the capacity of the Panama canal. It is a matter which has been hanging fire for some little time. Much will depend upon the information that is furnished, both as to the expense that will be involved in the respective projects and the advice that is furnished by engineers.

There are advocates of both plans as might be expected. It was so when the idea of building Panama canal was being advanced, for supporters of the Nicaragua route were then urging the shorter distance involved in such a route, even though it meant covering a longer distance in constructing the canal across the country.

For the purpose of determining the advisability of the Nicaraguan route and determining the conditions and the probable cost, engineers have been spending a number of months making a survey. As the result of that work they have laid out the route that is believed to be the most feasible. They have not completed their soundings, which work will require additional time, but it is expected that the route selected and the character of the excavation that will have to be made at the various points will be reported in detail to the present congress.

With such facts at hand and with similar facts concerning the plan for enlarging Panama canal so that it could take care of increased traffic for a long period of years, there will be an opportunity for experts to study the problem and determine which plan should be followed. Much may depend upon what the experts base their decision. They may view it from the standpoint of expense and decide upon one project and then look at it from the standpoint of utility and decreased sailing distance for coastwise traffic and decide upon the other. If one plan has an advantage over the other, regardless of expense, it should be carefully pointed out and the reasons explained.

How soon the capacity of Panama canal will be reached is problematical. It will require some time to build a new canal but there is no probability that the present congress will wrestle with the final disposition of the matter.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The man on the corner says: Don't shut the Christmas spirit off just because Christmas has gone.

Judge Clark in his decision has told what he thinks ought to be. The final decision will be based on what actually is.

With Colombia raising its export tax on bananas 50 per cent it ought to please the Central America banana raisers.

What might otherwise have been a quiet holiday season in Washington has been enlivened by the attack on republican renegades.

After Christmas there comes the period of regrets for over-indulgence and the time for the exchange of the unwanted and the misfits.

When Watson says Hoover has greatest task of any peace executive he bases his opinion of course on his knowledge of the kind of trouble congress is causing.

It is all well enough to hope for such a short cut as Judge Clark supports for getting rid of the 18th amendment, but it is another thing to find where the Constitution permits it.

Senator Norris claims President Hoover accepted office as a democrat and is liable to become one again. In view of the manner in which Norris has been endorsing and playing with the democrats, that furnishes nothing for him to kick about.

THE MAN WHO TALKS

It is not amazing that sometimes an incident, apparently insignificant in itself, is the means of transforming the life of a people. In a new volume on the life of D. L. Moody, the following incident is related: Mr. Moody was conducting one of his remarkably successful meetings in London. The great hall was packed to its utmost capacity. Before delivering his sermon Mr. Moody, according to his custom, called upon a minister to pray. The old man was very lengthy and tiresome and the audience was getting restless. A young physician was there attracted by Mr. Moody's reputation, but he was so disgusted with the long-winded parson that he was on the point of leaving the hall. At that moment Mr. Moody rose and said: "Let us rise and sing hymn 75 while our brother is finishing his prayer." The young doctor was so pleased with Mr. Moody's adroitness that he remained for the sermon. That night he was converted and was led to do missionary medical work in Labrador. Sir Wilfred Grenfel, M. D., is known throughout the world.

Dwight L. Moody was translated in 1599, and after nearly a third of a century has passed the question is still being asked, "What was the secret of his power?" No person, living or dead, ever stirred the great cities of the British isles to the duty of confessing Jesus Christ as Lord as this man with the most limited education. It was not merely the poor, illiterate fellow, down and out who was urged to attend these revival services but the greatest men and women in the higher walks of life. It was perfectly natural that the high clerics and university professors should at first look askance at illiterate men who should set themselves up as teachers of religion. They came to get material to hurl thunderbolts of criticism. They came away with blanched faces saying to one another: "What meaneth this?"

Well, it is all over now, and what is the aftermath? Of course you are more or less jaded if you have gone deeply into the usual Christmas activities. Being human you have more or less dreaded it and even if you are a bit wearied, on the whole you are better satisfied than if you had just slumped down and done nothing. If you could only look at the face of your boy living so far away that he could not conveniently come home at Christmas, you would say. "Thank God I put so much of myself into that gift" and as letters of thanks come back from those who felt the largeness of your pre-Christmas activity, it will more than compensate for the time, labor, thoughtfulness and sacrifice, it will more than pay the time and thoughtfulness on your part. Christmas giving especially some years, may be hard, but it keeps "the home fires burning."

Once a public speaker made a statement to which exception was taken. The terrible sin that he was charged with committing on this occasion was that "people will tolerate almost anything under heaven but new ideas." Of course the same, clear thinker would find nothing terrible in this exaggerated statement. But the rank and file of people are not sane thinkers. Now in the city of Cincinnati in the year 1846 the first bathtub was installed in America. From the standpoint of today the rank and file of people would probably look upon such a thing as the proper thing to do. Not to put a bathtub in a house would be looked upon as eccentricity. But in 1848 a howl was started that the whole state felt. Does it not sound more like fiction than truth?

Nothing more need to be said about Cincinnati's bathtub of 1846. It is simply an index finger pointing to a certain trend of the human mind—at least some minds. Do we really appreciate our obligation to those who dare to think outside of the ordinary channels, those who blaze new pathways in this old world of ours that has so many secrets to reveal to those who have ability and courage to travel along new lines; the men who strike out boldly into the trackless forest of new territory? If men had not dared to think we would still be using the horse and buggy, and trying to read at night by the glow of the tallow candle. Thank God that this trend of the human mind will not down, and there are reasons for believing that in a century hence we shall be pitied, as we now pity the people of Cincinnati of 1846!

In the rush period of the usual Christmas activities, we were not quite sure what we ought to give Uncle Ebenezer. Should it be a snuff box or a copy of Tennyson's poems? Now don't laugh because Uncle Ebenezer takes snuff, but remember that the dear old man can recite from memory more of Tennyson's poems than you and I, dear reader, ever read of the poet laureate! Now "people are just as funny as anything"; so much so that it is very hard to tell what they will enjoy most. In a certain town in Massachusetts there was an old hermit who lived alone in a hut and was considered very poor; while not in rags he was shabby, and considered poor. He did not beg, was pleasant and much liked. When a certain Christmas approached a good woman thought she would give him a dinner. Both parties were surprised. The good lady found the old man counting bank bills that ran up into the thousands!

Let us take just a glance at Christmas from the historical standpoint. That a certain person called Jesus was born at the time and place as recorded in the gospels has never been denied. That prophets in ancient Israel foretold his birth is also generally accepted. As a fact of history, Bethlehem of Judea is entitled to recognition for precisely the same reason that Stratford-on-Avon is, or the birthplace of any other person who has loomed up big in the life of humanity. Of course many have denied that He was the Messiah predicted in the Old Testament and have disputed many other claims that He made for Himself and which others have made for Him, and still that such a man as Jesus was born and lived a most wonderful life can be no more denied than the birth of Caesar, Napoleon or Washington. Christmas then is not mythology, but has all the proofs of historical accuracy.

Let us look at the same event from the imaginative standpoint. While Christmas carries with it the marks of historical accuracy, yet romance has grown up around it, some of which is grotesque, and some extremely beautiful. That in itself is evidence of its reality and undying worth. Myths never grow up around just ordinary persons. Among the beautiful myths that have grown up around the Christ-child is that of Santa Claus, a corruption of St. Nicholas. The Santa Claus was first used by the Dutch settlers in New York who kept a Santa Claus holiday. His feast was on Dec. 6, and was formerly celebrated in England and still is in Germany. Now the visit of Santa Claus bringing gifts to children is transferred to Christmas. He is a good natured, frolicsome, generous fellow who is greatly fond of children, and hence the very incarnation of the Christmas spirit. Let the jolly old fellow reign supreme with the little folks. He may be a myth but he is immortal

GREENEVILLE SLEIGH RECALLS GREAT HORSE RACE OF 1905 ON THAMES ICE

The appearance in Greeneville of a cutter during the snow storm now just ended is characterized by The Bulletin reporter as "probably the first sleigh that has been driven through the streets of Norwich in 10 years." Not so long ago, comparatively speaking, weather such as we are now having would bring these vehicles out by the hundred; and whenever a cold snap froze the surface to a sufficient depth, horse races would be held on the Thames. The last time such an event was held, at least under formal sporting conditions, was in 1905, when Dr. W. K. Tingley's world-beating Teddy R. went down to defeat under the hoofs of Rosie Wilkes, a mare owned by Fred West of New London.

The story, as revealed by The Bulletin files, is as follows:

Ice 13 Inches Thick

Feb. 17, 1905—For the first time this year there was sleighing on the Thames river yesterday, when during the afternoon there were many sleighs out for a drive on the frozen surface of the river. It was a year ago that the river offered opportunities for sleighing there, as was formerly the custom, although it was in the last part of January and early February that it opened in 1904. It is about two weeks later this year, delayed somewhat by the recent snow storm.

Thursday morning A. N. Carpenter, who was the one to take interest enough in the movement last winter to measure the thickness of the ice, sent an employe, Edward Alquist, to measure the thickness of the ice, and for a distance of a mile he found that it varied from 13 to 14 inches. This warrants its being safe for almost any weight that could be put upon it, and steps were at once taken to build the runway onto the river which is at the back of Mr. Carpenter's place of business.

This was constructed by three o'clock and soon after there were many turnouts out on the ice, beside scores of skaters. There were a number of the trotters out, but no brushing was done.

The mile course being marked off, there will undoubtedly be some racing today, the weather permitting. Dr. Tingley had his Teddy R. out for a practice spin, and the pathway made by the travel over the ice by the sleighs Thursday afternoon was particularly noticeable.

An invitation has been sent to the New London horsemen to come up and try a go, and Tyler Earle has been talking the matter over. New London horses have been out on Lake Brandegee and ought to be in fine trim, but notwithstanding that, the local brushers will be found there with the speed.

Dr. Tingley Challenges Fred West

Feb. 22, 1905—Dr. Witter K. Tingley with his record-holder, Teddy R. went onto the river yesterday and sent word to Fred West, who was supposed to be here with his fast horse, Rosie Wilkes, and two fists full of money, to come out and decide which had the better horse. He waited an hour and got no response, and gave up the idea, believing and surely looking as though there was some timidity about entering the race or else the fast New London horse is not there.

Dr. Tingley will race Mr. West any time he says so. He is not in the betting business, but Mr. West can get all the money he will put up covered if he wants to come up and make an earnest endeavor to arrange the race.

The doctor is of the opinion that all this talk from New London has been occasioned by the thaw, as not a one peeped when there was a possibility of racing on the river, but when it looked as though the ice was going a brave front was put on. It is the belief here and also in New London that if such a race takes place that Teddy R. will cross the line first in each and every heat.

Mr. West stated late Tuesday night in New London that he would be in Norwich today at three o'clock at Chapman's stable for the purpose of arranging a race, that he will race any distance and not for fun but for money. The outcome of the race, which has been thus far on paper, will be quite interesting.

Raced Under N. T. A. Rules

Thursday, Feb. 23, 19085—After a week of hard work during which several invitations were extended to the New London horsemen, a race has finally been arranged between a Norwich and New London horse, and Teddy R. the king of the ice, owned by Dr. Witter K. Tingley of this city, and Rosie Wilkes, whose owner is Fred West of New London, will meet on the Thames river, providing conditions are right as to ice. The race will take place Saturday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock, and there is no doubt but what half of the city will be out to witness the contest.

Mr. West came here from New London, Wednesday afternoon, and, as he stated he would, went to Chapman's stable, where he was waiting to hear from any Norwich horse at the appointed time. Dr. Tingley was unable to get away from his office, but in answer to a telephone message stated that he was willing to race Teddy R. against Rosie Wilkes any time, and it was agreed that the owners would meet at the doctor's office and talk the matter over. This was done at 4 o'clock, and as the result articles of agreement were drawn up and signed.

The articles of agreement for a race on the ice between Teddy R. and Rosie Wilkes are that owners shall drive and that the race shall be for the best three in five heats over a half mile course on the Thames river. It will be under the National Trotting association rules, and on Saturday at 3.30 o'clock.

If the ice is not in shape for trotting, the race will be deferred until favorable, or if it melts the money is to be returned to each party. If any accident happens, such as throwing or breaking a shoe, or a horse should require the attention of a veterinary, time shall be allowed for repairs. The race will be for $100 a side.

Teddy R. Held World's Record

The race is to be in sleighs, and each owner will appoint a judge, these two to select a third and a starter. The half mile course is to be measured off.

Rosie Wilkes is not here, else the race would take place today. Teddy R. trotted a quarter in 27 3-4 seconds last year, establishing the world's record, and took two in a sleigh the same distance in 30 seconds. Local horsemen have no fear but what the honors will be retained here.

New London Mare Romps In

Under the most wretched conditions imaginable the $200 match race between Norwich and New London horses took place on the Thames river Saturday afternoon. The race was won in an easy manner by Fred West's black mare, Rosie Wilkes, who had no difficulty whatever in leaving far behind Dr. W. K. Tingley, driving his roan pacer, Teddy Roosevelt.

There is no question in the minds of Norwich horsemen, under proper racing conditions, which is the faster horse, for Teddy Roosevelt, on good firm ice, can clean up anything on four feet in this respect around Norwich.

How the judges could allow a race to take place under conditions which prevailed Saturday is more than a great many people can understand, especially as the articles of agreement plainly stated that "the ice be in proper racing condition." Teddy Roosevelt's defeat is attributed to the fact that the honeycombed ice, with prevailing slush to the depth of six inches, would admit of the gelding's securing no foothold, and consequently most of his efforts were sent in dancing in the air, while the New London horse, a trotter with a long stride, found the footing to her liking, and did not break once during the three heats.

An immense crowd gathered to witness the sport. Fully 5,000 persons fought for vantage places on the ice, wharves, Laurel Hill avenue, and even Laurel Hill bridge.

The judges were John A. Brady and A. D. Lathrop of Norwich and P. H. O'Brien of New London. "Cute" Sullivan was starter. The first heat was pulled off about 3:30 o'clock. Teddy R. had the Thamesville side. After both horses had gone a few rods the gelding broke and Rosie Wilkes took the lead.

She was never headed, while Dr. Tingley came thundering down the path, snowballs flying around his head, his horse puffing like a steam engine, and finished fully a half block in the rear.

Leathers Availed Nothing

After the first heat the doctor took his horse off the ice to a blacksmith's shop, where he had leathers put on Teddy Roosevelt's hoofs, hoping this would enable the horse to secure a better footing. It proved to be of no avail, however, for the next two heats were won just as easily by the New London mare.

A rather stupid mistake was made when the first heat was started, for both horses were given the word to go from the quarter mile flag instead of the half mile, which was about opposite the first projecting point on the right of the river as you go down. The heat was allowed to stand, however, and the next two were started from the correct point. The course was surveyed by Shepard B. Palmer, Saturday noon.

Dr. Tingley was asked on Sunday to make a statement to The Bulletin, but declined to talk. He says that he knew that Teddy R. could never win under such racing conditions before the match started, but that he wouldn't back out and be called a quitter.

The doctor feels confident that his horse can defeat Rosie Wilkes under right conditions, and another match may be arranged later, either on a speedway or some track.

Big Racing Men There

Present at the race were all the prominent horsemen in this county. New London sent up a big delegation, which included Harry Holmes, Charles Bailey, T. B. Earle, Edward Buckley, Christopher Newbury, Frank Gardner, John Bradbury the owner of "Lecco," Sidney Williams, C. H. Klinck, James Sexton and Capt. William Miller the owner of Whirlwind." John Martin from Willimantic was also present. Mr. Martin owns several of the fast horses in the Thread city.

The race was for a purse of $200, each owner putting up $100 in the hand of Theodore Yerrington. It is estimated that quite a little money in small bets changed hands. No large bets were recorded.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26.—If anyone thinks Senator James Thomas Heflin of Alabama, after 18 years in the house, followed by 10 years in the senate, is going to let it go at that just because he was beaten for re-election in 1930, he doesn't know Heflin.

The Alabama senator does not do things that way. He's a "right sticktoitive" person, as they might put it down in Alabama.

So no Washington political observer doubts that Heflin's name will be among those present when the 1932 primaries roll around. What office he may seek is not so certain.

His colleague, young Hugo Lafayette Black of Birmingham, with only one Washington hitch, a six-year senate term, to his political career, will be up again that year.

Might Seek House Post

Heflin might try to crowd Black out, some folks say. Or he might pattern his attempted comeback on the late Senator Burton of Ohio and route himself back to Washington via the house.

There is that fifth Alabama district which gave him office for nine successive elections.

La Fayette (spelled that way as compared to Black's Lafayette) Patterson now has the fifth.

Incidentally, he's one of President Hoover's college brethren holding a degree from Stanford.

Whatever Heflin's plans for the future, his prompt reaction to the unemployment and depression situation once the senate got going again after election could conceivably have a bearing.

He popped in a pair of bills and had both printed immediately in the Record. When a senator does that, usually it means an order to the government printer for extra copies of the Record and a lot of mailing to the folks back home.

Asks Loans to Farmers

One Heflin bill—S-5162 it stands on the books—would authorize the farm loan board to lend up to $3,000 to any farmer purchasing 60 acres or less of land and building a home thereon.

The loans would run 25 years at 5 per cent interest with the property itself as security.

"My bill would result in a little while in creating hundreds of thousands of small farms and in establishing on them industrious, home-owning and home-loving farmers," Senator Heflin said; which probably made Chairman Alexander Legge shiver. He dreams about farm surplus.

The Heflin bill No. 2 would qualify automatically every postoffice with receipts of $4,000 a year for a federal building. The senator did not say how much it would extend the government building program, only that "in the long run" it would save Uncle Sam rent money.

But, everything else aside, clearly Heflin is preparing for a come-back.

Trench Mouth and Prevention

By FRANCIS H. DALEY, M. D.
Ass't Prof., Dept. of Dental Pathology

Boston
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

Trench mouth, or Vincent's Infection, as it is sometimes termed, is, in many instances preventable. Most cases occur in individuals with lowered vitality. Their mouths usually show accumulations of tartar, irritating crowns, bridges, or fillings which impinge on the delicate mucous membranes of the gums.

The disease is characterized by swollen, reddened gums which bleed copiously at the slightest touch. There is a peculiar foetid taste, accompanied usually by a very foul breath. There may be a feeling of malaise; that is, the patient will feel "all in." There is often a slight rise in the temperature and an increase in the flow of the saliva.

Every individual with bleeding gums does not necessarily have "trench mouth." However, a tendency to such hemorrhage shows that there is an irritation of the tissues and the patient should immediately present himself for oral examination. Such cases, if allowed to go on untreated, may, in time, develop into true cases of the infection.

"Trench mouth," in most cases, results from a lack of cooperation with the dentist. If you will see your dentist every six months and have him remove the tartar and all irritating factors from in and about your teeth, you will be doing much toward preventing the development of such a condition in your mouth. Such procedure is one of the best and most inexpensive forms of "oral insurance" against all forms of mouth disease, particularly where there is a tendency to involvement of the gum tissues.

If you are unfortunate enough to contract the disease, you must realize that, in order to eradicate it quickly and thoroughly, you must cooperate to the fullest extent with your dentist. It is essential that you visit him regularly for your treatments and you must be faithful in carrying out the measures which he will prescribe for home treatment. Regulation of bowels and diet is important. Plenty of fresh vegetables and fruit juices will help. Certain cases are of obscure origin and oftentimes a complete physical examination will aid in clearing up some elusive, resistance-lowering factor.

It must be kept in mind that the disease is highly infectious. All personal contact should be avoided. Care must be used in the sterilizing of eating and toilet articles.

In a study of over four thousand cases of the disease we have found that there is little or no immunity to the disease. In other words, by regular dental examination and close attention to the hygiene of your mouth, you can do more than in any other way toward preventing the condition. If you will do this, you may avoid much suffering of time, energy, and money.

Stories That Recall Others

Sure Of It

Two girls were discussing their friends while on the street car.

"Do you know Bill?" asked one. "He is an artist."

"Yes?" queried the other. "How do you know?"

"Well," retorted the first, "He's always drawing conclusions!"

He Didn't

Hubert begged and begged for the car. His father finally consented, Hubert took his girl to the dance and walked the whole distance home with her through the frosty night air. Bidding her goodnight he trudged wearily homeward—the other end of the town. Snuggling beneath the wool blankets Hubert drifted into dreamland. Then came his father's voice from the next room:

"Hubert, did you drain the radiator?"

Hubert hadn't, the car was still parked downtown.

SUNDAY MORNING TALK

The Snow.

In how many ways we see God's love for us. We see it at each season of the year. There are the beauties of the spring, the summer, the fall and the winter. Each season vies with the others in its attractions.

But what is a more beautiful sight than to see every tree and bush ladened down with snow? Every one feels drawn a little nearer to our Heavenly Father. As we examine each we are filled with awe at the beauty of shape and variety. Each flake has its own beauty. The closer we examine them more beauty and perfection of shape we see. How different from the work of man. How little of it will bear the magnifying glass. We see God's love for the beautiful in the many beauties of nature. We see that every thing that God does He does well. Should not this be a lesson to us to strive to do every thing our very best. Not to slight the smaller things. We see that our Heavenly Father considers our pleasure as well as comfort. Should not this love and care give us a stronger faith for the future and should not our hearts be filled with love and gratitude for all He has done for us. How much more He would gladly do if we only did our part. As we look back over the past year our hearts are touched as we realize His wonderful care and love. We realize that He knew best.

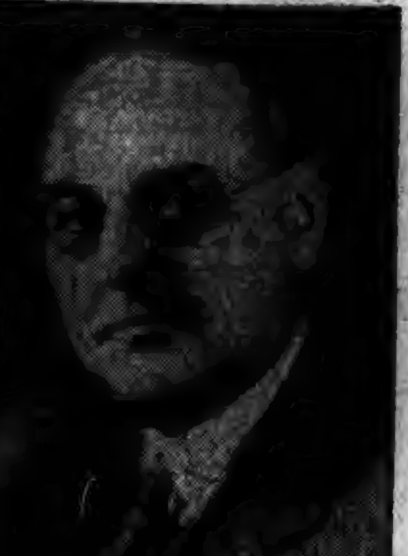
TO GIVE LECTURE HERE ON MONDAY AFTERNOON

Under the auspices of the Department of International Relations of the National Council of Jewish Women, the W. C. T. U. and the League of Women Voters, Gaylord W. Douglass, New England secretary of the National Council for the Prevention of War, will give a lecture at the Wauregan hotel Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Mr. Douglass will speak on the topic, The World Court and the Importance of Building an International Mind.



GAYLORD W. DOUGLASS

For many years Mr. Douglass was an educational leader in New England, where he served as teacher and as headmaster in both public high schools and private college preparatory schools. He was headmaster of Wilbraham academy at Wilbraham, Mass., from 1912 to 1929. With this background of experience, he is able to appreciate the student attitude of mind and to appeal forcefully to those of high school and college age.

Furthermore, Mr. Douglass has had European contacts which lead him to understand certain institutions like the League of Nations and the World Court, as well as the spirit and ideals of European Rotary clubs and similar groups abroad. He brings a wealth of experience, study, and observation into service in speaking on world affairs and questions of world peace so that his presentation of these matters is always vivid and vital.

Through the channel of the National Council for Prevention of War, and as its New England secretary, Mr. Douglass is rendering valuable service in building sane and sound thinking in regard to matters of world interest and is a constructive force in developing an informed and influential public opinion. Without entering into the controversial field or advocating visionary or radical movements, he seeks to present facts which will be clearly understood by all ages and all sorts of people, and which will become the basis for that which every one desires—ultimate and permanent peace.

LOCAL POLICE CAPTURE YOUTH WHO HELD UP WEST SIDE MAN

Within an hour after the alleged holdup of Angelo Panagiotos, proprietor of the Moshos club, No. 27 Thames street, at 9:20 o'clock Friday evening, Edward Szalkowski, 18, of No. 18 Quarry street, was captured by the police through quick and efficient work and locked up in a cell at police headquarters. The loot, which consisted of a dollar bill and a gold Waltham watch valued at $25, was later recovered by the police. Szalkowski is held under bonds of $5,000 on a charge of robbery.

According to the police, Panagiotos claims that the alleged holdup man entered the clubroom while he was alone and that the man was unmasked, but had his coat collar pulled up, partly concealing his face. Pointing a "black revolver" close to his (Panagiotos) ear, he demanded the proprietor to turn over his money. Panagiotos handed him a dollar bill, which he extracted from the right hand pocket of his trousers, but with the other hand he pulled out $17 and a check for $29 from the other pocket and threw it under a pool table.

A gold watch, which was in the cash register, was taken by the alleged holdup man, who then left the building and disappeared. There was no money in the cash register. Rushing from the clubroom, the proprietor ran to the billiard parlors conducted by Ernest Petras and informed him of the robbery. The police were immediately notified and Capt. Thomas P. Murphy assigned Sergeant Matthew Delaney and Officers Michael F. Pounch and Peter Vuono on the case. On information secured the police officers went to the residence of Szalkowski and placed him under arrest.

According to the police, the dollar bill appropriated from the clubroom proprietor was recovered from Szalkowski and later the gold watch was found at the accused's home. The alleged holdup man, the police said, told them that he had used a pipe in holding up the proprietor, and informed them where they would locate it, as he had thrown it away. A thorough search of the scene was made by the police, but the pipe was not found. Szalkowski was seen in the neighborhood shortly before the holdup, according to the police.

J. OLIN HOWE'S DEATH CAME AT HEIGHT OF HIS CAREER

J. Olin Howe, journalist and author of 2,224 Grand Concourse, New York, who dropped dead of heart disease at 5 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, as he was attempting to board a train at the Grand Central station as told in Friday's Bulletin, is survived by his wife, Mrs. Anna Lawlor Home; his mother, Mrs. William R. Howe; sister, Winifred Eva Howe, editorial librarian at the Metropolitan museum, New York, and a brother, William Howe of Philadelphia.

Mr. Howe was born at Norwich fifty-five years ago. He started his newspaper career on The Norwich Bulletin. From 1899 he represented various newspapers at the Connecticut capital; among others, the New York Tribune and the Springfield Republican. From 1907 to 1915 he wrote articles on political and economic developments in southern New England for the Boston Transcript and the New York Evening Post.

For several years Mr. Howe was congressional secretary at Washington for Representative George Lilley of Connecticut. He organized the McKinley association of Connecticut. In 1910 he had charge of the manufacturers' census in this state. Laterly he had been associated with Historical foundations, 2 West Forty-fifth street, New York, and as member of the international advisory board helped complete, in collaboration with Francis T. Miller, the historical collection of prints and documents recording the history of man's conquest of the air, which will be published Jan. 1 as "The World in the Air." He was the son of William Richard and Evelyn Brigham Howe, and a descendant of the family which organized the Brigham Young migration to Utah.

GAVE MESSAGE FOR NORWICH JEWISH STUDENTS

A message for Norwich Jewish students, home from college for the holidays, was given by Rabbi Simcha Rabinowitz of the New York Theological seminary in his sermon at the Friday evening services of the Norwich Community synagogue, with many students attending. The subject of his interesting sermon was "Paying Attention to Little Things." The service had been set aside as "College Night."

The rabbi stressed the fact that we must not neglect the little things that seem to us insignificant, for when we do we sometimes destroy the happiness of others and, furthermore, it may be responsible for the loss of life. When we consider our own life, the rabbi said, we find that we underestimate certain things, over-valuate certain things and trample on little things.

The rabbi pointed out in home, business, religious and social life the importance of paying attention to the little things, citing many illustrations that clarified his statements. We human beings forget the most essential things, because we do not think they are significant, he said. If people thought of the little things there would be more happiness in this world. We are guilty of causing much unhappiness.

In directing his remarks to the college young men and young women in the congregation the rabbi said that students at college would do a world of good to their parents if they would only send them an occasional letter. It does not require much time and effort, but the receipt of a letter is the cause for much enjoyment and happiness to the parents.

In the forum hour after the service Saul Sussman, a student at Brown university, Providence, gave an insight into college life in his talk on the subject of "The Jew at College."

ASK SUPREME COURT TO RE-ARGUE CASE

On the allegation that the time allowed him by the supreme court of errors of the state was not sufficient in which to make his claims, Attorney T. J. Kelly and the law firm of Brown and James have filed a motion for re-argument of the case of Demetrio Chinigo and others against Samuel Ehrenberg, all of this city. The supreme court of errors recently handed down its decision in the case, setting forth that there was no error in the findings of Judge Charles B. Waller of the court of common pleas, who first heard the case.

Following a trial, Judge Waller in common pleas court, gave Chinigo and others a judgment for $981.34 with costs of $50.33 against Ehrenberg. Chinigo sued to collect the balance of a bill for services performed as a contractor in connection with excavating a cellar and doing other work on property owned by Ehrenberg, located at the corner of West Main and Mt. Pleasant streets, Norwich. Ehrenberg claimed that the work was not done in accordance with contract.

Attorneys John H. Barnes and Edwin W. Higgins are counsel for Chinigo.

The motion for a re-argument of the case before the highest state court was filed with the clerk, John H. Walker. It must undergo a technical procedure before any action can be taken.

The supreme court will read the motion for re-argument and if they find basis for a re-hearing will assign a date for such. If there is no foundation for a re-hearing of the case, the motion for re-argument will be denied and the matter terminated.

Seldom does the supreme court of errors allow a case to be re-argued after it has made a decision. In this case the possibility of a re-argument is stronger inasmuch as there was a dissenting opinion filed by one of the five justices on the bench of the supreme court of errors.

So far as can be learned, only once in New London county and probably the first time in the state, had the supreme court allowed a case to be re-argued and the matter finally being decided in direct reversal to their original finding.

This case was that of Mrs. Samuel Jennes of this city against the city of Norwich. In superior court here Mrs. Jennes received a verdict for approximately $4,500 against the city of Norwich as the result of a fall on Mt. Pleasant street. It went to the supreme court of errors, where error was found and Mrs. Jennes lost out. Attorneys Edwin W. Higgins and John H. Barnes, counsel for Mrs. Jennes, asked the supreme court of errors for a re-argument of the case, which was granted. A re-argument was held and the supreme court handed down a decision subsequently in which the judgment of the superior court in favor of Mrs. Jennes was sustained and the city had to pay. This is the only known case where the supreme court is known to have reversed itself.

The motion for re-argument filed by counsel for Samuel Ehrenberg follows:

The defendant respectfully moves the court that he be granted leave to re-argue his appeal to the above entitled cause, and as grounds therefor he assigns the following:

1—The court in its opinion held that the defendant's claim of variance came too late, that such claim "should be made when the offer of proof is made of facts which it is claimed are not within the issues"; whereas;

(a) A careful examination of the plaintiffs' direct evidence discloses that they were endeavoring to establish the allegation of their complaint that they had performed "all the work to be done by them under said contract," with the exception of the substitution of fifteen wooden posts for nine steel columns, which substitution if it was the only departure from the contract had been substantially performed. Therefore there was nothing to object to in the plaintiffs' direct testimony.

(b) The evidence on which the trial court based its finding that the contract was modifed by subsequent oral agreement was based on the cross-examination of the plaintiffs' witnesses in which the defendant elicited testimony for the purpose of showing that they had not performed their contract and that most of the work which they had performed was included in their claim for extras.

(c) The plaintiffs made no claim of a modification of the contract, andthat theory first appears in the trial court's finding.

2—The court in its opinion held that "The burden was upon the defendant to prove these affirmative allegations of the counterclaim."

This was obviously in answer to the defendant's claim that even if the contract had been amended as claimed still the plaintiffs had not sustained their burden of proof, for the reason that after the defendant had on cross-examination of the plaintiffs' witnesses and by his own testimony shown that the terms of the contract had not been completely performed, the burden was then on the plaintiffs to show that they had substantially performed, which requierd them to introduce evidence of the cost of completing the work.

Without such evidence substantial performance cannot be found.

The fact that the defendant filed a counterclaim wherein he alleged that "the plaintiffs had failed to perform a large part of the work required under their contract," does not shift the burden of proof to the defendant; the defendant was under no obligation to prove any allegation of his counterclaim, affirmative or otherwise, and his omissions cannot be taken advantage of by the plaintiffs in order to help out their failure to sustain their burden. But there was no failure on the part of the defendant to prove his affirmative allegations.

The allegations of the counterclaim to which the court refers were, as the context of the pleading indicates, intended for a purpose entirely different from what the court must have had in mind. The allegations referred to were by way of inducement to other allegations contained in said counterclaim.

In so far as damage was alleged in said counterclaim every affirmative allegation, except as to loss of tenants and rent, is supported by evidence.

3—The defendant's brief was not intended to be sufficient without a full argument, and he submits that within the time which was allowed to him to argue the case he was unable to make his claims clear to the court.

At noon Christmas day the patients sat down to an appetising menu of turkey with all the "fixings" and in the afternoon those who were up and around circulated through the different wards visiting.

COAST GUARD CUTTER WINS RACE WITH DEATH

NEW YORK, Dec. 26—(AP)—A speedy coast guard cutter today won a race with death.

Out of the fog off Ambrose Light came a radio message that Captain C. M. Look, of the four master Zebedee E. Cliff was critically ill aboard his ship and probably would not reach shore alive. The schooner, said the wireless, could not proceed in the fog.

A patrol boat nosed through the murk to her side and within an hour and a half Captain Look was in U. S. Naval hospital 41, at Stapleton, Staten Island, where doctors said he had a fighting chance.

The 1361 ton ship left Hampton Roads with coal for Maine December 9. She was towed to Sandy Hook tonight.

The state banking department of New York made known that it had succeeded in tracing to communist sources a run of 1,000 depositors on a bank last Saturday. The run was stopped only by the prompt intervention of Joseph A. Broderick, state superintendent of banks.

FRANKLIN STREET MAN OVERCOME BY ESCAPING COAL GAS YESTERDAY

William C. Moore, well known tinsmith, of No. 190 1-2 Franklin street, was partially overcome by coal gas at 3:30 o'clock Friday afternoon, while lying asleep in bed at his apartment. He awakened in a dazed condition, but quickly recovered by the application of restoratives by his wife.

Help was asked of the fire department, the call being sent in at 3:40 o'clock and Chief Henry R. Taft responded. Arriving at Mr. Moore's residence, Chief Taft assisted him to the veranda and used ammonia, and other restoratives.

Investigating the cause of the accident, Chief Taft found that the steam heater in the cellar beneath the store of Frederick Madio of No. 196 Franklin street was responsible. The safety plug on the heater had blown out and the escaping steam dripping on the coal caused gas to generate. This gas found its way up through the partitions and into the room where Mr. Moore was sleeping on the second story.

Employes in the A. & P. store beneath the Moore apartment were questioned by Chief Taft, but said that they did not notice the smell of gas.

Y SENIORS SWAMP SHYMAS IN GAME PLAYED FOR CHARITY

The Norwich Y team ran roughshod over the Shyma club at the local floor Friday evening in a benefit game played for the relief of the unemployed and won by a score of 45-26. Pingree started the scoring for Taftville with a pretty shot at the beginning of the game, but once the Demarest clan got clicking the outcome was never in doubt. Soon after the regulars had a fair sized lead Coach Demarest inserted the second team, who played the majority of the game and put up a fine game as the score shows. This move was made to save the regulars for tonight's State League game at Torrington.

In the second game of the night the All Stars, composed of former pro and college players completely outclassed the Montvile Aces and came out on top, 46-17. This combination of stars who never played together previously clicked together like clockwork and their passing and shooting was spectacular at all times. Burnham, of Duke university, was high scorer and played a brilliant game at center, with Normandin and Belair, who were playing basketball 15 years ago, sharing in the limelight.

In the other game on the benefit program the girls were divided up and the Blues defeated the Whites 25-18. Miss Ksiazek starred, scoring 21 points alone while Mrs. Whaples was the outstanding star for the Whites with 15 points to her credit.

Coach Demarest and Manager Leffingwell wish to extend thanks to all who participated by playing, scoring, timekeeping and the two referees, Bitgood and Whaples, who handled the games and which resulted in a great success.

GENARO AND WOLGAST FIGHT TO 15 ROUND DRAW

MADISON SQUARE GARDEN, New York, Dec. 26—(AP)—Without settling a single issue—failing even to prove themselves title contenders—Midget Wolgast and Frankie Genaro fought 15 dispirited rounds to a draw tonight in an engagement that was scheduled to crown one or the other the undisputed king of the flyweights.

So half-hearted and clumsy was the exhibition that no two of the three ring officials could decide upon a similar verdict, leaving the midget from Philadelphia still the 112-pound ruler in the realm of the New York state athletic commission, and Genaro still king in the 26 states of the National Boxing association. But in the eyes of the 6,000 of the faithful who booed the lackluster performance most of the way, neither appeared to be a champion of anything, anywhere.

After ten rounds of hopeless milling, with neither fighting anywhere near their previous form, Referee Patsy Haley, who finally called the engagement a draw, warned them to fight harder or be tossed right off the premises. The warning brought action in the closing rounds but the uprising was not enough to enable the judges to get together upon a winner. Harold Barnes, one of the judges, voted for Genaro, and Tommy Sheridan the other arbiter, gave to Wolgast and then went home in disgust.

About one-fourth of the customers left before Sheridan did and failed to see Genaro put on a spurt in the 14th and 15th rounds that pulled him up on even terms with the classier midget and in the opinion of many of the ringside critics gave him a slight edge over the entire route. The entire exhibition was so discouragng that there was scarcely a disapproving voice when the verdict was announced. The Associated Press score card gave Genaro 6 rounds and Wolgast 5, with 4 even.

Wolgast fought with none of his usual speed and zip, flinging punches in chunks only at rare intervals, while Genaro, slowing up after ten years of warfare, seemed to lack the stamina to set the pace and make a fight of it. Wolgast fought through the final five rounds with his left eye tightly closed from a right hand punch he intercepted in the second round. Genaro suffered a slight abrasion over the right eye. Otherwise the damage was negligible.

The small crowd paid about $20,000 to see the show. Genaro weighed 111 pounds, Wolgast, 111 3-4.

NINE FAVORITES SURVIVE IN JUNIOR TENNIS TOURNEY

NEW YORK, Dec. 26—(AP)—Nine of the ten seeded favorites in the national junior indoor tennis championship tournament, advanced to the third round after the first day's play today, inaugurated with 144 competitors, the largest entry list in the tournament's records.

Headed by William Jacobs, of the University of Pittsburgh, defending titleholder and first seeded player, Richard Downing, New York; Marco Hecht, New York; Bernard Friedman, Philadelphia; Kendall H. Cram, Nashville; Sidney Seligson, New York; Robert Bacon, New York; Gilles Verstranen, New York, and S. A. Davenport, Harvard, seeded in that order, survived their first day opponents to advance.

Only Emil Schnap, seeded number eight, and representing the U. of Michigan, failed to come through. After a gruelling match, in which Schnap captured the first set, 6-4, his opponent, Sidney R. Wertheimer, Poly Prep school, Brooklyn, rallied to take the second, 10-8, and win the match by a 6-3 triumph in the final set for the only upset of the day.

Wertheimer's victory was due to superior playing experience indoors. A pair of 16 year old players, he and Schnap both live in the metropolitan area, Wertheimer has been a frequent indoor tournament competitor. As a result of his win, Wertheimer plays Robert Mann in the lower half of the draw tomorrow.

Richard Downing, of Jamaica high school, New York, seeded second was the only favorite who did not draw a first round bye, and had to meet two opponents to advance to the third round. He conquered C. L. Duval, of the Groton school, 6-2, 6-2, and then disposed of Emanuel Klauser, of James Madison high school, New York, 6-8, 6-3, 6-4.

All of the other seeded stars won their matches in straight sets, although several were pressed to take their second set.

STRIBLING VOTED TO BE LEADING HEAVYWEIGHT

NEW YORK, Dec. 26.—(AP)—W. L. (Young) Stribling, of Atlanta, is the leading heavyweight boxer of the world in the collective opinion of 70 leading boxing critics, whose rating of the ten leading heavyweights was published today by the New York Sun.

Stribling's quick knockouts of Von Porat and Phil Scott and his decision over young Tuffy Griffith, of Chicago, during 1930 raised him from sixth place in last year's rating to the top of the heap.

Jack Sharkey was ranked second, only a few percentage points below Stribling, with Max Schmeling, recognized heavyweight champion, third.

Sharkey fought only twice during the year, in Miami with Scott and in New York against Schmeling, winning the first on a questionable knockout and losing the second on an unquestioned foul. The Boston sailorman led the list last year.

Stribling, given first rank by 35 of the critics, made the most progress during the year, gaining 335 points. Sharkey was given 18 first place ballots, Schmeling ten, and Mickey Walker, Max Baer and Tommy Loughran one each.

Three of last year's first ten — Scott, Otto Von Porat and Paulino Uzcudun—failed to finish "in the money" this year, their places being taken by Primo Carnera, the man mountain from Italy, who was ranked fourth this year, Baer and Johnny Risko.

The ratings were: Stribling, 647 (of a possible 700); Sharkey, 611; Schmeling, 548; Carnera, 351; Griffith, 273; George Godfrey, 206; Vittorio Campolo, 167; Tommy Loughran, 160; Baer, 145, and Risko, 94.

One of the surprises in the poll was the ranking of Carnera. The results, however, indicate the critics believe Stribling, Sharkey and Schmeling to be in a class by themselves as Carnera, in fourth place, was far below Schmeling.

ICE RACING

On another page is an article dealing with harness racing on the Thames river a quarter of a century ago which tells of the keenness of the rivalry between Norwich and New London horses. This was the last real racing done on the Thames although four or five years later there were one or two impromptu races among local horses but since then the sport has dropped from sight. The younger generation has probably never seen this sport which was one of the events looked forward to every winter by horse lovers in the eastern part of the state. The fact that the horse racing on the river has entirely disappeared is due largely to the fact that in 20 years the river has not frozen solid enough to permit racing. Even if the river did freeze it is doubtful if anyone would race horses there. The horse sport has simply died in Norwich and refuses to be revived as has been demonstrated when the Bay State circuit attempted to function here. The ice racing game was thrilling and the Thames was once the Mecca of the sport. In 1905, Teddy A., owned by the late Dr. Witter K. Tingley, set what was then a world's record for a quarter of a mile marking the distance in 27 3-4 seconds. Whether this record has ever been beaten is not known as the record books of today do not list horse racing on ice any more. The sport still flourishes in the north but little is seen of it in southern New England. Maine has its winter meets on the ice and some fine racing is the result. Canadian horses also perform in Canada to some extent. At one time there was a regular winter circuit in Maine with race meets in various cities in Maine and Canada. It is a great sport and provides plenty of thrills.

DEMPSEY WANTS TO PROMOTE A BOUT

NEW YORK, Dec. 26.— (AP) —Jack Dempsey came to New York today still non-committal on the possibility of his fighting again but quite willing to talk about promoting battles between other boxers.

"I'm ready for a fight right now," said Jack, "but I want to promote it, not fight it. I'm open for any kind of a proposition."

But when the various interviewing reporters began to mention the possibility of his joining with the Madison Square Garden corporation in promoting a "Battle of the Palms" at Miami this winter, some of Dempsey's eagerness evaporated as he brought up his current business of refereeing bouts. The former champion averages about $3,000 for each appearance as referee, he said, and to stay in Florida two months to promote a fight there he would have to cancel about 30 engagements.

As to refereeing, Dempsey said, "it's not a bad racket because you never had to be sewed up afterwards. It's nice to stay in a ring without being punched around. Of course there is a lot of bother connected with it, too. You have to be taken around and be introduced everywhere and you stay up half the night being entertained. It's tough on me because you know I always liked to hit the hay early."

Asked about the current crop of fighters, Dempsey had one objection. "The guys who should fight each other won't," he said.

NOTRE DAME ALL STARS IN CHARITY GAME TODAY

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 26—(AP)—With a week of intensive training behind them a squad of all-Notre Dame football stars and another team made up of middle western, southern and western gridsters rested today, primed for tomorrow's contest to be staged for charity.

The all-Rockne aggregation, made up almost entirely of members of the two undefeated elevens, of 1929 and 1930, reigned favorites over their opponents despite last minute additions to the all-star squad.

Coach "Hunk" Anderson, pinch-hitting for Knute Rockne and in charge of the ex-Ramblers, expressed the belief his team bolstered by Frank Carideo, all-American quarterback and Joe Savoldi, fullback, would have little difficulty coping with the opposition.

Coach Jimmy Phelan, of Washington, former Notre Dame player, had a different opinion. In spite of the short time allowed for practice he expressed the belief his players would be able to handle the situation nicely.

Gautier Outpoints Woods

LAKELAND, Fla., Dec. 26—(AP)—Ted Gautier, Springfield, Mass., outpointed Kid Woods, Indianapolis, in a ten round bout here tonight. Each boy weighed 120.

MANY NEW FIELDING RECORDS SET IN NATIONAL LEAGUE DURING 1930

NEW YORK, Dec. 26—(AP)—Record-breaking in the National league last season was not confined to batting, the official fielding averages which were released today reveal. Two new marks were ground out in the mill of the players' daily toil in the field.

Chuck Klein, of the Phillies, who won renown as a hitter, also stepped into the limelight as a defensive worker when he made a total of 44 assists for right field during the season. The former record was 39, made by Michael F. Mitchell of Cincinnati in 1907.

The league as a whole compiled a new mark of 1,318 double plays for the season. The former record, set in 1928, was 1,227.

Two other outstanding features shown in the records were that for the first time since 1908, the National league got through the season without having any games left unplayed at the finish and the feat of Pitcher Ken Ash of Cincinnati in winning a game on one pitched ball. Ash, a relief hurler, made one pitch to Grimm of Chicago when two men were on base. Grimm grounded into a triple play and Cincinnati came through with four runs in its half of the inning and won the game. Ray Kolp finished the game but Ash was credited with the victory.

The outstanding players in each position, according to the records, were Charley Grimm, Chicago, first base; Hughey Critz, Cincinnati and New York, second base; Sparky Adams, St. Louis, third base; Rabbit Maranville, Boston, shortstop; Wally Roettger, New York, outfield, and Gabby Hartnett, Cub catcher. Several other players in each position had higher averages than these six but they were recognized as leaders through having the highest marks of any who played in 100 or more games.

Grimm had an average of .9946; Critz's .9742, beating out Frank Frisch of St. Louis who had .9689. Adams fielded at a .966 clip in 104 games at third and had a .9735 mark for 25 games at second; Maranville also played two positions, having a .965 average in 138 games at shortstop and a perfect record for four games at third base. Roettger's .992 average enabled him to beat out the second-best regular outfielder, Johnny Frederick of Brooklyn, by two points. Kiki Cuyler of Chicago came in third on the list with .980. Hartnett made a .989 average although his record of ten passed balls was the highest in the league.

Twenty-two pitchers had perfect fielding averages but Babe Phelps of Brooklyn was placed at the top of this list. He handled 63 chances without an error.

The New York Giants, who set a new league batting record of .319, also led in club fielding with a mark of .974. Cincinnati and Chicago were close behind with averages of .9733 and .9728. St. Louis made the most double plays of the record-breaking season, 176. There were four triple plays during the season, Cincinnati contributing two, Brooklyn and Philadelphia one each.

OVER 50,000 EXPECTED TO WITNESS EAST-WEST CHARITY GAME TODAY

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 26—(AP)—Strong legs will run so the weak may some day walk when football stars from many parts of the country clash here tomorrow in the annual East-West charity game. Proceeds of the contest, one of the oldest charitable gridiron enterprises, will go to the Shriners Crippled Childrens' hospital.

Upwards of 50,000 persons are expected to turn out at Kezar stadium for the classic that will bring together players whose individual feats were recorded throughout the nation this season. It will be the sixth renewal of the game inaugurated here in 1925.

Andy Kerr of Colgate and Dick Hanley of Northwestern, coaches of the eastern team, have assembled such luminaries as Len Malcaluso of Colgate, fullback and high scoring ace of the eastern sector; Tony Siano, Fordham center; Hank Bruder, halfback of Northwestern and George Van Bibber, Purdue tackle.

The eastern squad has been drilled in the wing back formation and style of play made famous by Coach Glenn Warner of Stanford.

The western eleven, coached by Dana X. Bible of Nebraska and Percy Locey of the San Francisco Olympic club, is expected to resort almost entirely to a passing attack. This type of offense has featured the west's practice sessions, although considerable emphasis also has been placed on the line crashing capabilities of Big Jim Bausch, University of Kansas fullback.

COLLEGE WOMEN TO HAVE TWO DAYS OF WINTER SPORTS

LAKE PLACID CLUB, N. Y., Dec 26.— (AP) —College women will have their day in the college week winter sports contests here tomorrow and Monday when they compete for a new trophy given by Helen Louise Taylor, of Bryn Mawr.

The women tomorrow will run off a cross-country ski race, figure skating and a speed skating event and on Monday will continue with a slalom ski race, down-hill ski race and snowshoe race. Entries for the women's events include Louise Adams and Elizabeth Linberger of Wellesley; Vera Warbasse, Packer institute, and Dorren Canaday, of Dungan Hill, Long Island.

The college men's events, which include a series of hockey games between the West Point cadets and Williams, begin Tuesday.

The 1932 Olympic bob-sled run on Mt. Van Hoevenberg, constructed during the summer, had its initial run yesterday when the lower third of the mile and a half chute was put into action. Count Zappola, Italian winner of the St. Moritz derbies, with Donald Unger, another Swiss bobber, at the brakes, zipped down through curves banked ten feet high into an icy, almost vertical wall. Dr. Godfrey Dewey, president of the Olympic winter games committee, steered the first five-man sled down the course.

The complete run will be officially christened by the state Olympic commission within a week.

P. G. A. MAKES PEACE WITH SPONSORS OF GOLF TOURNEYS

CHICAGO, Dec. 26.—(AP)—The Professional Golfers' association has made peace with the various sponsors of open tournaments by agreeing to forget about its demand for 10 per cent of net tournament proceeds.

The demand, which caused a storm of protest and threatened to disrupt the big winter golf campaign at several points, was withdrawn by Albert R. Gates, business administrator for the P. G. A., who said cash for the upkeep of the organization's tournament committee would be obtained from some other source.

Gates also denied reports that the tournament bureau was to be abolished. He said Robert Harlow would continue to manage the bureau.

"Harlow has been working to good purpose while the gossips have been 'rumoring' about him," the administrator said. "When you take into consideration the fact that prize money in the neighborhood of $105,000 has already been scheduled, along with two or three more open dates that should boost it to at least $130,000 it would not seem to indicate that the tournament bureau is failing in its purpose of providing more and better tournaments for the professionals."

Indoor Golf Challenge

The Johnson Roofers challenge Tony Bernard's Castle Garden indoor golf team to a series of matches to be played before Jan. 10th.

The Roofers have played twenty games in Pennsylvania and as yet have not been defeated. They are returning to Penn., Jan. 10th to accept challenges and wish to play the series before that date.

WESTERN TEAMS PUT IN HARD PRACTICE SESSIONS

DALLAS, Dec. 26.—(AP)— Two high powered football squads, representing the middlewest and the southwest, got down to hard work today in preparation for the third annual Dixie classic, charity engagement, here New Year's day.

Twenty-two stars from the midwest, under the tutelage of Bob Zuppke, veteran Illinois mentor, put in two hours of practice on offensive football at Fair park stadium. A similar troupe of southwest performers was put through preliminary sessions by Coach Morley Jennings of Baylor university and his assistant, Coach Fred Thomsen of Arkansas university at the Southern Methodist university stadium.

The squad gathered by Zuppke appeared heavier than that of the southwest and early workouts indicated the Illinois mentor plans to rely on a hard running attack behind his heavy line. The Southwest eleven, if it runs true to form, will employ a passing game to offset the invaders' weight advantage.

Three stars expected to play outstanding games for the Southwest were not present for roll call today, but have announced they will be there when the whistle sounds New Year's day. They are Barton Koch, guard, and Jakey Wilson, quarterback of Baylor, and Noble Atkins, Texas Christian university center. The trio, unanimous All-Southwest conference selections, are enrolled with the West forces in the East-West battle at San Francisco tomorrow, but will return by airplane in time to play here.

CATCHES PUNT, FAILS TO RETURN IT, FINED $100

KANSAS CITY, Kas., Dec. 26—(AP)—With no sports guides among his tomes on jurisprudence, Judge Lee Judy was forced to ignore the rules committee and assess penalties in dollars instead of yards when a football row swept through his court today.

Thomas Peters was charged with failure to return a punt which he caught in his back yard zone.

The jurist and referee penalized Peters $100 for holding and awarded the ball to the other side, represented by Joseph Lawrence, of the Rosedale high school squad.

But Peters stood his ground, claiming the boys were offside.

"I am tired of them breaking down my fences and trampling over my lawn," the safety man told the judge. "I am not going to give back the ball."

After this kick, Peters was said by the court to have agreed to return the ball to the high school youths in return for suspension of the penalty.

TEAMS GET DOWN TO PRACTICE FOR NEW YEAR'S

PASADENA, Cal., Dec. 26.— (AP) — Contending football teams in the Rose tournament's annual game here January 1, today turned to the serious business of rounding into shape for the sixteenth annual classic, with long afternoon workouts following the Christmas day let down.

Coach Wallace Wade of Alabama gave the Crimson tide a hard practice at Patterson field, because of the disappointing way in which his men have been rounding into top form.

Meanwhile Coach Orin "Babe" Hollingbery handled his squad of Washington State gridsters rather gingerly.

The Cougars have come along so rapidly he was afraid they may reach the peak before time of the contest. The Cougars were given a comparatively light drill.

Another light workout was planned for tomorrow, but the squad from the northwest will do nothing Sunday. Coach Hollingbery said he had ordered his team to strict training regulations.

"If there is to be any of this psychology stuff," he said, "I'll do it myself."

Both teams took sight seeing trips today. The Southerners visited Hollywood while the Cougars went to a motion pictures studio at Culver City. Officials of both schools were luncheon guests of a civic organization.

R., and transferred her membership to Elizabeth Clark Hull chapter, of Ansonia, after going there to live. R. flag was bought in June, 1927, with funds raised by Mrs. Stivers. The home of Rev. Dr. Richard Mansfield, rector of Episcopal church for 72 years, has been restored by Mrs. Mabel P. Stivers and furnished and opened for a museum of Revolutionary days. ACTIVE SHARES LOST 2 TO 7 POINTS IN THE STOCK MARKET YESTERDAY

NEW YORK, Dec. 26.—(P)— Professional selling, tax liquidation and a decline in July wheat to the lowest price in 24 years, proved too great a weight for the stock market to lift so soon after Christmas and active shares lost 2 to 7 points today.

With many members of the financial community absent on an extended holiday, trading was quiet, although activity increased in the final hour when the day's lowest quotations were recorded. Sales were 1,800,000 shares, 600,000 shares of which changed hands in the last 50 minutes.

Except for a brief recovery in the morning, the market's trend was downward. There was group weakness in the merchandising, utility, steel and rail shares. Department, chain store and mail order stocks sold rather freely all day, reflecting Wall street's belief that profit margins had been cut by lower prices and by a volume of holiday business that may not have been entirely up to expectations. Coppers were firm. Farm implement issues and many specialties joined the recession, and when the market closed it was little more than 3 points, on the average, above the mid-month lows.

In connection with retail store business, Bradstreet's said that the volume was "fair" and perhaps equal to last year's in units, but from 10 to 30 per cent below 1929 in price value at many centers. From the broader viewpoint, Dun's saw favorable symptoms in the forward inquiry for steel and the better demand for copper.

The three-cent break in new contract July wheat at Chicago to 62 3-4, the lowest since 1896, had a depressing effect on stocks and inspired late short selling. The old resistance point for new crop delivery was 63 1-8c, made in July, 1901. Weakness of foreign markets, particularly Winnipeg and Buenos Aires, and small exports from this continent, were factors in the decline. Wheat contracts closed 3-4 to 2 7-8 lower, with the largest loss in the July delivery which finished only 1-8 of a cent off the bottom. Corn broke about two cents, but cotton lost only 4 to 11 points.

An accumulation of railroad income statements for November showed that the percentage declines from a year ago and also from October, revealed in the early returns, were being maintained. The rail stocks were relatively inactive, but lost from 1 to 4 points.

Even the recent rally failed to interrupt the long procession of declines in brokers' loans, which dropped $33,000,000 in the week ended December 24. This substantiated the opinion that the advance in stocks on December 17, had been a technical upturn and that weak holdings had been liquidated while the covering was in progress. The record breaking decline in reserve bank loans to brokers now amounts to $1,808,000,000 since September 24 and reduces the total outstanding volume to $1,919,000,000, the lowest in six years. Thus the last vestiges of the big bull market, so far as this form of credit is concerned, have disappeared.

The approach of the year end settlements and the large interest and dividend payments falling due on January 1, was reflected in the withdrawal of about $40,000,000 from the call loan market and in advance in the rate to 2 1-2 per cent. Federal reserve member banks in New York increased their borrowings by $70,000,000 during the past week, largely in preparation for holiday demands.

Pressure against the share market was sufficient to send a long list of active industrials and utilities down 1 to 3 points net. These included U. S. Steel, American Telephone, American Can, Bethlehem Steel, General Electric, Westinghouse, North American and Consolidated Gas. In the merchandising list, R. H. Macy lost more than six, Sears Roebuck nearly three, Woolworth, two, and Montgomery Ward, one. Gillette and International Harvester broke 3, Auburn Auto and Allied Chemical, 6, and Case, 7. Southern Railway, with a loss of 4 3-16, was the softest rail.

Foreign exchanges were quiet and changes small. Sterling cables advanced another 16th to $4.85 7-8.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Dec. 26.—(P)— Bond prices were little changed in one of the dullest sessions of the year today.

Bond prices moved uncertainly as the volume of trading dropped off sharply from the average for recent full sessions. Railroad obligations that have a high investment rating were accumulated at slightly higher prices but it was a standoff in the rest of the domestic section. Speculative bonds were heavy and United States governments displayed a mixed trend. Foreign obligations were irregularly lower, as Latin Americans turned reactionary in a thin market.

Announcement after the close of the market that the New York clearing house association had reduced the interest rates to be paid on deposits effective December 27, was received in financial circles as a potential aid to the bond market. The slashing of interest rates by New York clearing house banks for the third time this year, tends to widen the spread between bonds yields and interest rates banks may pay on deposits.

The weekly report of the conditions of federal reserve member banks in New York city announced tonight shows the city banks were virtually absent from the bond market during the week. Their holdings of "other" investments remained unchanged and the total of U. S. governments in their portfolios was only $2,000,000 more. From the start of the week, it has been apparent from the quiet movement of prime bonds in the legal class that the switching by banks from domestic bonds to U. S. governments had let up.

The list of securities considered legal investments for New York savings banks announced today by the state superintendent of banks contained several important changes. The list which is prepared as of December 1, restores the obligations of the St. Louis Southwestern and strikes Atlanti and Yadkin 4s, Central of Georgias, New Orleans, Texas and Mexico issues and those of the Pittsburgh, Youngstown and Ashtabula. The list is based largely on 1929 earnings. The general revision will not be made until after January 1.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Dec. 26.— (P)— Wheat collapsed today to the lowest level for July delivery here since 1896. Selling which smashed values down was ascribed to European sources. July wheat, representing the 1931 crop, which unlike the 1930 crop has been without buying support from government backed bodies, was specially handicapped by comprehensive advices indicating the condition of the growing domestic winter wheat crop was somewhat above the usual average for this time of year.

Wheat closed unsettled at nearly the day's lowest figures, 3-4a3c per bushel lower than Wednesday. Corn closed 2 1-4a2 3-4c down, oats 7-8a1c off, and provisions, from 60c setback to 37c gain.

Treasury Balance.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26—(AP)— Treasury receipts for Dec. 22 were $13,195,368.98; expenditures $17,195,381.86; balance $327,797,579.21.

COTTON

NEW YORK, Dec. 26.—(P)—Futures closed barely steady, 4 to 11 lower. Spot quiet; middling 9.30.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Dec. 26.—(P)— The curb market began the day uncertainly firmed up a little in the utility and oil divisions during the late morning, but yielded to selling pressure late in the day, along with the "big board" and the grain markets.

Trading was extremely sluggish during the early hours of trading, but quickened a little during the late selling. The day's total transactions, however, aggregated only 449,900 shares, or 37,300 shares less than Wednesday's turnover.

Electric Bond & Share was traded in fairly large volume, and sold up about a point early in the day, only to slide off two points from the top before the close. United Light "A" and American and Foreign Power warrants lost about a point, and Middle West Utilities and American Gas & Electric yielded fractionally. General Gas six per cent convertible preferred "B" dropped 9 points.

In the oils, Gulf sold up a point, then reacted to close fractionally lower. Standard of Indiana and Cities Service also ended off slightly. Humble advanced to 62, only to fall back to 58 1-4, where it was off two points and in new low ground.

Industrials were very dull, and irregularly lower. Detroit Gasket, which is inactive most of the time, sold up a point in a fair turnover. Swift International was again a firm spot, moving up nearly a point, but was not very active. A sizeable block of Carrier Corporation was sold, carrying it down 5 1-2 points to a new low. Columbia Pictures declined two points to fresh low territory. Deere rose three, then lost its gain.

Although coppers were mostly sluggish, Mayflower Associates, an investment trust interested in this group, rallied 3 1-2 in fair demand. Goldman Sachs and United Founders eased fractionally to duplicate their old lows, and American Founders slipped off 1-4 to a new minimum at 3 1-4.

NEW LONDON CITY COUNCIL EASILY SAVES $2,000 A YEAR ON LIGHTS

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Dec. 26.—The city council has hit upon another method of reducing the cost of operation of the city. The candle power of the electric street lights on Montauk avenue has been reduced so that the city has effected a saving of $2,000 a year by the change. Heretofore the lights on this most traveled avenue of the city have had a candle power of 1,000 but this has been cut down to 400 candle power. The change was made more than a month ago, but not a word of complaint has been heard so that the reduced light appears to be entirely satisfactory to the pedestrians and motorists who use the avenue. It is understood that the same reduction will be made wherever the city has been using the thousand-candle power lamps and that a saving of $8,000 to $10,000 a year will thus be effected. The high-powered lamps have been in use on the principal business streets and on Williams street extension to the Connecticut college. It is also possible that the number of lights will be decreased.

Slush on Crossings

The crossings of the city this evening were generally covered with melted snow and water to a depth of several inches, caused chiefly by clogged gutters so that there was no outlet for the snow that melted and the water remained on the crossings.

Delay has been experienced in installing the organ in Seabury Episcopal church, Groton, and its dedication will be postponed for ten days or two weeks.

FEAR STERLING C. DENISON MAY HAVE SUICIDED

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Dec. 26.—Sterling C. Denison, 30 Broad street, son of Mr. and Mrs. James F. Denison, is missing from his home. Fears are entertained that the young man may have committed suicide, although no reason can be attributed for his doing so. The young man has been missing 48 hours and no trace of him can be found. After a search by Denison's father and brother, the latter, Dr. E. Rheuben Denison, throughout yesterday and without result, the state police and New London police today were requested to lend their aid in obtaining information as to Denison's whereabouts. He is described as being 28, about five feet 10 inches in height, weighs about 190 pounds and has mixed gray hair. Denison wore a brown suit, soft brown hat, dark blue overcoat and black shoes.

Denison was at his home the greater part of Wednesday and about 5 o'clock in the afternoon went out, stating that he intended to go for a walk, but that he would return in time to spend the evening with members of his family. He did not return, nor could any trace of the young man be found as a result of a diligent search yesterday and last night by the father and brother. It was then that the state and New London police were asked to lend their assistance in obtaining clues to determine whether Denison had ended his life.

WIFE DESERTS FAMILY TAKING SAVINGS OF $100

Alexander Chaplinsky, 118 Shaw street, this afternoon reported to the police that his wife had deserted him and their three children. Besides leaving the husband and children, Mrs. Chaplinsky had taken the entire savings of the husband, about $100. Chaplinsky said that he could get along very nicely without the companionship of his wife and that he could provide properly for the children, but he requested that the woman be found, if possible, that he could recover his money provided the woman had not squandered it. Chaplinsky was in the police court Wednesday, together with Andrew Pedro, both charged with breach of the peace as a result of the men engaging in a fight following a drinking party at Chaplinsky's home. The fighters were fined $10 and costs each. Chaplinsky could not pay, but was given a week to do so. It was the day Chaplinsky was in court that his wife deserted him and the children.

GROTON MOTORCYCLIST LOSES PORTION OF LEFT LEG

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Dec. 26.—Frank Crandall, 42, of Walker Hill, Groton, was seriously injured this morning and is a patient at Lawrence-Memorial hospital, where a portion of his left leg was amputated as a result of that member being crushed when Crandall, riding a motorcycle, was hit by an auto truck.

Crandall sustained his injury when he mounted the cycle, which had been parked beside the curb on Thames street, Groton, and started to drive away. The cycle was headed southerly and as it left the curb, a wrecking truck owned by Jones garage, Groton, driven by John Weir, of Mystic, and also headed south, attempted to pass. Before Weir could guide the truck to the opposite side of the highway or Crandall could drive the cycle back beside the curb, the machine was struck with terrific force, the operator being crushed between the cycle and truck. Autoists and pedestrians went to Crandall's assistance and the cyclist was given first aid treatment, then hurried to the hospital. The accident is being investigated by State Police Officers John Smith and Donald Brown.

Mrs. Michael Ballino, of 61 West Colt street; George Paton, 51 Riverview avenue, and Mrs. Sidney Woods and infant son, Prospect Hill, Noank, patients at Lawrence-Memorial hospital, were discharged yesterday and today.

Commissioner Stoeckel ordered the reinstatement of the licenses of Henry Kavalanka, 115 North Bank street; Samuel Bisconti, 670 Bank street; William Wheeler, 22 Reed street and Donald J. Mooney, N. S. coast guard, state pier.

BABY BORN ON A TRAIN TO FORMER DANIELSON OPERATOR

Mrs. Leroy Lamb, wife of a New Haven railroad conductor, residing in New Haven, is a patient at Pettipaug Lodge hospital, Essex, an occupant of the maternity ward, for Mrs. Lamb became the mother of a daughter on a New Haven railroad train Wednesday. Although the baby was born in a coach and under adverse circumstances, the new arrival and its mother are reported as doing well. Mrs. Lamb, formerly a telephone operator at Danielson, had been visiting in Spencer, Mass., and boarded a train for New Haven Wednesday afternoon. She came to New London and awaited the arrival fo the 3:25 o'clock p. m. train that would convey her to New Haven where she intended to spend the holiday at her home. A short time after the train left New London, Mrs. Lamb's condition was made known. The train was stopped at a tower and a message sent to Saybrook requesting that the ambulance and a physician from the Essex hospital meet the train upon its arrival at Saybrook. Arriving at Saybrook at 4:03, no ambulance or doctor was in waiting. Inquiry by the train crew among the passengers revealed the fact that a physician from a Boston medical college and a nurse were aboard the train and arrangements were quickly perfected for caring for the woman about to become a mother. The coach was cleared of all passengers who went to other coaches and within a few minutes the Christmas baby arrived. Within a short time the ambulance and Dr. F. B. Bradeen speeded up to the station and mother and baby were taken to the hospital, where they were joined the same night by the father, a New Haven railroad conductor, who had been waiting at the New Haven station for his wife. When the train arrived there he was informed of the birth of the daughter and went to the hospital, where husband, wife and child spent Christmas eve.

Automobile Patrol Officer Elwood Bailey is the latest member of the New London police department to be stricken by illness. The officer is confined to his home, 39 Evergreen avenue, suffering from a severe cold. His condition was reported today as somewhat improved.

Bus Driver Reckless

As a result of the recklessness of a bus driver, William L. Ennis, Station 18, Waterford, sustained slight injuries yesterday afternoon when he was hit by one of two machines, forced off the highway by a bus driven by John P. Andrews, of Davenport, Ia. Ennis received bruises and scratches and is being treated at his home by a physician. Andrews was arrested on a charge of reckless driving by State Police Officer Arthur Whitmarsh and was held in bail of $200 for his appearance in Waterford town court Monday next. Ennis was walking along the Boston Post road near his home when the bus, traveling at a fast rate of speed, cut in front of a coach driven by William Byrne, of Providence, and a sedan driven by John H. Ellis, of Brooklyn, N. Y. The coach and sedan were forced off the side of the road because of Andrews' driving and one of the autos hit Ennis.

No Holiday Fire Damage

No fires resulted from Christmas tree decorations becoming ignited, although firemen were in readiness through the night to respond to alarms. But one alarm was received. At 6:08 o'clock a still alarm was received at fire headquarters for a blaze at the home of James Butler, Willetts avenue extension. Deputy Chief Calvin Edmunds and Oravid Hose company and Allen Hook and Ladder company responded. The fire was in a chimney, a quantity of soot that had ignited from sparks threatening damage to the residence. A liberal quantity of chemicals sufficed to extinguish the fire, without damage.

Theodore Demopolous, of Providence, has purchased the business heretofore conducted at 97 Main street by Charles B. Facas and Jacob Bashour.

Sent To Norwich State Hospital

Edward Pierson, 12 Starr street, was committed to Norwich State hospital this evening for observation and was taken there by Sergeant John Courtney and Patrolman John Sullivan. Pierson had been acting queerly for several days and his condition become such today that for the safety of himself and others his commitment was sought and obtained.

There was but one prisoner at police headquarters tonight. He is charged with intoxication and was arrested on State street by Patrolmen Frank Philopena and Clarence Wells. The man will be in the police court tomorrow.

Howard L. Joyce, of Jefferson avenue, who attempted suicide a week ago by swallowing a bichloride of mercury tablet during a fit of despondency, is reported such as to be out of danger at Lawrence Memorial hospital. Joyce, a carpenter, who had been out of work many weeks, attempted self-destruction because of his inability to obtain employment.

Getting Rid Of Snow

The highway department had laborers and teamsters at work on the business streets removing snow and slush. A scraper was used and caused an accumulation of snow at the edge of curbs, where it was shoveled into trucks and carted to the municipal pier and dumped into the Thames river. With rain falling from early afternoon and continuing tonight, practically all of the remaining snow will have vanished by tomorrow.

The police tonight received a telephone call that there was a hazardous bonfire in the yard of a resident of Nathan Hale street which threatened damage to nearby residences. The information was relayed to fire headquarters and Deputy Chief Thomas Shipman and Northwest Hose company looked up the complaint. When the firemen arrived it was found that the fire was caused by a new tenant of the building removing refuse to the yard and disposing of it by burning it.

RESINOL DID WONDERS FOR Red Cracked Skin

"After suffering some time from a bad cold my nose became unusually red and sore. I tried various creams and salves without obtaining a bit of relief. I didn't have much confidence that Resinol Ointment would be any better but tried it anyway and all I can say is it worked wonders. My hands also were so chapped they cracked and almost bled. They were in such bad condition I could not hold anything. However, thanks to your Resinol Ointment they are now healed." (Signed) Mrs. James Gilmore, Philadelphia, Pa.

The Real New Year

Some one made a great mistake placing New Year's day
In the dead of winter when it should have come in May—
May, when fruit trees burst in bloom, show'ring pink and white,
Like a glimpse of fairyland, blooming overnight.

May, when early butterflies, small and blond and neat,
Flutter in the gaudy green of the early wheat;
When each hillside we have known silent, gaunt and bare
Is athrob with blooming flowers, growing everywhere.

May, when at the break of dawn birds begin to sing
Wonder songs of faith and love, welcoming the spring;
When they build their nests all day in the fern-clad trees,
And the perfumed breath of flowers hangs in every breeze.

May, when every sunkist road winding out of town
Sings to us from early morn till the sun goes down,
With the siren song of spring's woodsy dells and flowers,
Hungry fish and mossy banks—carefree happy hours.

Some one made a queer mistake placing New Year's day
In the dead of winter, when it should have come in May
When all Nature wakes and smiles at the touch of spring;
When the world with one accord lifts its voice to sing.

The Ladies' Aid

I've read of Cleopatra in her palace on the Nile;
I've read about enchantresses, their beauty and their guile;
I've read about Xantippe in the house of Socrates
And Isabella who equipped Columbus on the seas;
Of Cornelia and her jewels, colonials in cretonnes,
Of ladies in the court of kings, and war-like Amazons.
But though I've scanned my history through, read volumes old and frayed,
I've never yet a tribute found, that praised the Ladies' Aid!
The Ladies' Aid! A noble band in tireless ministry.
Yet what encyclopedia writes their biography?
When the song books of the Sunday school are dog-eared, frayed and torn,
When the chandelier no more will do, and the carpet's old and worn,
When we need a new communion set, or perhaps a platform chair,
When the old church roof has sprung a leak, or the organ needs repair.
When the window lights are shattered and the storm has havoc made,
Who is our ever-present help—who but the Ladies' Aid!
I've never felt in Heaven above distinctions would be shown,
That God would e'er group favorites around the Great White Throne.
But if I for a moment felt God meant it to be so—
That He would pick out little groups—then I would surely know
That somewhere close beside the throne and near the Crystal Sea,
Beneath the cooling branches of the Everlasting tree,
And very near the Heavenly choir where sweetest strains are played,
Upon a jeweled, golden bench I'd find the Ladies' Aid!

DON'T FORGET THEM!

Little country mailboxes,
By the country road;
Waiting for the mailman,
With his weary load.

In some, he leaves a letter
And a package small;
While some lonely boxes
Get nothing much at all!

How they watch and wait for him,
The little boxes gray—
'Been looking for a letter,
Ever since you want away!"

Don't forget the loved ones,
Who live so far away—
Don't forget to write them,
Just send a line today!

Oh, please write to the odl folks,
Back there on the hills—
All the little things you do;
Your pleasures and your thrills.

Leave out all the things you think
Will make them feel real sad;
Just mention all the things you know
That will make them glad.

The little word of cheer, which
You may send today,
Will help to lift their burdens,
And dry their tears away.

THE WOMAN WITH THE SERPENT'S TONGUE.

The woman with the serpent's tongue
In praise of others has never sung;
She calls all her neighbors' children brats,
And the women she dislikes are cats;
A girl goes by with a married man.
She says, "There! didn't I say so, Nan."
If her husband from his work comes late,
She vows that he's been keeping a date;
She knows when the iceman stays too long.
It's a dead sure thing that something's wrong;
If a cop he smiles on a nursemaid fair,
"Poor thing," she says, "she should have a care."
She thinks that churches are all for show.
So that's the reason she doesn't go.
She hates the color of Miss Smith's coat,
And she calls Miss Brown a silly goat;
She thinks the hair on Miss Bull's head
Is bleached. for it ough to be read,
And Mrs. Pear's was a golden brown,
But it's turned to black since she left the town.
In fact, not a negihbor suits her taste,
So to visit her would be but a waste
Of valuable time; so she stays at home,
But her cruel thoughts afar do roam,
And she does more damage with her tongue

CHRISTMAS TIME.

Dear Sisters: This is Christmas eve and as I go about the house I find myself humming the old refrain that we used to sing in school:

Christmas, merry Christmas
Has come to us again,
With its gladness and its sadness,
With its joys and with its pain.
Merry bells across the snow
As we listen in the twilight,
To the bells across the snow.

We find ourselves so crowded with work, and perhaps worries that we don't always look forward to Christmas with much enthusiasm, but as the time approaches one is sort of swept along with events and before you know it, it is Christmas eve! A sort of mystery invades the place, queer shaped packages are seen hidden here and there, and when you do get time to enjoy it, it seems good to be in the midst of it all.

A great many folks, this year have given to those that are out of work and sent cards to their more intimate friends; making more vivid and real the true meaning of Christmas. Our pastor said he would rather have a penny postcard with the kind expression of the friend sending it than a dollar Christmas card without it.

One of our sweet Corner sisters sent a box of toys and useful things to a school in Kentucky where the children have such poor school facilities, at least in the mountainous part of Kentucky. I imagine the happiness she would have picking out the various articles, the happiness in imagining the eager children, the happiness upon receiving the thanks and description of the opening of the box!

As I look out of the window and see the beautiful trees all laden with snow, I feel that it is good to be in New England at Christmas time.

Best wishes to all, CHELSEA.

SAVE FOR THE RAINY DAY.

Dear Editor and Friends of the Social Corner: I want to wish you all a happy New Year. This is the first year that we haven't had a tree and Christmas celebration in our home since the children were small. But the last one has married and gone, so this year the celebration will be in their homes. As that is the way of the world, it must be all right.

I presume there are many this year that will have to go without presents. If they manage to get enough to eat and fuel to keep them warm, I think they will feel happy. There are many here in our town out of work. If people when they have work, would only lay by a little for a rainy day—but there are so many that spend every cent as fast as they get it, that when hard times come they have to depend on others; I find there is one place in the city that still has a thriving business, and that is the "pictures." People find money for that. One storekeeper told me of a family that came in to buy their groceries, and they had bought every thing but their bread and butter, so they decided to go without those things that they might have the money for the moving pictures. I have nothing against the moving picture, providing it is a good one, but if I didn't have enough money for both pictures and food I would have the bread and butter.

Another case that has come under my observation. A woman that told me she wanted a new coat, but couldn't afford it. But she and her three daughters attend the movies three times a week. Well such is life! Some will save, and some wont, although they may receive the same salary. Some women would throw enough into the garbage can to keep a family. What we need today are girls that will learn to cook and keep house. No wonder there are so many men who desert their wives after a few months. Why most of the young butterflies don't know enough to boil water without burning it. But we are finding many deserving poor that are among us. I think it would be fine if we would take a family and just look after it. This year we looked after one very large family of 12, and another of three. I know it made them very happy.

I wish the sister that gave the recipe for cheese making would repeat it as I have lost the paper it was in.

I am sorry for the sister whose husband is in Hartford hospital. I can sympathize with her as I have been there with my husband. After reading the poem, Boil It Down, in the Saturday Bulletin, I guess I have written enough for this time.

I send sympathy to those who have lost dear ones. To all new members, a hearty welcome. Wishing you all a happy New Year,

LOLA LEE.

WORTHWHILE BOOKS.

Dear Social Corner Friends: The books that we read over and over again are undoubtedly those most worth - while to us. But what are these books? What is the book that you pick up every year to live again in its pages? Why do certain books appeal to us more than others? Do the books that appealed to you when you were younger still hold your interest? But I had better stop asking questions—no one will answer them for me, any way, so it won't do any good to waste the paper!

The thing that started all this was the announcement by Thomas Masson, over a year ago, that in his opinion "Emma" by Jane Austen was one of the finest novels ever written and he also told us via an article on books in one of our popular weekly magazines, that he reads this book over again each year.

This certainly seemed like high recommendation and I expected great things from "Emma." I have managed to wade through about half the pages—it is a large book—and so far have found it dreadfully dull and unentertaining. If there is still a girl of 21, or, one and 20 as the book has it, still in existence, then I am very glad that she is not of my acquaintance. Perhaps I can't see the viewpoint of a girl of 21 and can't appreciate her viewpoints and understand her mental processes. Perhaps not. But it does seem to me that I was once a girl and 21 myself and I'm sure I wasn't like that!

Did I hear you asking what books I re-read? One of them is on the stand beside my bed now and just as soon as I finish this letter to you I am going to start reading it once more. It is "Ben-Hur" by Lew Wallace. Book the First is the most beautiful story of the wise men's meeting and the first Christmas I have ever read. For this reason, if for no other, I would try to read this year at Christmas time. I wish I had the words to tell of the entire book but it is far beyond my ability. One must read it oneself to appreciate the full story.

Speaking of book reviews, do you read those by Emily Newell Blair in the Good Housekeeping? In the January copy she tells of all the books she read while on one trip—it shows that people can find time to read if they really want to!

Also appearing serially in the Good Housekeeping is the autobiography of Mary Roberts Rinehart. Her stories are fascinating but this story of her own life is more wonderful than any mere fiction could ever possibly be. Quite

SURIOSITY AROUSED—RIDDLE SENT

To the Social Corner Folks, whom I don't know and never see: I realize as well as anyone that I can't write an interesting letter. If any old bachelor or widower or any young man should ask me to correspond, I would have to tell him it is out of my sphere to correspond but if he should ask for an interview it might be more interesting. I have received a very pretty Christmas card which has excited my curiosity almost beyond endurance. So much so I would like to know if it is from some lonely widower who would like a nice young companion who could make his life worth living and entertain him these long winter evenings and make his home so nice and cosy.

Probably I will never have my curiosity satisfied. I would like to get acquainted with some of the Corner folks. Perhaps I would find some one that would like to make a bargain with me. I live on a farm where I was born, that borders on the Shetucket river where we have a very beautiful view both west and in the east.

I must close or my letter will be too long and will find a resting place in the waste basket.

I want to give the Corner folks a riddle. Perhaps some of them have heard it but I don't believe all have. Here it is: I am a certain natural production. I exist from two to five feet above earth. I am neither animal, vegetable nor mineral. I am neither male nor female. I am spoken of in the Old Testament and strongly recommended in the new. I have never been seen by anyone. I have existed ever since man and woman have been on the earth. I am thought a great deal of and leave a lasting impression whenever and wherever I am used. I am also despised and hated. I exist on the farm and in the mansion, in the log cabin and in the white house, on the southern plantation and with the Eskimo. Zero weather and 100 degrees in the shade are all the same to me. I am full of deceit and dishonesty. I am also true and to be trusted and loyal. I am found in sympathy and in hatred. I am found in sadness and bereavement. In joy and in gladness. I serve equally well in treachery and fidelity. What am I?

If this gets into print I will give the answer in my next letter.

SUMAC CONVERSATIONS

Dear Editor and Sisters: I couldn't see any way possible to get time for a letter but I hope every one had a merry Christmas. I rather thought I would be farther ahead with my preparations this year, but it was about the same as usual. I got a big thrill out of it though someone recently asked me if I wouldn't be glad when Christmas was over. My heavens, I wouldn't miss all the excitement for anything! Why, I get as much out of all the anticipation as I do in the actual happening. I don't expect this is the proper manner to go about these things but anyway I haven't anything called a system.

Thanks for compliment, Persis, but what I write as regarding working and going places is fact. You have heard, haven't you, about the woman who polished her stove so one could see their face in it? but who wanted to use it for a mirror, etc. I can polish the stove when I've nothing else to do.

Woodside: You, too, must be in on this "conversation" as I think we are all in the same box. If anyone even came to see me when the house was clean I would be encouraged to keep my work up to scratch, but if one day out of seven I let things go that would be the day when someone would come. (Someone like Tish, Topsy, E. L. M., or some other model housekeeper). So I just go on, if I get it done I do; if not, I don't. I didn't think I would make this so long when I started, but I never know enough to stop.

We had a delicious dinner and American Girl entertained us with one of her interesting programs. Santa arrived and passed out gifts giving Tish the smallest as she made such cryptic remarks and almost skipping Skipper.

Best wishes everyone. SUMAC.

GREETINGS FROM AUNTY NO. 1

Dear Social Corner Members: I don't want this year to close without my wishing you all the season's greeting. I hope you will all have a pleasant Christmas and will have a happy and prosperous new year. I can sympathize with all sick ones and wish for their speedy recovery. I miss meeting with you at the gatherings, but am not yet able to get into crowds. I have to keep quiet and I have to depend on others to help me around as my eyes are so bad. Uncle has to read the letters to me as I am not able to read, but I am receiving help from a specialist, so hope in time to see better.

Spider Plant and Oleander: You and the family have my heartfelt sympathy; and all other bereaved ones. Trust in Him who is always at hand in time of trouble.

Darinda: I hope you will soon be up and around. I have a weekly report from you; you know how.

Grace: Coming down some time? I miss your running in at times.

Theoda and Brave: Keep well these days and come down and call.

Happy greetings to all is the wish of AUNTY NO. 1.

PLEASED WITH BOX

Dear Editor of Social Corner: I was much pleased with the sunshine box, for I wasn't so I could go. I thank one and all and Zoda, who brought it. My lameness is some better.

APPLE BLOSSOM

Best Wishes For The New Year

To Corner Members and Readers

MA OF GREEN GABLES REPORTS PROGRESS.

Dear Social Corner Folks, One and All: Well here is Ma again after a long time and after weeks of much pain but I am so thankful to say I am much better. I am still quite lame and right now I take this way to thank every one who sent me such nice cards. It is surely a help and comfort when you're down and out to have so many kind words of love and sympathy sent to you. I surely did appreciate them.

Christmas is almost here and while times are hard we will have a tree and a few things for all the family. I sure hope they will all be home to enjoy the tree and each other's company. I have a neighbor who, poor soul, has been confined to her bed for over three years so I, for all I did not feel very good, trimmed her a little tree and sent it to her and I think she enjoyed it. I think any little thing we can do for others who are worse off than we are (and we can find plenty) will help us to bear our troubles.

I've not made as many squash pies this year, in fact I've not made any pies for many weeks, I've been lucky to have some one to do for me. We had lots and lots of squashes this year. Sold some, gave away some and have a lot left. Now today friends came and brought me a great big box of fruit and candy. It's nice to be remembered and I shall surely try and remember all sick friends and neighbors a little better than I have done but have tried to do my duty always in that line.

Let's be a little kinder day by day,
Let's say words of comfort on our way.
We pass this way but once and as we go
If we like any one just let them know.

Best wishes to all and sympathy for all in sickness or trouble. As ever, MA OF GREEN GABLES.

GREETINGS FROM SISTER RHODY

Dear Social Corner: Are we going to be snowed in this Christmas? This (Dec. 24) is the second morning that we have awakened to find the white flakes drifting down to cover the world with snowy beauty. I am sure that we say-at-home folks appreciate this white scenery more than those who have to travel through it. ¼

E. L. M.: Your card and thanks are appreciated for although my pen name is not Pernickety, most of those seeds grew in my garden. I shall see that Pernickety receives your card. Her post office is a word that is found on silver and mine is the name of a color.

Twice Twenty: You are indeed lucky to have poinsettias in bloom for I understand that they are a hard plant to grow in the home. Won't you tell us how you do it? I saw some of these plants in a florist's window and they were certainly handsome.

Betsy Bobbet: Have you received any catalogs yet? I say yes to your suggestion about meeting to compare garden books. Are you still interested in the subject of Johnny cake? J. C. and Thirty-two mentioned Rhode Island white cap corn. In the Johnny cake belt there are many gardens who raise this variety of corn and have it ground for meal. In all other parts of the coutry yellow meal is preferred.

Eveline Burr: You guessed wrong about my birthplace for it was within a few feet of the state line and on the Connecticut side. Perhaps Pernickety will tell us about tending her hot beds in one state and having her own bed in another state. ¼ ¼

Does Pernickety keep you all wondering what books she is going to write about next? I can't imagine her as a grandmother and guess there's no danger of her being one right away.

Woodside: You certainly make good use of the bags. I like the 100-pound size sugar bags for dust cloths. The smaller sugar bags I use for dish rags. The grain bags I use for cleaning cloths, dish towels and I have dyed some of them and made my daughter slips and bloomers. And now members, do you recall that very interesting letter we had a few weeks ago on life in Florida? Perhaps some of you knew the writer but I have not seen any mention of her. A friend told me that E. M. R. C. P. passed away soon after her letter was printed. She wrote in closing that she hoped our page would be full every week, so new members, take notice.

Wishing everyone a happy New Year. SISTER RHODY.

NEW YEAR'S WISHES

Dear Social Cornerites and Editor: Here's wishing each and every one the very best New Year you have ever had.

May all your hopes and dreams materialize so the year 1931 will be the happiest ever.

We all hope business will improve and that the many idle will soon have work again. How thankful we should be to be living in this wonderful country of ours. Just think of the millions voted to help those out of work.

Black Eyed Susie: I extend my sympathy to you in your sister's illness, and hope she may soon regain her health. It is so hard to see our dear ones suffer.

Accept my thanks for all my lovely cards.

Now let us try to have our Corner the best ever. If each will do a little so much may be accomplished. Once more, happy New Year. OLGA

THE PROMISED POEM.

Dear Social Corner Readers: Here is the poem I promised. Hubby was lying on the paper so no wonder I couldn't find it. This poem applies to this year as well as to a day:

Night.

When night comes down and shadows longer grow,
I have not done brave things, or great, I know.
I fed the sparrows, hungry at my door;
I made a bed and swept a kitchen floor;
Then heard the lessons of a little child,
And shook a rattle 'till baby smiled.
Kept well my home, with loving skill and art.
Shared each care and cheered a husband's heart;
So why should I be envious of renown
When shadows deepen and the night comes down.
A joyous New Year to all.

WOODSIDE.

DEATH OF E. M. R. C. P.

Dear Social Corner Editor: I have some bad news for the Social Corner. My beloved wife, E. M. R. C. P., passed away to where we must all go when the Lord calls our name. She passed out Dec. 4, 1930 at the DeLand hospital at 8.30 p. m. from a shock of paralysis and high blood pressure. She had the shock at 2.15 p. m. and never woke up. She was buried in the Oakdale cemetery at DeLand, Saturday, Dec. 6, 1930, at 5.15 p. m. Now I would like to keep her work going on in the Corner. Being a licensed boat captain I would like to write under the name of Capt. Joe. The reason I wrote is because I just got some Christmas cards addressed to E. M. R. C. P. and know that all the sisters did not hear of the bad news, so when they read this they will know it's just as she would have written it herself. Wishing you all a merry Christmas and happy New Year.

JOSEPH A. POTVIN.

Beresford, Florida.

NEW YEAR'S GREETINGS

Dear Editor and Members: Am sending my best wishes to all for a happy New Year. Wish to thank all who sent me greeting cards. Too many to name each person. The article on gardens sent by Banchee was greatly appreciated. Will leave space this time for all the members to tell of their good resolutions to write often to the Social Corner page in 1931. Good luck. ARIES (April 13).

SNYDER UNDERTAKES THE DIFFICULT TASK OF UNMASKING A CROOK WHOM HE ADMITS TO BE MORE ASTUTE THAN HIMSELF

IT WAS Detective Snyder's third visit to the ornate apartment on the Gold Coast which Mr. F. Cooper maintained.

"So good of you to call," Cooper said smoothly to the detective.

"I'd almost swear that you're glad to see me," said Snyder, half incredulously.

"Always intensely delighted," Cooper declared, with every evidence of sincerity. "You are always most entertaining."

"You got a swell line, Freddy; one of the best I ever heard. But I'll get you yet. I just called to ask you about where you was last night."

"So you ceased to have me, er—trailed last night, after so patiently doing so far * * * well, how long has it been, Snyder?"

"Six weeks," Snyder retorted angrily. "I take the men off you for one night, after six weeks, and that night Mrs. Webber picks out to 'lose' one diamond brooch, in an old-fashioned setting, worth, to hear her yell about it, $20,000."

"Horrid!" laughed Cooper. "How I do sympathize with you, my dear fellow."

"And you got it!" spat out Snyder, walking up to Cooper and staring him very straight in the eye. "Where was you last night? Answer me, quick, or I'll bust you one, even if it costs me my job."

"Don't forget, Snyder," Cooper said soberly, "that I number among my friends in Chicago some very influential people."

"Are you going to tell me where you were last night?" again asked Snyder.

"I certainly am not," Cooper said.

"Why not, if you're on the level?"

"Reasons of sentiment, my dear man."

A strange new light came into Cooper's eyes. He looked at the detective levelly for a moment, then started speaking in a low tone:

"Snyder, let me tell you something. If I were a jewel thief, as you are so deeply persuaded, I could steal right under your very eyes and, as they say in the patois, 'get away with it.'"

SNYDER felt strangely elated of a sudden. There was something very definite and suggestive about the way Cooper had spoken. Something that made him exult. This might be the hole in the armor that he had long sought. Cooper did not drink to excess. He did not make the mistake of running with the wrong kind of women. He did not take any other criminals into his confidence. He was, apparently, impregnable. But his vanity—Snyder had never thought of that until this moment.

"Don't ever make the mistake," Snyder warned, "of giving me a chance to nail you. If you do * * *!" Fearful lest he overdo the thing after such a beautiful start, Snyder gave Cooper one last dirty look and flung out of the apartment. As he descended in the elevator he chuckled to himself.

He had gone to the apartment only with the slender hope that Cooper might lie in giving an alibi. If he had done that, it might have been possible to tangle him up a bit and get him to the point where he'd blurt out something.

But this strain of vanity in the man. If he'd only discovered that long ago. It wouldn't have been so darned hard. Cooper was just about as smooth as they ever came. A hard job for any detective to handle.

Not for one minute, Snyder admitted to himself, did he consider himself really cleverer than Cooper. The man had him beaten a mile when it came to brains; there was no question about that. But there was something, Snyder knew, that operated in favor of "dicks." Something that he had never tried to analyze. He had seen it operate many, many times during his years on the force. Fate, he sometimes loosely called it. Something which was on the side of law and order.

This something, Snyder was confident, sooner or later would operate against Cooper.

Since Cooper had come to town there had been half a dozen serious jewel thefts, of a nature to make Snyder sure there was a new jewel thief in town. And always these thefts had been upon the properties of influential people who raised cain with the department.

That it was Cooper, Snyder hadn't a doubt in the world. He had no real record, but he had been under suspicion in other cities and he had been around where the jewel thefts occurred too often to be completely dissociated from them, considering the suspicions against him in other cities where there had also been a series of jewel thefts shortly after his arrival and which had stopped when he left. He had no visible means of support, but Snyder doubted not that he had rigged up something that would look like it under strict scrutiny. Probably he'd made some sort of arrangements in England to give color of truth to his claim to being the recipient of income from an estate inheritance there.

"Vanity," Snyder kept saying over and over to himself, like a prayer. "Vanity—vanity—vanity." It would be the pinch of his career if he could be the one to hang something definitely upon Cooper.

For a long time after Snyder had gone, Cooper thoughtfully paced the floor of his apartment. A little half smile lit up his handsome face. Few persons, looking at him, would have dreamed that he was a thief.

Frederick Cooper had been born in New York city. On the East Side.

Alone in the world, Frederick had rather a tough time of it. Nobody would ever have guessed that he possessed nothing but a grammar-school education. Early observing that he had a "manner" obviously born into him, he cultivated it; studiously aped the sort of man he hoped to resemble. He read carefully and profited by what he read, with the aid of an extremely retentive mind.

Stealing, it seemed, came as natural to him as the savior-faire manner born in him. Before acting he spent months planning and, as a result, detection had never come, while ability at his chosen craft had increased apace.

When he acquired $200,000, he had always told himself, he'd quit. That sum invested at 6 per cent would bring an income of a thousand a month. A man could live like a gentleman on a thousand a month, regularly; could even marry an exceptional girl and be in a position to rear a family and endow it at death.

The trouble with most criminals, Frederick knew, was that they could never get enough. Now that he had the $200,000 and was 30, he had enough to know it and quit. The Webber business had been the last job. But now something distinctly piqued him.

Never once had there been serious trouble with the authorities. Always he had been careful, in whatever town he was working, to make influential friends before beginning operations.

He never put over a job until he'd been months in a given town. Never sold the loot until many more months.

A laughably simple system, he told himself. A laughably simple tribe, policemen—representative of that whole tribe of smug, sleek, conventional people against whom he had warred successfully since childhood. And most representative of them all this curious Snyder fellow. Naive as a child. Self-confident as a genius.

Against temptation Frederick fought in vain. He was through in America. He had all he wanted. He was "all washed up," as the gutter language had it. Why not this last magnificent gesture of contempt, before going to Europe to laze through the years as an interesting bachelor or perhaps to marry and become the acme of social respectability? Why not the thrill of one last, magnificent gesture! To steal something from under Snyder's very nose.

The temptation was entirely too great for Frederick. He knew that he would never be happy over there in Europe unless he yielded to the temptation of one last, magnificent gesture. The only way to get rid of that temptation permanently was to yield to it. He would yield.

It was all of a week, however, before Frederick was satisfied as to his plans. He went over them many times, to be sure that they were airtight. Completely convinced, at last, of perfection, he chuckled almost continually, thinking of Snyder. Poor Snyder!

He knew precisely what Snyder would do when he got the note. He would surround the Huntington apartment, let him get in, then close in on him after he had got in. Mrs. Huntington was out of town. Mr. Huntington was one of the city's foremost attorneys, with an excellent "stand in" down at the city hall. To steal his wife's necklace of matched pearls would be "just too bad!" as the patois had it. Huntington would raise the very dickens. The necklace, heavily insured, was kept in a wall safe in the Huntington apartment.

Of all the friends he had made in Chicago, Cooper liked Huntington far the best. Really liked the man. Admired his ruthlessness, his realistic candor about himself. It was a shame to worry him that way, but he'd return the necklace before he left for Europe. Huntington would never suspect, but Snyder, when he heard of its return, would fully understand. How it would humble the man!

WITH every exigency provided for Cooper started, when it was dark, walking to the building that contained the Huntington apartment. Arriving before the building he entered, without looking around to note Snyder's men, if they were visible, and took the elevator. The elevator boy remarked, knowing that Huntington often received visits from Frederick:

"Mr. Huntington is not in, sir."

"That so?" said Frederick, frowning. "Well, I'll run up and sit down in the hall on his floor until he comes. I expect he'll be along very shortly." The elevator stopped at the fourteenth floor. Frederick got out. Walked calmly up the hall. It was Huntington's night, he knew, for playing poker at his club. Snyder would probably find him without difficulty and bring him along with him, after receiving the note. Frederick chuckled again.

At this time of the evening most of the tenants of the building had gone out somewhere. The hall, on the fourteenth floor, was perfectly quiet. Frederick smiled to himself as he reflected that unquestionably, on the thirteenth and fifteenth floors detectives waited at the fire-escape, the stairway and the elevator shaft. Escape would be carefully cut off in every direction. Probably Snyder had pulled half the detective bureau's men off their regular assignments to make sure that he didn't escape.

Walking calmly to Huntington's door, he took out a short piece of steel. With gloved hands he inserted it between the door and the coping. Wrenched. It was a messy job of breaking and entering, such as an amateur burglar might have done. In the entryway, inside the apartment, Frederick threw the steel instrument carelessly upon the floor, shut the damaged door and turned on the lights. During his acquaintance with Huntington he had managed to watch the opening of the wall safe, hidden behind a picture in the dining room. He worked the combination without difficulty, with his gloved hands. Huntington had made no attempt to conceal the workings of the combination when he had opened it one night to get some currency before they both started out together for a poker game. Frederick thought of their conversation upon that occasion as he twirled the dial:

"Pretty flimsy little safe, old man; and aren't you afraid I'll learn the combination watching you open it?"

"It better not be flimsy," Huntington replied. "The wife leaves her pearl necklace in it when she goes out of the city. Never takes it along. If you want to make a good haul some time, come up here and open the safe when she's down in Florida or some one of the other fool places she's always running to."

"I will," Frederick answered, smiling. Huntington laughed his appreciation of the joke.

The safe opened, Cooper reached in and secured the box that contained not the real necklace but a paste imitation, made of easily soluble material and strung upon soluble catgut, which he had placed there the night before, when he had entered, using a key he had made from a wax impression he had taken early in his acquaintanceship with Huntington. The necklace which had been in the box the night before Cooper had put into a suitcase, along with the Webber brooch, and checked at a railway station. There were articles of toilet, books and other things in the suitcase which he could identify later, in order to claim the suitcase after having thrown away the tickets. The imitation, soluble necklace he had left in place of the other, the night before, in case Huntington should happen to look into the safe to see if the necklace were safely there.

Stepping swiftly to the bathroom with the soluble necklace, he disposed of it where it would not be found until it had had time completely to disintegrate. This done, he went back to the living room and grinningly waited. How astonished Snyder would be when the necklace was not found upon him nor in the apartment; and he would know it had not been tossed from any of the windows, for he would surely have had the windows watched.

Snyder, he knew, would have been too clever to plant any of his men inside the apartment; he would feel certain that, before undertaking the opening of the safe, the apartment would be carefully searched for the possibility of any one being in it. What fools detectives were! So obvious!

Presently Frederick heard the front door stealthily opened. There were soft footsteps in the hall. Swiftly he turned and bent his gaze upon the open wall safe. He had his back to the door when a familiar voice rang out behind him:

"Well, Cooper, we meet again!" Frederick laughed at the exulting tone of the voice and whirled about, as though in intense surprise, to face Snyder and two other plain-clothes men.

"Why, good evening, Sherlock Holmes," Frederick greeted. "You're just in time. There's been a robbery here."

"Oh, yeh!" answered Snyder, mimicking Frederick's tone. "Oh, Mr. Huntington," Snyder called out. There were footsteps in the hall. Huntington, a portly man of 50, entered gingerly.

Frederick sauntered across the floor, smilingly, to hold out his hand to Huntington, who, after the fraction of a second's hesitation, took it.

"Hello, Charlie," Frederick said easily. "Glad you happened along. I was just going to try to get hold of you." Huntington turned painfully red and stammered:

"Fred! I—I—that is, Snyder said—I told him he was crazy, but he said he had a note tipping him off that you—"

"Snyder does have his eccentric moments," Frederick agreed airily, "but I must say he turned up where needed this time. Or had somebody already put in a call before I got here?"

"What are you doing here?" Huntington asked soberly, "And where's my man?"

"What man?" asked Frederick.

"That fool my wife hired to open the door for guests and shake drinks and give the place a society air."

FREDERICK was momentarily taken aback. Luckily, however, he thought the servant had decided to sneak out somewhere, knowing that Mrs. Huntington was away. Probably he'd done the same thing the night before. It would be too bad if Snyder got the idea that the servant had been a crook and actually perpetrated the robbery—spoil the whole thing. Aloud, Frederick said:

"Haven't seen anything of any servant, old man. Dropped in to see what you were doing tonight. The elevator boy told me, after I'd started up, that you weren't here, but I came right ahead, thinking I'd wait for you. Then, when I got up here, I remembered it was your evening for poker. But the elevator had already gone on. Then I happened to notice that your door was open. I thought that was strange. I came over to investigate and found it had been forced open. I entered and found all of the lights on and the safe in here opened. While I was examining it, and before I had had a chance to phone downstairs, you came in. Now, I suppose, nothing will convince our friend Snyder that I did not rob you of something. I've never told you that he firmly believes me to be a jewel thief—for what reason I do not know, except perhaps that I subsist without either toiling or spinning."

"He said," began Huntington, terribly abashed now, "that—"

"Cut the funny work," Snyder put in. "We got you dead to rights this time, Cooper. You might as well come across with the pearls. I was tipped off that you'd try to pull this tonight. At last, you see, you slipped, just as I told you you would—evidently you've been confiding in some jane or something, and not treating her right, because I got a note from somebody tonight that turned up your job. That's how I came to be here. Been watching for you to come in all along. Had the place surrounded. You see, the game's up."

"Whatever does he mean?" laughed Frederick, turning to the puzzled Huntington.

"Don't mince words with him, Mr. Huntington," Snyder broke in.

"Huntington," Cooper said, with an air of annoyance, "are you going to permit this man to insult me in your rooms?"

"You must be crazy," Huntington declared, turning to Snyder. "His story sounds perfectly all right to me."

"Look into that safe," Snyder suggested. "See if the necklace is there."

Huntington pulled out the contents of the safe * * * some papers and a jewel box.

"Darn! Snyder!" he said excitedly. "The necklace isn't in the safe, and nearly $5,000 in currency I put into it before I went out tonight is gone. I thought I saw a man following me from the bank when I drew out that money. If I'd had an ounce of brains—!"

Frederick started. He tried to conceal the start from Snyder, but Snyder saw it plainly. What, Frederick thought swiftly, could have become of the currency? It hadn't been in the safe when he opened it. Had he opened the safe, for that matter? Come to think of it, he had merely twirled the dial, taking it for granted that it would be locked. He tried to remember whether or not anything about the safe had indicated whether or not it were really locked or just carefully closed. For the first time in his life his nerves were jangling badly. He strove to control them.

"Search Cooper," Snyder ordered. Huntington started to object, but Frederick himself put in swiftly:

"Let's satisfy the idiot, Charlie; let him search me. I demand it, in fact."

ONE of Snyder's assistants stepped behind Frederick. Snyder himself drew Huntington's attention. Presently the detective held up a necklace and a roll of bills. Frederick for once lost his composure. He turned white and knew it * * * knew, also, that it was a fatal thing to do. Evidently the detective had taken the wad of money and the necklace from his own pockets and pretended to find them. A frame-up!

"This is a rotten frame-up of some sort," Frederick said aloud. "Huntington, make them let me see that necklace a moment."

"Let him look at it if he wants to," returned Huntington grimly. Frederick looked closely at the necklace, smiled:

"Just a cheap, imitation pearl necklace that could be bought anywhere for a few dollars. These detectives evidently thought they'd put over some sort of double deal on me or on you."

"The string in the safe was only a cheap imitation," Huntington cut in. "I took to heart what you told me about my safe being flimsy and bought an imitation to keep there. Took the real pearl downtown to a safety deposit vault when my wife left town several days ago. I put an imitation there because, if she came back and wanted the necklace in a hurry, she'd have a fit if it wasn't there."

As the man talked, it seemed to Frederick that he could see a chain of fateful coincidences linking itself about him link by link. Could this be the awful "bad break" sort of thing he had often read of criminals complaining about—an uncanny, almost supernatural linking together of malignant forces toward a criminal's undoing? He had always laughed off such stories, not being superstitious; but now he felt like a luckless fly caught upon a particularly tight web of circumstances. And worse, he knew inwardly that he was rattled as he had never been before. Rattled when he most needed his wits to fence with these officers, working desperately and daringly to "frame" him, convinced as they were that he was a jewel thief and that they would never get him honestly. Determined to rid the city of him even if they had to do it on framed evidence and perjury.

At this juncture one of the officers, who had been looking around the apartment, pulled open a closet door. Such a sight as Frederick had never before seen greeted his eyes. He gasped and felt sick enough to faint. A man, or what had once been a man in servant's livery. The body tumbled out upon the floor, lay not far from him, the head blood-soaked. The sight was more than Frederick could bear. He turned his eyes from it. Always the sight of blood had affected him that way. The other detectives, who had been searching other parts of the apartment, came hurrying in. They gathered around Frederick's chair.

"We got you now, Cooper!" they yelled in fierce triumph. "Murder! How'll you like frying in the electric chair, eh? Pretty boy that you are! What a nice stiff you'll make! ! ! This poor guy came on you when you didn't expect it, and you lost your head and croaked him, eh? Thought you'd talk us out of pinching you and get a chance to get out of here and take it on the lam before we discovered this body, eh?"

DESPERATELY Frederick strove to collect his thoughts, but it was impossible with all talking to him at once. Yelling, shaking their fists in his face, pushing him, jerking him! And that terrible thing down there on the floor, at which he dare not look for fear of collapsing. He appealed, wordlessly, with his eyes to Huntington, but Huntington turned his back. After all, the necklace and the money had apparently been found on him. And probably the necklace was of such a common type, obtainable anywhere, that it could never be proved that it was not the same necklace Huntington had placed in the safe * * * the necklace he had really stolen the night before and not bothered to examine, since he intended returning it some day anyway. These officers hated him enough to frame him into the electric chair. Hated him because he had made fools of them. Luck had played into their hands somehow. Huntington drawing that much money from the bank, being followed home by some criminal—a perfect example of the malignant fate criminals spoke of under the appellation "bum rap."

"Come on," ordered Snyder, "put the cuffs on him; we'll take him downtown and clout him for a while." They started to pull him out of the chair. Frederick knew if they once got him down to the bureau * * * with a charge of murder against him! Murder! That awful-looking thing on the floor! The electric chair! His only chance, he decided, frantic and hysterical almost, his nerve completely gone, was in an appeal to Huntington.

"Wait! Wait!" he almost screamed, completely disorganized now. "I'll confess if you'll let me alone for a minute." The officers stepped back.

"Go ahead and confess if you want to," Snyder urged. "Not that it makes any difference."

"Huntington," Frederick sobbed, "for heaven's sake listen to me. You've got to listen." Huntington walked closer and stood looking down at him attentively. Frederick rushed on lest they start yelling and pulling at him again; rushed on to keep his mind off that awful thing at his feet, the electric chair. "Frying," they called it.

"Listen, Huntington, don't let these men send me to the chair. I did steal your necklace, but I didn't kill your servant." Fearful lest Huntington refuse to heed him, Frederick rushed on, reporting everything.

"What a story!" laughed Snyder when he had finished. "You was going to play a practical joke on the police force. You just came here to play. You were going to send back the necklace; you never even saw any servant! If that isn't the hottest squawk I ever heard—and I thought I'd seen everything!"

"It's true; I swear it," Frederick declared, almost raving now. "You'll find the Webber brooch and the necklace I took out of here last night in a tan suitcase with the initials W R embossed on it in gold checked at the Waller street station. If you think I'm lying, send down there and see. Don't let them electrocute me, please, Huntington—"

"They won't electrocute you, Fred," Huntington said quietly. "The worst you'll get is a few years in jail. I'm going to help you, but I want you to serve a few years. Nothing else, I think, will convince you that if you're going to be crooked you've got to do it within the law. You've got brains, courage, charm—everything; when you've served a stretch you'll see things differently—a man of your type. You'll be able to stage a comeback, whereas if you go on as you have been, you'll end up in the chair sure enough. It was all I could do to believe what Snyder said against you tonight. He had a terrible argument to get me to believe him. I wouldn't have believed it, Fred, if I hadn't just heard your own confession."

"You're clever, Cooper"—Snyder put it mildly—"but give me credit for acting pretty fast myself tonight. Thanks to your leaving me time to get here before you after I received that phony note, which I guessed right away you wrote yourself, as part of a plan to 'steal something right before my eyes.'" As Snyder finished speaking the "corpse" at Frederick's feet got up, wiped off some of the red ink and said:

"Holy smokes! One of you guys slip me a cigarette. If I'd laid there much longer I'd of been a stiff sure enough."

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Jerry Muskrat Moves.

It is experience of age
That gives his wisdom to the sage.
—Old Mother Nature

The news that Jumper the Hare had brought to Stumpy the young Muskrat was speedily taken home. While Stumpy was somewhat disturbed to learn that Little Joe Otter had a slippery slide farther up the Laughing Brook he was not seriously frightened. Still it was important news and he felt that his parents, Jerry Muskrat and Mrs. Jerry, should be told at once. So he bade Jumper farewell and diving, swam under the ice straight to the fine house in which he and one of his sisters were spending the winter with their parents. His mother and sister were out, but Jerry was at home. Stumpy repeated what he had heard from Jumper the Hare.

To Stumpy's surprise Jerry Muskrat seemed very much disturbed. "I don't like this. I don't like it a bit," said Jerry. "I don't mind having Little Joe about in summer, when food is plentiful and easy to get, but I don't want him for a neighbor in winter. If he has a slippery slide up the Laughing Brook he will be paying the Smiling Pool a visit one of these days, and I for one would rather not be at home when he does. It looks to me as if we must move and the sooner we do it the better."

"Move!" cried Stumpy. "Where under the sun will we move to?"

When the four squeezed into it they were rather crowded

"We won't move under the sun," replied Jerry with a twinkle in his eyes. "We'll move under the ice."

"Well, where under the ice will we move to?" demanded Stumpy.

Just then Mrs. Jerry came in and was at once informed of Little Joe Otter's presence on the Laughing Brook. "We must move at once," she declared. "The sooner the better."

"That is what I have told Stumpy," said Jerry. "There is no knowing when Little Joe Otter may take it into his head to visit the Smiling Pool and the fact that it is covered with ice will make no difference. If he should happen to be very hungry I would rather not be around."

Just then Stumpy's sister, a somewhat headstrong young Muskrat, came in and was told the news. "But I don't want to move," she declared.

"It is sometimes wisest to do things we do not want to do," said Jerry mildly.

"But this fellow never comes here at all. Even if he does he may not so much as look at one of us," protested the young Muskrat.

"True enough, he may not. On the other hand he may. So I think we will move and we will waste no time about it," declared Jerry.

"Where will we move to?" Stumpy asked again.

"To the hole in the bank beneath the Big Hickory Tree," replied Jerry. "As you know, the hall from the water up to the bedroom passes between some roots that no one larger than ourselves can squeeze between. We'll be safe there from Little Joe Otter."

Stumpy's sister turned up her nose. "That old place!" she exclaimed. "We'll be crowded to death there."

"Better to be a little crowded than to have room to spare in Little Joe Otter's stomach," retorted Jerry. "Come on now. When we know that Little Joe Otter has left these parts we'll move back to this house."

So with Jerry leading the way and Mrs. Jerry bringing up the rear, the four Muskrats swam under the ice to the hole in the bank under the Big Hickory Tree that grew on the bank and over the Smiling Pool. The bedroom was well back and not far beneath the grass roots. It hadn't been dug for so many and when the four squeezed into it they were rather cramped. But as Jerry said, "they would sleep all the warmer for that." Only Stumpy's sister made objections. She grumbled and complained and declared that it was all foolishness any way.

According to the budget the state of Connecticut will require $83,214,261 with which to carry on its business for the next two years. The budget represents an increase of $7,974,664 over the actual expenditures of 1929-1930 and the estimated expenditures for 1930-31.

The budget includes an estimated expenditure of $44,356,651 for 1931-1932 and $38,857,610 for 1932-1933, as compared with actual expenditures of $35,090,736 in 1929-1930 and estimated expenditures of $40,148,861 for 1930-1931.

The ordinary recurring expenses and fixed charges for 1931-1932 are $24,363,809, while for 1932-1933 they are estimated as $25,263,706, total of $49,827,315, an increase of $5,384,811 over the 1929-1931 biennium. So, too, the estimated capital outlays is increased over the two years ending next June, the total being $33,386,746, which is an increase of $2,589,853 over the $30,796,893 total for the current biennium.

Mystic Oral School

For the Mystic Oral school the board recommends $275,000 for new building and $46,754 for new equipment, a total of $321,754. The new building for administrative offices, schoolrooms and teachers' quarters will replace an old frame building which is a fire hazard.

The board points out that appropriations amounting to $120,900 for permanent improvements are available to the Seaside sanatorium at Niantic, but owing to the difficulties experienced in trying to acquire additional much needed land no major improvements have been undertaken. The situation with respect to acquiring additional lands has received wide publicity and the board feels requires no additional explanation, but in this connection recommends that the state comptroller be authorized by a special act to draw his warrant on the state treasurer for such amount as the state may be required to pay for the land, by court award, under condemnation proceedings, and that the state treasurer be authorized to honor such warrant.

The present financial condition of the general fund is such as to permit carrying forward the institution building program much more rapidly than could have been expected two years ago.

The expediting of the building program is extremely desirable, not only to enable the state to meet the demands for increased accommodations at the institutions, but to furnish employment on public works in a period of depression.

Apart from the question of adhering to the long established policy with respect to borrowing, the present is no time to recommend improvements which would involve going into debt, and increasing taxation to provide for interest and sinking fund requirements.

At the present time there are forty-six children on the waiting list for admission to tuberculosis sanitaria, 34, at Meriden and 12 for Seaside. There are approximately 60 at Undercliff who should be receiving treatment at Seaside. There are also on the waiting list 125 women and 181 men, a total of 306 adults. The recommended appropriations include fireproof infirmary at Cedarcrest to cost $160,000, 100 beds; fireproof infirmary at Seaside, cost $180,000, 100 beds; two fireproof infirmary buildings at Uncas-on-Thames, cost $320,000, 200 beds. The increase in the capacity of the sanitaria necessitates additions to the service facilities for which appropriations are recommended.

With relation to special education provisions for sub-normal children, the board recommends the following legislation:

That for the purposes of the act, educationally exceptional children shall be children mentally below normal but whose mental age shall not be below five years, and such that their intelligence quotient as shown by an individual test shall be between forty-five and seventy-five, both as may be determined or approved by the state board of education.

That the school committee or board of education of each town, city, or district in the state, or the county commissioners in county temporary homes for children, may establish classes for educationally exceptional children and may qualify for state aid in the sum of $50 a year for each pupil in average daily attendance for a full year, and a proportionate amount for each pupil in attendance for a less number of days in a class for educationally exceptional children, provided that not more than twenty pupils shall be registered in any such class at any one time, and provided further, that the total amount to be paid for each such class shall not exceed the annual salary of the teacher of such class.

That the secretary of the state board of education shall certify annually to the state comptroller the amount due from the state treasury to each board of education, town school committee, or board of county commissioners, that has qualified for state aid under the provisions of this act, and the comptroller shall draw his warrants on the treasury for the amounts so certified.

For Road Improvement

The noteworthy feature of the highway commissioner's budget is the proposed provision for state aid for rural roads in the sum of $1,000,000 a year. An annual appropriation of this amount for rural roads from the highway fund is strongly recommended.

It is also recommended that legislation be enacted similar to the law now providing the allocation and expenditure of funds for the state aid highway system, but that the towns be required to pay one-third the cost of completed projects, on the understanding that an amount equal to the sum of all the amounts so paid in each fiscal year, shall be added in the next fiscal year to the basic appropriation of $1,000,000. The state should bear the cost of all engineering inspecting, and accounting work involved, and the board so recommends.

The diversion of the amount recommended from other highway purposes involves a readjustment of the commissioner's highway program, which it is hoped can be effected without detriment to the best interest of the state.

MARSHAL JOFFRE LAPSED INTO COMA LAST EVENING

French Hero of the First Battle of the Marne is Fighting a Losing Battle Against Death—Practically All Hope For the 78 Year Old Soldier Has Been Abandoned—The Aged Man is Suffering From Arthritis—Gangrene Set In and Necessitated Amputation of the Left Leg Last Week

PARIS, Dec. 28—(AP)—Marshal Joffre, hero of the first battle of the Marne, was fighting a losing battle against death tonight.

The 78-year-old soldier lapsed into a coma this evening, said a member of his staff who declared practically all hope of recovery has been abandoned.

At 7:30 p. m., Drs. Leriche and Boulin declared his condition remained "stationary," but an official announcement a few hours earlier said he was slowly weakening. In their usual guarded manner they admitted a slight improvement that had set in this morning had not been maintained.

This morning bulletin had revived hope among prominent Frenchmen and members of the diplomatic service who called at the Hospital St. Jean-De-Dieu. But as the day wore on and the more alarming bulletins were issued in the afternoon, late visitors emerged from the clinic with sad faces.

General Weygand and Alexander Millerand, former president of France, and Mme. Millerand were admitted to the bedside this morning and said on leaving that Marshal Joffre had recognized them. Other morning callers who, however, were not admitted to the bedside, were Mme. Poincare, who called in the name of her husband, who likewise is ill, General Gouraud, and Deputy Manaut, who carried greetings from the town of Rivesaltes, Joffre's birthplace near Perpignan.

Colonel Jean Fabry, who was Joffre's aide-de-camp for the first three years of the war and accompanied the marshal on his visit to the United States in 1917, spoke with him for a few moments during the morning.

"His alert mind is still functioning admirably," he said. "His keen blue eyes, with an expression of such intelligent kindness that all those who approach him could never forget, still radiate good will and cheer."

The marshal was surrounded by his wife and daughter until 4 p. m., when the doctors asked Mme. Lafilet to leave her mother alone with the patient. On emerging Mme. Lafilet was in tears and said: "We fear another crisis, which may be fatal."

From that hour until dark there was a continual stream of eminent callers. Among them were Premier Theodore Steeg, Minister of the Interior Leygues, Generals Guillaumat, Debeney and Nollet, former Queen Amelie of Portugal, Norman Armour, American charge d'affaires; Phillippe Roy, Canadian minister, and Mme. La Marechale Foch. None were admitted to the bedside. Strict orders from the physicians were that the wife alone was to be admitted to the sickroom.

As the evening hours wore on large crowds gathered in the Rue Oudinot. They spoke in low tones and many of them offered prayers.

Forces of police were increased to prevent crowds from getting too close to the hospital. Traffic was diverted from the Rue Oudinot toward the Boulevard Invalides and Rue Grenelle, a few blocks away, where a few months ago that other great soldier of France, Marshal Foch, breathed his last.

"Marshals of France all fight their last battle within the shadow of the Napoleonic Dome of the Invalides," one grizzled soldier said.

Later the marshal's daughter returned to the sickroom, and when she emerged shortly after nine o'clock she said her father had lucid intervals alternating with unconsciousness. She felt that he was very slightly improved from his condition in the late afternoon.

The thousands outside the hospital marveled at the vitality of the aged soldier, who is suffering from arterritis. This is a disease which results in inflammation of the arteries, and when gangrene threatened Marshal Joffre's left leg was amputated above the knee a week ago yesterday.

Physicians felt that the other leg also should be removed, but feared to risk the operation because of the veteran soldier's weakened condition.

POSSES SEARCHING FOR THE GIBSON BROTHERS

SALEM, Ind., Dec. 28.—(AP)—County officers and citizens, aroused by the storming of the jail here last night by four brothers attempting to gain custody of two men accused of the feud slaying of their father, Patton Gibson, organized posses today, captured Gilfred Gibson, 38, one of the four, and continued their dogged search tonight for the two others.

Otis Gibson, the youngest brother, was killed in an exchange of shots with Elmer Gerald, Salem town marshal, and the officer was seriously wounded. Gerald, in a hospital at New Albany, was reported improving after an operation this morning. A bullet pierced his abdomen.

Sheriff Milton Trinkle was wounded in the knee and his wife, Ida, a deputy, was shot in the thigh when they refused to deliver the keys to the cell in which John and Pleas Spurlock were being held for the alleged slaying of Patton Gibson two weeks ago.

Although armed when three automobile loads of officers and members of the American Legion surrounded his home, Gilfred Gibson surrendered peacefully. Meanwhile, another posse continued its search for Dan and Alonzo Gibson, reported in another part of the county.

SEES NEED OF NEW INDUSTRY TO RELIEVE UNEMPLOYMENT

HARTFORD, Dec. 28.—(AP)—Prof. William B. Bailey, economist of the Travelers Insurance company, today said that a new industry was needed to relieve unemployment, which he attributed in part to factors beyond the control of business.

Listing the influx of farm workers into cities as one of the factors responsible for the present unemployment problem, Professor Bailey said: "During the last ten years agriculture has released about 400,000 workers annually, and between three and four million fewer persons live today on farms than ten years ago. Industry, trade and transportation have been forced to find jobs for all these persons."

The unemployment problem would be less severe, he said, if agriculture was caring for the persons that it has turned to the cities.

"After every previous period of hard times in this country as far back as 1837," he said, "we have had some industry that began to absorb the workers, first digging canals, then building railroads, then the automobile industry. What we need more than anything else is a new industry."

In five of last night's holdups, one of which resulted in the shooting and wounding of a storekeeper, three bandits, all armed, participated either in the actual commission of the crime or in the subsequent escape of the bandits.

Following last night's wave of lawlessness, Chief Philip T. Smith, of the local police, ordered patrolmen to adopt any methods whatsoever in curbing the current activities of gunmen.

N. D. Capitol Building Destroyed By Fire

Practically All Of[illegible]l Documents Were [illegible]med by the Flam[illegible]gin of Fire Unkn[illegible]

BIS[illegible] N. D., Dec. 28.—(AP)—The N[illegible]akota capitol building was dest[illegible]ed by fire today.

Practically all of the official records, files and historical documents of the state were consumed by the flames, which started on the upper floor of the four-story brick building, spread rapidly, and destroyed the main structure and both wings.

State affairs were thrown into turmoil and Governor George F. Shafer issued a call for an immediate meeting of all state officials to consider the situation.

The capitol was erected in 1884, when North and South Dakota were one unit of government under the title of "Dakota Territory." The two wings were added in 1890 and 1904.

Although the monetary loss is not expected to exceed $600,000, the damage caused by destruction of the records was described as "incalulable."

"Loss of the records will result in the greatest confusion in the state's history and years will lapse before it is untangled," Governor Shafer said.

The original copy of the state constitution was among the few papers saved. Secretary of State Robert Byrne brought it out of his office and was slightly burned and cut in his effort. He was the only casualty.

Among the papers lost are the records of about $55,000,000 worth of investments in the state land department and the records of $40,000,000 in the state treasurer's office. State highway department officials estimated that it will cost from $200,000 to $300,-000 to replace thir plans.

Origin of the fire was not determined.

ESCAPED DEATH SENTENCE CONVICT CAPTURED IN TROY

TROY, N. Y., Dec. 28.—(AP)—Charles Fithian, 22, who escaped from the Salem, N. J., county jail last Monday night several hours after he had been sentenced to die in the electric chair for the slaying of a paymaster during a holdup, was captured here today.

Fithian is held for extradition to New Jersey. Officials said he would be sent directly to the state prison at Trenton.

He was captured in a rooming house on the lower East Side by five officers to whom he surrendered without a struggle. Police refused to say how they got the information which led to the arrest.

Although New Jersey police believed a girl who had visited him in the Salem jail shortly before the escape had aided him in his flight, Fithian was alone when captured.

He was sentenced for the slaying of J. William McCausland, paymaster of the Salem Glass company, in a holdup Oct. 27.

Peter Giardano, who had been sentenced a few weeks earlier in connection with the holdup, told police he and Fithian had planned to escape from the Salem jail together, but that Fithian had double-crossed him.

30,000 CHINESE MASSACRED DURING LAST TWO MONTHS

SHANGHAI, Dec. 28.—(AP)—Delayed Chinese dispatches from Lanchow said today that at least 30,000 Chinese in northwestern Kansu province had been massacred during the last two months by roving armies of Mohammedans attempting to start a revolution against the Chinese government.

The dispatches said the Mohammedans were again seeking to obliterate all evidence of Chinese encroachments in that far western province of China by massacring recklessly burning towns and laying waste to the countryside. Two years ago the Mohammedans in opposing Chinese authority in Kansu went on the warpath and pillaged, looted and murdered uncounted thousands of Chinese with mediaeval cruelty.

Soviet Govt. Charges $5 Pound For Butter

"Open Shops" in Moscow For Outcast Classes—Ham At $4.50 a Pound—Apples $1 a Pound

MOSCOW, Dec. 28.—(AP)—The Soviet government has gone into business in competition with the fast-disappearing private trader in an effort to extract elusive rubles from the pockets of the outcast classes who are excluded from the co-operative stores.

Tyenty-five "open shops" have been opened in Moscow by the commissariat of supply where anyone may buy anything available at any time — at a price. These shops are stocked with food and clothing and practically everything to be found in the co-operatives, which kulaks (former land owners), clergymen and former aristocrats are prohibited from patronizing.

Here, however, are the prices: Butter, $5 a pound; rice, $1.25 a pound; cheese, $6 a pound; smoked sausage, $6 a pound; a head of cabbage, $1; apples, $1 a pound; potatoes, 25 cents a pound; smoked fish, $5 a pound; and ham, $4.50 a pound.

At these prices it might seem customers would be few, but the largest shop today was crowded with eager purchasers, many of them even standing in line for various commodities. Where the money comes from is somewhat of a mystery, but there is a faint suspicion that the outcast classes still have some funds and jewels concealed for a rainy day. Also many receive funds from friends and relatives abroad.

In addition to the Moscow shops, several have been opened in Leningrad. All are of an experimental nature and if they prove successful others probably will be opened in other cities. While the prices are high, they are lower than those asked by the private dealers and expectations are they will force the private merchant to lower his prices or eventually quit business.

APPENDICITIS FATAL TO DANNEMORA PRISON KEEPER

PLATTSBURG, N. Y., Dec. 28.—(AP)—Life has left the mailed fist of Dannemora. Asael J. Granger, principal keeper of the dread prison, is dead.

Granger died here last night at the age of 40, after an operation for appendicitis.

As principal keeper of "The Siberia of New York," Granger was widely known as a severe disciplinarian. Since the riot of July 22, 1929, when desperate convicts tried unsuccessfully to kill him. Granger had kept more than 150 of the mutineers in solitary confinement.

A force of nearly 200 uniformed guards was under his direction at the prison. Since the 1929 riot the prison population has been at high tension. At one time machine guns were mounted in the mess hall. During all this time Granger had to work inside the walls, in constant contact with the most ruthless and treacherous of the state's bad men. Friends said his health finally was undermined by the strain.

BURMESE REBELS IN FORTIFIED POSITIONS

RANGOON, Burma, Dec. 28.—(AP)—The government's expedition of 1,000 trained troops against raiding Burmese rebels in the Tharawaddy district is expected to be confronted with a difficult task as the natives have established themselves in strongly fortified positions.

Reports received here are they have plenty of ammunition and guns and have taken up a position behind five miles of impenetrable jungle. They are said to have skilfully strengthened their position by the erection of strong barriers of felled trees and a highly developed scout system has been organized to prevent them from being taken by surprise.

The raiding rebels, estimated at more than a thousand, have looted villages and have killed a number of police.

The chief secretary of the Burma government in a telegram to all deputy commissioners in the province accuses the rebels of murder, looting and destruction.

BOARH AND NORRIS TO STICK TO THE REPUBLICAN PARTY

Of Course Neither Senator is Satisfied With the G. O. P., But Both Are Aware That a Third Party Would Lack Strength—President is Holding Aloof From the Republican Battle—Representative Wood Declares Norris Now is Assuming to Be a Dictator to the Democratic Party

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28.— (AP) — Talk of a third party was belittled today by Senator Borah of Idaho, a leader of the senate independents, but he spoke significantly of realignments, particularly in legislative matters.

Senator Borah said he saw no possibility of a single new party or group of leaders satisfying the constituency of such issues as power, prohibition and farm relief.

"I do not see any new party," he commented as the republican storm over the right of Senator Norris of Nebraska to the party's label continued, "but I do see some realignments which will be evidenced more in legislative matters than in open announcements upon the part of either leaders or constituents. That has already taken place to a marked degree."

The Idahoan's pronouncement and a fresh notice today by Senator Norris that he was not getting out of the party nor organizing a new one caused republican leaders to look ahead to the 1932 national convention.

Representative Wood of Indiana today revived the attempt of some republican regulars to divest Norris of the party's mantle. In a statement issued through the republican national committee he asserted the Nebraskan has promised support for the democrats in 1932 if they nominate a "progressive."

Senator Norris replied he had not promised to support Governor Roosevelt of New York should he be renominated by the democrats in 1932 for presidency and he reasserted his own republicanism.

Senator Borah made the following comment on the current discussion over formation of a third party:

"My observation and my reading leads me to the opinion that new parties cannot be successfully organized by a few men or by a few leaders, however able and sincere they may be. New parties have to come up from the grass roots. It takes some single dominating issue accompanied by a dramatic crisis to swing people from their old political moorings and place them in new positions.

"There are at least four or five vital issues before our people and a new party could not agree upon a platform on all of them any more than can the old parties. Take power, prohibition, farm relief, and the duty of the state and the duty of the nation with reference to at least two great problems. Who will write the platform that will weld together not a few leaders but weld together constituencies throughout the country? . . . There are two things about which I do not feel deeply moved—first, a few men reading somebody out of a party and secondly, a few men organizing a new party."

The drive against Senator Norris initiated by Robert H. Lucas, executive director of the republican national committee, and supported vigorously by Representative Wood, chairman of the republican congressional committee, still seemed dealocked tonight.

Norris has refused to head a third party and has declined to get out of the republican party. Other senate independents likewise have given notice they will vote with the republicans again on organization and will retain their party label—whatever may be the effect 18 months hence in the national convention.

President Hoover is still holding aloof from the republican battle and Joseph R. Nutt, treasurer of the republican national committee, is awaiting an opology from Chairman Nye of the senate campaign funds committee, for terming a $40,000 fund of the party in the last campaign a "slush fund."

The endorsement Senator Norris gave yesterday to Governor Roosevelt's attitude on the power issue provoked considerable discussion today. Others of the senate republican independent wing hastened to state privately they were not endorsing Governor Roosevelt as a democratic nominee in 1932 against Herbert Hoover.

Representative Wood said:

"Just what Senator Norris will do in 1932 if the democrats fail to heed his warnings can only be left to conjecture as he already has declined Dr. John Dewey's request to again transfer his political allegiance and become the presidential candidate of a third party."

Senator Norris said:

"Some newspaper articles published today based upon an interview which I had yesterday gave the impression that I intended to support Governor Roosevelt for president in 1932. I regret this, for I made no such statement. I have said nothing upon which such a conclusion could be based.

"In the presence of a score of reputable Washington correspondents I expressed my admiration for Governor Roosevelt as a man and expressed my general agreement with him on the power issue. I made that statement in response to the direct question of whether I should support Governor Roosevelt if he were nominated for president on the democratic ticket in 1932.

"I stated specifically that I had not made up my mind whom I would support for president in 1932; that the nominations had not been made; that I am a republican, and I believe a good republican, and it is not part of my business to nominate a democrat for the presidency."

Wood, after scanning the newspaper interviews, gave his statement asserting that Norris "now is assuming to be a dictator to the democratic party."

"Although he campaigned for office only last month as a republican and was elected as such," Wood said, "he throws off the republican mantle and proceeds to dictate to the democratic party whom it shall and shall not nominate under its banner in the next campaign as it did in 1928. Does anybody need any better proof that he is not a republican and obtained his reelection under false colors?

"The democratic leaders are warned by this political chameleon that they must not nominate Owen D. Young of New York because there is a deeplaid and sinister plot of the 'power trust' to bring about Mr. Young's nomination," he added.

"On the other hand the democratic leaders are promised that if they will nominate some 'progressive' who sees eye to eye with Senator Norris on great public questions they can count on him to beat the political tom toms for them again."

SENATOR NYE CAUSTIC IN REPLY TO JOSEPH R. NUTT

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Dec. 28.—(AP)—Senator Gerald P. Nye of North Dakota today issued what he termed his "response" to demands of Joseph R. Nutt, treasurer of the republican national committee; for a public apology for remarks attributed to Nye in regard to an alleged campaign "slush fund."

The statement, given out on his arrival here this morning, said:

"It is barely possible that further investigation may reveal that the $40,000 was not a slush fund. However, the committee already has as a part of its record testimony that the money was on deposit as security for other funds which were used for baseless and shameful purposes in connection with the fight centering around Senator Norris of Nebraska."

Senator Nye was asked if he had any statement to make regarding Nutt's direct demand for a public apology.

"That is my apology," he responded.

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 28.—(AP)—Elias Abbas has executed his once-cherished parrot in the presence of the police, and tranquility reigns once more in the Abbas' household.

Elias is a Turkish peddler and liked his parrot, which always had treated him very friendly and companion-like. But on returning from his last trip to the state of Michoacan, the parrot greeted him with a cold distant stare, and then squawked derisively "Pancho Lindo," ("nice Frank").

Elias flew into a rage, and began to beat his wife, Raquel Casim, demanding to know all about Frank. A policeman stepped in and took man, wife and parrot to police headquarters where Colonel Casimiro Talamente heard Elias' story. The colonel investigated and found "Frank" was a parrot vender, the original owner of the bird.

Elias promptly twisted the parrot's neck beyond repair, and made up with his wife.

FIRE REVEALS LIQUOR DISTILLING PLANT; OWNER IS ARRESTED

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Dec. 27. — Wasyl Twonczyk, a resident of the North Windham-Mansfield Hollow road near King's bridge, was taken into custody tonight to be charged with violations of the liquor laws after a fire at his farm that leveled a barn, exposing to view an elaborate liquor plant. The fire started about 10 o'clock this morning, destroying the barn and an adjoining poultry shed, causing a loss estimated at about $3,000, this not including the destruction of the liquor mill.

An investigation was conducted by State Policeman Thomas Abbott of the Stafford Springs barracks and Chief Stanton L. Briggs of the Connecticut Prohibition enforcement department. In the smoldering ruins the bulky shapes of two or three large vats, one believed to be a re-distilling vat of about 1,000 gallon capacity, stood out prominently.

The Twonczyk home was raided a few years ago, a quantity of beer being taken from the place at that time. The plant has been estimated at values ranging from $3,000 to $5,000 for installation costs and its size indicated that it could produce in large quantities. It is expected that one of the charges to be lodged against Twonczyk will be that of manufacturing.
